ITALY AND TURKEY AT WAR

GERMAN FIRMS IN U. S. BOUND BY ALIEN LAW?

World Says Teuton Envoy Warned Company of Its Penal Liability.

INVOLVES MUNITIONS.

The New York World today resumes the publication of the mass of evidence—documentary and otherwise—which it has collected, bearing on German activities in the United States since the beginning of the war.

The evidence as collected by the World is being published in a new series of articles which are fully protected under the copyright laws, and republication without permission is forbidden. "The Tribune" presents herewith for the information of its readers the first article of the new series as the World has formulated it.

A reply to the charges made will be published as received from competent sources.

New York, Aug. 21.—The World today presents evidence that in furtherance of its propaganda, the German empire sought to substitute in this country the criminal laws of the fatherland for those of the United States government.

This evidence is contained in nine documents passing between the German ambassador to the United States, Dr. George Stobbe, the imperial consul general at Philadelphia, members of the firm of Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company, a concern operating under the laws of the American government; Prince Von Hatzfeldt, chancellor of the German embassy, and Attorney S. Walter Kaufmann of No. 60 Wall street, New York City.

Holds German Code Effective.

The letters indicate that Dr. Stobbe warned the firm of Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company that if it accepted and filled orders in this country for supplies of any sort to the nations at war with Germany, each offense would be punishable in accordance with the provisions of the "Gesetzbuch" (penal code) of Germany, and not of the United States, by from three to ten years' imprisonment in a penitentiary or military fortress.

The German consul general in a communication, copies of which were sent to the German ambassador, Count von Bernstorff, and Dr. Albert, the "Geheimrath" (privy councilor), then suggested:

"That you are in position to delay the delivery of the order to the prejudice of the hostile country ordering them, will in no measure relieve you from liability."

CHAPTER I.

The substitution of the German penal code (Gesetzbuch) for the laws of the United States of America is revealed by eight communications in possession of the World. The authors of these communications are:

COUNT JOHANN VON BERNSTORFF, imperial German ambassador to the United States.

PRINCE HATZFELDT, chancellor of the German embassy to the United States.

DR. STOBBE, imperial German consul at Philadelphia.

Germans Destroy British "Diver" on Neutral Rocks

E-13 in Danish Waters Loses Part of Crew in Shell Fire.

ACT ROILS DANES

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Destruction of the British submarine E-13, which grounded early yesterday on Saltohrim island, was announced by the admiralty late today in a statement declaring German submarines violated Danish neutral waters in an attack on a disabled British undersea boat. Part of the crew was rescued.

Commander Layton of the submarine reported that the E-13 went aground early Thursday and that all efforts to refloat the vessel failed. A Danish torpedo boat patrolling the nearby coast hailed the disabled submarine and notified Commander Layton that the vessel must be floated within twenty-four hours, or the crew would be interned and the submarine held.

Danish Boats to Rescue.

Subsequently three Danish torpedo boats anchored close to the grounded craft to aid its crew if the floating operations proved unsuccessful.

"At 9 o'clock in the morning," said the admiralty statement, "two German destroyers approached the E-13. One fired a torpedo at the disabled vessel, but it hit the sea bottom. The German vessel also fired its guns at the British submarine, and within a short time the craft was afire fore and aft.

"Unable to defend himself or his vessel, Commander Layton ordered the crew to abandon the submarine. The Germans fired at the crew while they were in the water.

"The Danish vessels finally cruised between the German destroyers and the survivors of the E-13, forcing the attacking vessels to cease their fire and withdraw."

Arouses Danish Nation.

The Copenhagen correspondent of Reuter's Telegram company sends the following dispatch regarding the sinking of the British submarine E-13:

"The destruction of the British submarine E-13 in Danish territory by German destroyers, under circumstances which placed the shipwrecked craft under Danish protection, has aroused widespread indignation which finds expression in the Danish newspapers. It is urged that there can be no explanation or plausible excuse for the deliberate violation of Danish territory, as a German torpedo boat had thoroughly investigated the locality before returning with the others to attack the defenseless crew.

"German War Methods."

"The Vort Land says:

"'There can be no question that the German commander was aware he was violating Danish neutrality. The incident is simply in accordance with German methods throughout the whole war.'

"The Koebenhaven says:

"'We received the news with deep pain that fourteen sailors of a friendly nation lost their lives, not even in unequal combat, but without the faintest chance of defending themselves.'

"The Journal Hovedestaven publishes a rumor that one Danish torpedo boat had a man wounded and its wireless damaged by German shells."

Sweden Denounces Attack.

STOCKHOLM, via London, Aug. 21.—The Swedish press unanimously denounces the German attack on the British submarine E-13 in Danish waters, characterizing it as an unpardonable infringement of Danish neutrality.

WILSON GIVES FULL HEARING TO GERMANY

Will Not Decide on Arabic Until Berlin Explains Its Stand.

WANTS ALL REPORTS.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—Reasonable doubt as to conditions surrounding the sinking of the White Star liner Arabic has decided the Washington government to proceed with deliberation in its purpose to fix responsibility for the loss of at least two American lives and the jeopardizing of a score of others.

Therefore Germany will be given an opportunity to explain this last sea tragedy and, if possible, to show whether conditions justified the German submarine commander in sinking the liner in apparent disregard of the solemn protest of the United States government against the destruction of merchant vessels bearing American passengers without proper warning and opportunity for succor.

Lansing Visits Wilson.

President Wilson and Secretary Lansing conferred today on the Arabic situation with the text of the two messages from Ambassador Page at London before them, giving details of the destruction of the ship as far as they have been gathered from American survivors.

The ambassador and consular officials in England have been instructed to supplement their reports with all available information referring upon the physical results of the tragedy.

The reports will be studied carefully, but in the meantime the German statement will be sought.

Inquiry by Gerard.

Ambassador Gerard at Berlin will be instructed to look to the German government for an explanation of the sinking of the Arabic, or at least for a statement of the facts so far as they have been reported to the admiralty by the submarine commander. That this might take a fortnight is realized from the fact that the German admiralty has heretofore declared that it could communicate with submarines on the ocean lanes only with difficulty and often it was necessary to await their return to home ports.

It is recalled that so far the state department has been unable to procure reports from the German foreign office in the case of the Orduna, shelled more than a fortnight ago, and the same delay has been experienced in the Leelanaw and Nebraskan cases.

Must Give Berlin Time.

Notwithstanding the possibility of delay, it has been decided that in a matter of such gravity and importance the amities of diplomatic intercourse, as well as a sense of justice, require that the German government be given full opportunity to present its side of the case before the action to be taken by the United States is determined upon.

Some officials thought there were inconsistencies in the statements of some of the survivors as to what actually took place.

They also noted the action of British news censors in suppressing press dispatches dealing with details of the tragedy as an indication that there might be some condition surrounding the sinking of the Arabic which might materially qualify first judgment passed upon the work of the German submarine commander.

Official Dispatches Brief.

At any rate, official dispatches today referred only to the casualty list and threw no light on the features of the tragedy, on which the state department seeks information.

Considering the state department's order yesterday to the vice consul at Queenstown to secure affidavits from all of the American passengers and, if possible, from the officers of the Arabic, some disappointment was expressed that so far only one such affidavit had been forthcoming in the form of a statement from Mrs. Zella Covington, which was not complete.

Dunsley Sinking a Factor.

The connection between the Dunsley and the Arabic may be of supreme importance, officials say. In this connection one of the chief legal experts of the navy department, who specializes in international law as applied to marine matters, said:

"The Arabic had a perfect right to proceed to the relief of the passengers and crew of the Dunsley if the latter had ap-

The Empty Room or Lost U-5004 $12,000 Mystery

Alexander Rechintzer Phones Home as Police of Two Cities Seek.

MOE LEVIN, THE HERO

If it had happened in the pages of a yellow back there probably would have been a picture on the cover of an automobile rushing through the night at a speed of ninety miles an hour and a bag of gold labeled $12,000. The title would read something like this: "The Great Chicago Auto Kidnaping, or Held for $12,000 Ransom." And thus it happened right here in Chicago.

CHAPTER 1.
Swallowed in the Night.

Alexander Rechintzer, an advertising man, who brought his family here from Kansas City on July 2, visited friends in South Park avenue Thursday night with his wife. They returned to their apartment at 5835 Prairie avenue, where Rechintzer left his wife and started for a garage at Sixty-first street and South Park avenue to leave his car. It was 10:30 when his car purred away from the apartment building. Mrs. Rechintzer waited. Eleven o'clock came; midnight; 1 o'clock. Rechintzer had not returned.

Mrs. Rechintzer called up the garage. Rechintzer had not been there!

CHAPTER II.
The Mysterious Phone Call.

The police searched in vain all day Friday for the missing machine and its driver. Yesterday Moe Levin, a wholesale jeweler at 337 Madison street, and friend of Rechintzer, received an anonymous telephone call. Rechintzer, stated the mysterious voice, was being held in Kansas City and $12,000 would be necessary to liberate him. Levin asked why $12,000 was necessary.

"To cover an embezzlement," said the hollow voice.

CHAPTER III.
The Empty Room.

Levin went to the detective bureau with the story of the "kidnaping." Lieut. Ben Enright got into long distance communication with Chief of Police L. L. Ghent of Kansas City. While he was talking another anonymous call came to the bureau.

"Rechintzer is being held in Room 831 of the Scarritt building in Kansas City," was the message.

Chief Ghent was notified and detectives were sent to the office. Finally the answer came.

"Our men have just got back from the Scarritt building," said Chief Ghent. "They found room 831 locked and broke open the door and——"

"Yes?" asked Lieut. Enright eagerly.

"——And the room was empty!"

CHAPTER IV.
A Woman Speaks.

"Things are coming too fast for me to fathom," exclaimed the lieutenant, mopping his brow. Levin went home, and there a reporter found him. He knew no more than he had told the police, he said. A reporter hurried to the Rechintzer home. A woman came to the door.

"There is nothing to this kidnaping story," she said. "Mr. Rechintzer was not kidnaped. He has come back home. You newspapers go away and I'll attend to him!"

"What—what——" gasped the reporter. The door slammed. The reporter started away. A figure brushed past him. It was Levin entering the Rechintzer flat.

CHAPTER V.
Levin Again.

The reporter went to the Levin home at 5711 Calumet avenue. Levin returned. "Rechintzer is in Kansas City," he said. "We know where he is and that he is well and unharmed. I never got any anonymous telephone call saying he had been kidnaped or demanding a $12,000 ransom. Rechintzer himself called up to let his wife know where he was. Besides that I don't know any more about the case than you do."

Back to Lieut. Enright fled the reporter.

"Looks to me as if some private detectives took matters into their own hands," he said.

CHAPTER VI.
The Message.

The Rechintzer flat was barricaded and no one was permitted to enter. While the reporter sat on the doorstep puzzling his brain over the various phases of the mystery the following message arrived from a Kansas City correspondent:

"Room 831 Scarritt building is occupied by a law firm. They are attorneys for a bonding company for which Rechintzer formerly worked as cashier. One of the attorneys said Rechintzer came here willingly. No warrant has been issued for his arrest. He is being kept in hiding."

LATIN FLEET AND TROOPS TO BOSPORUS?

Action by Rome May Force Balkan Nations Into the Conflict.

TRANSPORT IS SUNK.

BULLETIN.

ATHENS, Aug. 22, 2 a. m.—A British seaplane attached to the allied fleet bombarded and sank a Turkish transport loaded with troops in the Sea of Marmora yesterday, according to Mytilene dispatches tonight.

BULLETIN.

ATHENS, Aug. 22, 1 a. m.—Allied destroyers have pursued and bottled up a German submarine in Aivalik bay, in Asiatic Turkey.

(By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.)

ROME, Aug. 21.—Italy declared war on Turkey today. This action followed the refusal of the Ottoman empire to submit to demands in the ultimatum handed to it by Italy, the time limit of which has expired.

Naby Bey, Turkish ambassador to Rome, was handed his passports and he departed immediately for Switzerland.

Marchese Garroni, Italian ambassador to Constantinople, has started for Rome by way of Berlin and Amsterdam. Before leaving he handed a note to the Turkish government, which stated that Italy's declaration of war was based on the support given by Turkey to the revolt in Libya and the prevention of the departure of Italian residents from Syria.

Expect Balkans to Act.

It is confidently expected here that the action of Italy will be followed by similar moves by several of the Balkan states which have been verging on hostilities with the Ottoman empire for weeks.

Telegrams from the Balkan capitals say that Turco-Bulgarian relations have reached the breaking point and that Turkey is strengthening its fortifications in Thrace because of the fear of a Bulgarian invasion. No open breach between the Bulgars and Turks is likely, however, until Bulgaria learns whether the Serbia parliament, which has been in secret session for three days, is willing to cede Macedonia to it.

Venizelos, the "war advocate," is back in power in Greece, but it is questionable whether he will be so ready to join the allies as he was before the political crisis and dispute with King Constantine which caused his retirement as premier early in the year. He is now forming a new cabinet.

Will Join Dardanelles Fight.

Italy is prepared to strike, and the first blow probably will be at the Dardanelles. The military authorities have concentrated an army, estimated at between 50,000 and 150,000, to be sent to the Dardanelles to coöperate with the allied troops.

A fleet of transports is gathered near the Italian naval base of Taranto and a squadron of cruisers and destroyers is ready to convoy the troop ships to the Gallipoli peninsula.

Germany alone of the Austro-German-Turkish alliance is not openly at war with Italy, though such a declaration is considered probable before the end of the war. The Berlin government takes the view that if Italy sends an army to the Dardanelles her frontier forces would be so weakened that she could not wage a successful campaign against Austria.

Long Cabinet Session.

The cabinet council, which began yesterday morning, when the time limit placed for the Turkish reply expired, was prolonged until last evening, when it was announced that the Italo-Turkish situation had been examined, but no final decision has been reached.

Meanwhile the foreign office was without news from the Italian ambassador at Constantinople, and it was supposed that his telegrams were being held up by the Turkish officials on the technicality of a recent decree forbidding the use of enemy languages, among which, significantly enough, Italian was included.

Despite the expiration of the time limit

BIG NEWS OF THE WAR.

Yesterday brought stirring news of the war and its effects from over the world. Here is a summary of the important activities.

PRESIDENT WILSON decides to await full report and explanation by Germany before action on Arabic case.

LONDON reports declare Arabic was not convoyed, did not attempt to ram submarine, and was torpedoed without warning.

ITALY declares war on Turkey following refusal of Ottoman empire to yield to ultimatum.

THREE RUSSIAN warships and one German sunk in battle in Gulf of Riga. Two other German ships damaged.

GERMAN CRUISER reported sunk by British submarine in Baltic sea.

BRITISH SUBMARINE destroyed by Germans after stranding in Danish waters. Danish torpedo destroyer forces Germans to discontinue attack.

RUSSIANS BRING down German Zeppelin by gunfire and capture crew.

GERMANS CAPTURE Russian city of Bielsk, cutting line between Grodno and Brest Litovsk.

NEW GERMAN war loan of $2,500,000,000 passed by unanimous vote of reichstag.

BRITISH SEAPLANE bombards and wrecks Turkish transport loaded with troops in Sea of Marmora.

EXPERT DECLARES it would take United States four months to get first line of navy in shape for war.

WOMEN VICTIMS SEEK SOAP MAN

They're Out All Expense Money, Including Uniforms, While "Employer" Disappears.

Another species of the "old army game" was scented yesterday when more than fifty women, many in tears, called upon the police to find W. H. Hammond, who has offices at 305 South La Salle street.

The women explained that they had been employed by Hammond to collect the names of housewives and their grocers to be used in exploiting a new brand of soap.

It is feared that Hammond's new brand of soap has pretty well given out, for the solicitors are not only out their wages thus far, but also the money they have expended in carfare and in the purchase of uniforms at the rate of $3.25 each, which they were required to have before they could enter upon their duties.

Commission on Uniforms.

The uniforms were made by Mrs. M. Woolsen, 1609 West Van Buren street, and inquiry there failed to bring a response. It is believed Hammond received a commission from the manufacture of the uniforms, as Mrs. Woolsen is said to enjoy good repute in her dressmaking business.

Mrs. C. Williams, 733 Rush street, who was in charge of the Hammond office, said she had not seen her employer since Friday night and she, too, felt a sense of insecurity about her wages of $20 a week.

Penniless, Her Baby Sick.

One of the women who complained was furnished car fare by the police after she had explained that she had depended solely upon her pay from Hammond and that her baby lay sick at home. Others complained they were destitute and had quit other positions to work for Hammond.

ESCAPED KANKAKEE PATIENT BATTLES POLICE IN STATION.

Stephen Wood Walks In and, Instead of Surrendering, Tries to Wipe Out Detective Bureau.

Stephen Wood of 1321 Michigan avenue, an artist, walked up to Desk Sergt. Daniel Lynch in the detective bureau yesterday and said:

"I understand you are looking for me."

Sergt. Lynch found a message in the book which had been sent by the superintendent of the Eastern Illinois hospital for the insane asking Capt. P. D. O'Brien to arrest five inmates of the institution who escaped Wednesday. Among the names was Wood's.

As Lynch walked around his desk toward Wood the latter sprang at him and knocked his glasses from his face.

Detective Sergts. Burns and Carmody went to his assistance. It took the combined efforts of the three to hold Wood until he could be placed in the patrol wagon. He was taken to the Psychopathic hospital, where he will be held for the Kankakee authorities.

4 WARSHIPS SUNK IN FIGHT IN BALTIC SEA

Russians Lose Three and Germans One in Riga Gulf Battle.

BRITISH ARE HARD HIT.

BULLETIN.

PETROGRAD, via London, Aug. 21.—A British submarine has torpedoed a German cruiser in the Baltic sea. This announcement is made in an official statement.

BERLIN, via Amsterdam, Aug. 21.—Two Russian gunboats, the Sivutch and Koriets, and one Russian torpedo boat were sunk and one other torpedo boat and a large warship were damaged in a naval battle in the Gulf of Riga, the admiralty announced tonight.

The Germans lost one torpedo boat and two German destroyers were damaged. One was beached and the second escorted to port.

An earlier statement from the admiralty reported the sinking of three Russian vessels. A supplementary statement said the two gunboats were sunk and that the Russian destroyer Novik and another destroyer of the class of the Russian Emir Bucharski, together with a "large vessel," were damaged. The names of the German ships damaged or lost were not given.

German Report on Battle.

A statement from the German admiralty concerning the battle follows:

"Our Baltic naval forces penetrated the Gulf of Riga after mine sweepers had swept the mine field and net obstructions.

"In the outpost engagements which developed a Russian torpedo boat of the Emir Bucharskii class was destroyed and other torpedo boats, among them the Novik, and one large vessel, were severely damaged while retreating.

Two Russ Boats Sunk.

"On the evening of the 19th, in Moon sound, the Russian gunboats Sivutch and Koreets were sunk by artillery fire and torpedo boats, after brave resistance. Forty members of the crews, including two officers, some severely wounded, were rescued by our torpedo boats.

"Three of our torpedo boats were damaged by mines. One sank, one was run aground, and one was escorted to port.

"Our loss of life was small."

Majority of Crews Lost.

The two Russian gunboats sunk carried about 280 men. Some of their sailors may have been picked up by other Russian ships, but it is assumed from the admiralty statement that the majority were drowned.

[The Russian destroyer Novik was built in 1911, displaces 1,260 tons, and is the largest destroyer in the Russian navy. It is 338 feet long, has a speed of 36 knots an hour, and is equipped with four four inch guns. It carries a crew of more than 100 men. There are four Russian destroyers of the Emir Bucharski class. Each displaces 570 tons and carries a crew of 94 men. They were built in the years 1904-5.]

Hint at Big Battle.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—Despite the intimation in the Berlin official statement covering the German-Russian Riga clash that the warships engaged were small, it is the belief here in official circles that one of the greatest naval battles of the war may have been fought.

The brief statement from Petrograd that "strong forces of the German fleet have penetrated the Gulf of Riga and fighting with our ships continues," indicates to experts that the clash is of a sanguinary character.

Every effort is being made to obtain more details of the action, but Petrograd is silent.

Germany Has Big Fleet.

The strong force mentioned in the Petrograd dispatch is known to consist of at least ten dreadnaughts and battle cruisers and destroyers. These ships appeared off Riga several days ago and met a check at the entrance to the harbor. Certainly, experts declare, the fleet has not been weakened, and more likely has been strengthened.

A dispatch from Petrograd early today insisted that the main units of the Russian navy were not at Riga and that they were not bottled up, as intimated in a dispatch from Copenhagen. This same dispatch said that the Germans planned to penetrate the gulf and destroy the war craft.

The whereabouts of the dreadnoughts of the Russian fleet, the Slava, Imperator Pavel, and Tsesarevitch, mounting 12 inch guns, is unknown. The Germans, according to Copenhagen reports, have orders to destroy the Russian fleet in the Baltic, thus making it possible to land troops either at Riga or on the shores of Finland.

Should the Germans succeed in putting the Russian fleet in the Gulf of Riga out of action they will be able to destroy in detail the remaining units of the czar's navy and be in position to support their armies operating against Riga and later against Petrograd.

Report of First Attack.

When the first attack on the entrances to the Gulf of Riga was made, on Aug. 9, the Russians reported:

"A German fleet of nine battleships and twelve cruisers, with a large number of torpedo boat destroyers, persistently attacked the entrance to the Gulf of Riga Sunday, but everywhere were repulsed.

"A cruiser and two torpedo boat destroyers were damaged."

Riga Important Russ Port.

Riga, next to Petrograd, the capital of the Russian empire, is the most important Russian seaport on the Baltic sea. It is situated on the Gulf of Riga, and therefore is a landlocked harbor. The mouth of the gulf is heavily fortified and by nature is excellently adapted to the protection of mine fields. The Gulf of Riga and, farther north, the Gulf of Finland, at the extreme eastern end of which Petrograd is situated, form the great bases for the Russian fleet.

Riga has been offering stern resistance to German attacks for some time and has delayed the sweep of Gen. von Buelow's armies around the southern end of the Gulf of Riga. German men of war have been attempting to force an entrance into the gulf in order to coöperate with the land forces, but have been kept out by the wall of mines and the Russian fleet defending the channels.

May Evacuate Riga.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 21.—The presence of a German fleet in the Gulf of Riga, where it is coöperating with the land forces, brings the evacuation of Riga close at hand, it was reported here tonight.

POSTMASTER URGES LIFTING OF POSTAL SAVINGS LIMIT

Issues Pamphlet Showing How Foreigners Desire to Put More than $500 in Depositaries.

Criticism of the use of the postal savings act, which forbid the acceptance of more than $100 a month from a depositor and fixes $500 as the maximum amount that may be accepted, is contained in a pamphlet received by Postmaster Daniel A. Campbell from the postoffice department Saturday morning.

"On July 1," the leaflet reads, "the total deposits at Chicago amounted to $3,267,532—a net gain during the fiscal year of $961,600. The foreign born own nearly three-fourths of these deposits, with $2,348,160 standing to their credit. The accounts of American born depositors total $919,372. The Russians lead all other foreign born depositors with $518,582; then follow the Austrians with $337,737, the Germans with $298,246, and the Italians with $258,063. Representatives of every nation of Europe are among the depositors. One thousand five hundred and ninety-three depositors have reached the $500 limit and can deposit no more, despite their desire to do so. Of this number 1,150 are foreign born.

"The restrictions have proved particularly disappointing to the foreign born, who often insist on depositing their entire savings at one time and cannot understand why the United States government, in which they have implicit confidence, is willing to safeguard a part of their savings, and not all of them. Vast sums of money, earned by honest labor in Chicago, have thus been driven back into hiding and lost to local channels of trade."

LEARN CANNING NEXT WEEK.

Federal Experts Will Show How at Parent-Teachers' Conference.

A demonstration of canning as it is done by government experts will be one of the features of the annual teachers' institute and parent-teachers' conference at the Chicago Normal school next week. O. H. Benson, club specialist of the United States department of agriculture, will be the demonstrator. The event will be open to all housewives. Other lecturers and instructors will be Jessie Field of the National Y. W. C. A., A. E. Winship of Boston, Edwin F. Worst, and Robert C. Moore, Chicago; Marie Turney Harvey, Kirksville, Mo.; Eleanor Lally of the University of Chicago, Rosina R. Merritt, State Normal school, Oshkosh, Wis.; Harriett Germaine, Blue Island, Ill.; Martha Olsen, Evanston, and Mrs. Orville Bright of the Illinois Congress of Mothers.

JAIL HEIRESS AND MOTHER.

Wealthy Manufacturer's Widow and Daughter Sentenced on Charge of Beating Hotels.

New York, Aug. 21.—Two women, a mother and daughter, refined and well gowned, were taken to Blackwell's island today to serve a one year sentence for hotel beating. They were Mrs. M. J. Weaver and Mrs. Harriet E. Wells, who claimed to be the daughter and widow respectively of the late John C. Wells of Warren, Pa., a manufacturer. They said Wells left $2,000,000 when he died.

The women termed the hotel beating charges as "utterly absurd" but admitted the debts.

Eight prominent New York hotelkeepers pressed charges against them, besides the Bellevue-Stratford of Philadelphia.

FIND WOMAN'S BODY IN LAKE.

Remnants of Costly Clothing Cling to Remains Taken from Water at Grand Avenue.

The body of a woman supposed to have been in the water for more than a month was taken from the lake near the Grand avenue pier yesterday. Fragments of a silk waist, silk stockings, high black button shoes with French heels, and a gold sunburst set with pearls were all that remained on the body, which is thought to be that of a young woman. There were two gold crowns on teeth in the upper jaw and a gold tooth in the lower jaw. The body was taken to Gavin's undertaking rooms, 642 North Clark street.

Rome Acts When Demand for Release of Subjects Is Ignored by the Porte.

set in the ultimatum, the cabinet did not take the final step until its meeting this evening following the receipt of the Turkish reply to the Italian demands. This reply was entirely unsatisfactory.

Circular Explains Action.

The government later issued a brief circular, addressed to Italian representatives in foreign countries and explaining Italy's reasons for declaring war. The statement recited Turkish acts of hostility against the Italian government, the holding up of Italian reservists, and concluded:

"In view of these obvious infractions of the categorical promises made by the Ottoman government, and following our ultimatum of Aug. 3 provoked by the evasions of the Ottoman government, particularly with regard to free departure of Italian subjects from Asia Minor, the Italian government has sent instructions to the Italian ambassador to Constantinople to communicate to the Turkish government a declaration of war by Italy."

Announcement of the declaration was received with wild enthusiasm by the crowds that had gathered outside the government offices. During the session the populace, being well aware that an important decision would in all likelihood be reached, awaited the news amid scenes of great excitement.

FRICTION LONG STANDING.

Friction between Turkey and Italy has been in evidence since shortly after the latter's entry into the war against Austria. Early in June there were reports that Italian consuls were gradually leaving Turkey and that American officials were taking over the task of looking out for Italian interests.

Later charges were made that the Ottoman government was preventing these consuls from leaving and that similar coercion was being exerted over Italian civilians who wished to quit Turkish soil.

Italy Claims Treaty Violated.

On July 20 advices came from Rome that the Italian government had addressed a note to the United States asking it to use its influence to protect Italian subjects in the Ottoman domain. The complaint that they were being prevented from leaving was reiterated.

Two days later the Italian cabinet met for the supposed purpose of discussing the situation as regarded Turkey, and almost coincidentally the Italian government began to gather evidence intended to show that Turkey had violated the treaty of Lausanne, an undertaking according to the terms of which she pledged herself to withdraw all Turkish troops and officers from the Cyrenaica district in Tripoli and help bring about the submission of the Senussi tribesmen in this locality. Instead of doing this, it was alleged, Enver Pasha, the Turkish minister of war, last March sent his brother Nuri Bey, to Cyrenaica to foment rebellion.

On Aug. 8 the Italian ambassador at Constantinople made another protest to Turkey relative to the attitude of the Ottoman authorities toward Italian subjects. It was stated that Italian consuls were still being detained in Turkey. At that time the tension between Italy and Turkey was becoming more acute daily.

Italy Demands Explanation.

It was announced on Aug. 5 that Italy had asked for categorical explanations concerning Turkey's alleged refusal to withdraw her troops from the Cyrenaica district in Tripoli, and it was charged that Turkey was pursuing what was described as her usual policy of procrastination.

In official circles in Rome the feeling was held that hostilities on the part of Italy might begin at any moment, as her last note to Turkey was almost in the character of an ultimatum. Shortly after this it was reported that a declaration of war by Italy against Turkey would be issued simultaneously with the sending of about 150,000 men to the aid of the Franco-British force on the Gallipoli peninsula.

Italy Prepares for Action.

It was announced on Aug. 19 that a strong squadron of fast Italian cruisers was being held in readiness to sail from Taranto, Italy, at a moment's notice. It was stated that it was expected the warships would be sent against Turkey if the latter country declined to satisfy Italy's demands for the release of Italian subjects held in the Ottoman empire.

A meeting of the Italian cabinet was held on Friday, and at that time Baron Sonnino, Italian minister of foreign affairs, presented an exhaustive report on the Turkish situation. He asserted that the Turkish provocations had become intolerable. The cabinet's decision was kept secret.

Will Not Act in the Arabic Crisis Until All Reports Are In.

pealed for help. No attack could be made on the Arabic without resort to the doctrine of 'stoppage, visitation, and search' for such action. But if the Dunsley resisted attack before being torpedoed the commander of the submarine might very well have taken the view that the Arabic was en route to aid in the resistance and thus have been justified in torpedoing her."

Admiralty Reward Cited.

If it develops that the Arabic was sunk while attacking the submarine, this country will inform Great Britain that if American ports are to remain open to British merchant vessels during the remainder of the war the admiralty must instruct all British merchant commanders to observe the law regarding merchantmen. Some months ago a reward of $5,000 was offered to the first British merchantman to sink an enemy submarine. Instructions are also understood to have been given to all British merchantmen to combat submarines where there is more than an even possibility of coming out victorious.

It is generally believed here that a threat by the United States to deny British vessels the privilege of entering American ports unless they divest themselves entirely of a fighting character, making them properly subject to attack without warning, will bring from the admiralty in London strong instructions to British sea captains not to attempt offensive tactics against submarines.

This country intends to insist that British vessels shall not assume a naval character during that part of their voyage which they spend in the war zone and purely a merchant character after they leave the war zone.

As for Germany, if the official reports indicate that the action of the submarine commander who sank the Arabic was in violation of the warning of July 21, only an immediate disavowal of the act and an offer of reparation will prevent a break between Washington and Berlin.

DISPUTED BILLS ARE VALID.

Measures Passed by Legislature and Signed After July 1 Are Effective at Once, Is Opinion.

Springfield, Ill., Aug. 21.—According to an opinion given to Secretary of State Lewis G. Stevenson by Attorney General P. J. Lucey bills passed by the last legislature but not signed until after July 1 become effective the day they are signed. Heretofore the impression has been that such bills would not become laws until the succeeding July 1. Bills delivered to the secretary of state without the approval of the governor become laws as soon as they are placed in the hands of the secretary, according to the opinion of the attorney general.

The validity of a number of bills is established by the opinion, according to employés in the secretary of state's office.

One of the doubtful bills was the one which created a state board of optometry and an examining board of structural engineers. Gov. Dunne did not sign these bills until after July 1.

SOLDIERS ARE GOLD MINERS.

Australians on Gallipoli Put Time In Digging Yellow Metal When Fighting Slackens.

ATHENS, via London, Aug. 21.—Australian miners are digging for gold in the trenches on Gallipoli peninsula. They were surprised at the similarity of the Gallipoli ground to the Australian gold fields and their sharp eyes soon discovered traces of the yellow metal. In their spare time the miners built rude placer outfits on the seashore and began washing for gold. They found it and now the Australian troops with mining experience are passing every minute when not fighting the Turks in washing clay, which is brought to the shore from a half a mile inland. One soldier made $5 in four hours.

Wife of Adjutant to Major in Cuba Gets Divorce on Desertion Grounds.

Judge Mangan yesterday granted a divorce to Mrs. Helen B. Durand from Walter J. Durand, adjutant under Maj. Stansfield in the Cuban war, who, she said, deserted her immediately after their marriage on March 22, 1913.

Mrs. Durand introduced a letter signed by Durand in support of her suit, part of which read:

"I can't blame you, of course. No woman can be expected to live on hope forever as the wife of a man she never sees."

ALL BLAME PUT ON GERMANS FOR LOSS OF ARABIC

Liner Absolved, as It Is Found 39 Persons, Two of Them Americans, Were Killed.

BULLETIN.

LIVERPOOL, Aug. 21.—The Red Star liner Lapland, with thirteen American passengers on board and for which apprehension had been felt, arrived safely today.

LONDON, Aug. 22.—With it known positively that thirty-nine persons, two of them Americans—Mrs. Josephine L. Bruguiere and Dr. Edmund F. Wood—were drowned when the Arabic was torpedoed on Thursday by a German submarine, discussion today turned to the causes for the big liner's destruction.

Information received in official quarters and the stories told by passengers make clear three important points in regard to the attack. They follow:

First—The Arabic was torpedoed without warning.

Second—The liner was not convoyed by a British warship. The admiralty office makes definite and emphatic statements to this effect.

Third—The Arabic did not try to ram the submarine. One passenger, who said he saw the submarine, said it appeared from under the bow of the Dunsley, where it could not have been seen by Capt. Finch, who was on the bridge of the Arabic.

Data Cabled to Washington.

Practically all the American survivors made affidavits concerning the sinking of the Arabic upon their arrival at Queenstown. Other statements were taken here and Ambassador Page today cabled a summary to the state department at Washington. The exact contents of his message were not given out, but it was understood he reported all the Americans agreed the ship was torpedoed without warning.

The attack grows more inexplicable the more testimony of circumstances surrounding it is received. The favorite solution of English and Americans here is that it constitutes an answer to the otherwise unanswered American note to Germany.

Others designate it as a "mad dog act," constituting a demonstration of Admiral von Tirpitz's thorough determination of the war policy and his determination to sink anything within Germany's proclaimed war zone.

Find 39 Persons Missing.

The White Star line officials tonight completed a careful check of the persons aboard the liner when it was attacked, with the survivors. It is stated that twelve cabin passengers, six steerage passengers, and twenty-one members of the crew cannot be accounted for and must be put down as lost.

Bodies of two of the victims, the first recovered, were taken to Queenstown and placed in a morgue to await identification.

The patrol ship Adventurous put in at the Irish city with three of the Arabic's lifeboats, picked up five miles from where the liner was torpedoed. In one was the body of a woman, the face slightly bruised by the wreckage. In a second boat was the body of a man, believed to be a steward of the liner, who is among the persons missing.

Berlin Is Jubilant.

The Amsterdam correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph sent the following message today regarding the feeling in Berlin over the torpedoing of the Arabic.

"The Berlin Lokal Anzeiger is jubilant over the sinking of the Arabic, declaring Germans have special reasons for jubilation, as it seems all the passengers and crew were saved.

"The Lokal Anzeiger also rejoices over the Zeppelin raids on England, declaring 'Why should the British be spared while their dear Russian allies are so emphatically feeling the strength of our sword?'"

First reports in Berlin that the Arabic had been sunk by a German submarine, but that all Americans aboard had been saved, caused widespread rejoicing. Later, when it was established that there was loss of American lives, this feeling changed to one of deep concern.

The American colony received the news of the Arabic's sinking calmly, as did officials.

AMERICANS TOO HASTY.

BY CARL W. ACKERMAN.

[UNITED PRESS STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

[Copyright: 1915: By United Press.]

[Copyrighted in Great Britain.]

BERLIN, via The Hague, Aug. 21.—"I doubt if a German submarine sank the Arabic without warning. German submarines will sink no ships without warning. Why does America always seek the bad viewpoint? Why does it not think something good of Germany?"

A high official of the German government made the foregoing declaration to me tonight when questioned about press reports regarding the torpedoing of the White Star liner.

Hopes U. S. Will Be Patient.

This official declared he could not believe that any American lives had been lost through the sinking of the Arabic. He said that the admiralty has not yet received reports from the submarine and that he hoped America would not judge before every fact had been collected, including the statements of the German submarine commander.

Press dispatches received here are conflicting. The report said the Arabic struck a mine. Others report the feeling in America very bitter, declaring that the ship was not warned.

These conflicting reports, this German official said, furnished the best reason why America and Germany should calmly await the facts.

Ambassador Gerard is without official information of the torpedoing of the Arabic. He conferred with Foreign Secretary von Jagow this afternoon.

NO FEAR OF SUBMARINES.

New York, Aug. 22.—Recent activities of German submarines had no apparent effect on the leaving of transatlantic steamers flying American, British, French and Italian flags, with more than 2,000 passengers on board, in addition to full cargoes of exports.

The Cunard line steamship Orduna, with 275 passengers, of whom seven are Americans, left for Liverpool. The American line steamship New York left with 470 passengers; the French line steamship La Touraine, with 220 passengers, and the Italian liner Stampalia, with 1,087 passengers. The passengers on board the Stampalia include more than 1,000 men going to Italy to enlist for the war.

The Orduna carried 9,000 tons of cargo, officials of the line said, but they added that there were no explosives or war munitions aboard.

Warships Convoy Cymric.

The White Star liner Cymric arrived from Liverpool today with 189 passengers.

Five British warships, working in relays, convoyed the Cymric for thirty-six hours on its voyage from Liverpool, according to passengers. The Cymric took practically the same course traversed by the Arabic.

The big flagpole at the mouth of the Mersey displayed a black ball signal that submarines were in the vicinity when the Cymric steamed out at 2 p. m. on Aug. 11 with 189 passengers. The Cymric's sailors swung the lifeboats outward and provisioned them after assigning places in the boats to the passengers.

Once clear of Liverpool harbor a small cruiser steamed silently along. Later in the day a destroyer relieved the cruiser and convoyed the liner throughout the night. Three other destroyers acted as convoys throughout the next day until the Cymric had cleared the war zone. No submarines were sighted.

Account for Three Americans.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—A cable from Ambassador Page at London to the state department this afternoon said the Queenstown vice consul had advised the embassy that Mr. and Mrs. Fred Burgess and J. Kellett, Americans on the Arabic, had been accounted for, leaving the number of missing officially at two.

It is inconceivable to American citizens who claim to be inheritors of the traditions of Washington and Lincoln that our governmental representatives shall not see that the time for deeds has come.

ACTION NEEDED COLONEL AVERS

Mere Severing of Relations Is Sacrifice of Honor, Roosevelt Asserts.

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Col. Theodore Roosevelt today broke the silence he has maintained about this country's international relations with Germany since the sinking of the Lusitania. Referring to the destruction of the Arabic, Col. Roosevelt said it would be a fresh sacrifice of American honor and interests for the administration merely to dismiss Count von Bernstorff, the German ambassador, and sever diplomatic relations with Germany. The colonel's statement reiterates more forcibly his previous utterances on the subject, maintaining that the time for words passed long ago.

Hopes Administration Will Act.

"I see it suggested in the papers," Col. Roosevelt said, "that the German answer to our last note, which is the sinking of the Arabic by a German submarine and the consequent murder of American citizens, will be adequately met by the administration dismissing Von Bernstorff and severing diplomatic relations with Germany. I earnestly hope the administration will not take this view, for to do so would be a fresh sacrifice of American honor and interests.

"The president's note to Germany in February was an excellent note if only it had been lived up to. But every subsequent note has represented nothing but weakness and timidity on our part, and the sinking of the Lusitania and of the Arabic, the attacks on the Gulflight and the Falaba, and all the similar incidents that have occurred represent arrogant answers which this weakness has inspired.

Time for Words Is Past.

"Germany will care nothing for the mere severance of diplomatic relations. The time for words on the part of this nation has long passed.

NO ANNEXATION FOR CHANCELLOR

German Premier Reported Against Holding Occupied Territory.

CALLS PLAN MADNESS.

BY KARL H. VON WIEGAND.

[Copyright: 1915: By Press Publishing Company (New York World).]

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 21.—"An epitome of madness"—that is what Imperial Chancellor von Bethmann-Hollweg is reported to have exclaimed when the memorial reached him from the six most powerful, influential, and centralized of the great economic organizations in Germany, demanding a general policy of annexation for conquered provinces as a basis of peace.

These requirements upon the chancellor and the government included no premature peace, no easygoing peace, no peace that did not involve the full political exploitation of the final military successes; that the price of victory must be commensurate with the sacrifices, the blood of hundreds of thousands, and the colonial empire; that Belgium be annexed in all but name, its legislation in respect to military, customs, coinage, finance, postoffices, railways, waterways, to be Germanized; that all big economic enterprises be placed under German direction.

Furthermore, the memorial advocates control of the Belgian seaports, annexation of the French coast as far as the Somme as an outlet to the Atlantic and a strategic necessity against attack from England; annexation of the Briey ore region and the coal regions of the departments Du Nord and Pas de Calais; that Verdun, Belfort, and the western slope of the Vosges must be added to Germany for strategic reasons; that the safety of East Prussia from Russia demanded the annexation of the adjacent Russian terirtory; that coal be one effective means of political influence.

Counter Memorial Presented.

"An epitome of madness," the chancellor is said to have characterized the sweeping demands of this memorial, to which the Delbrueck, Dernberg-Wolf memorial, I cabled recently, is a protest and counter-memorial to the government.

I specially state that I do not give the chancellor's alleged exclamation as fact, although I have it on what is thought to be good authority; but I give it for what it may be worth in throwing light upon the trend of thought in certain circles in Germany opposed by others.

Certainly Von Bethmann-Hollweg has no reason to be ashamed of the exclamation, if he made it. The memorial represents the views and is signed by many powerful organizations.

These organizations not only represent the politically powerful reactionary agrarians or junkers, but also the highly centralized influences of the mighty industrial concerns, including at least a portion, if not all, of the Krupp interests.

Von Jagow Dodges Reply.

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent sends a dispatch received there from Berlin which says that Gottlieb von Jagow, the German foreign minister, declined to reply today in the reichstag to the question of Dr. Karl Liebknecht, one of the Socialist leaders whether the government was disposed to abandon its idea of the annexation of conquered territory and enter into immediate peace pourparlers if the other belligerent powers were similarly inclined.

Body Taken from River.

The body of a man, believed to be that of Albert Kielstrom, 6033 South Green street, who fell into the lake a week ago at the foot of East Thirty-first stret, was taken from Lake Michigan yesterday. Letters bearing his name were found in the clothing and relatives were informed.

BRITISH PLACE COTTON ON LIST OF CONTRABAND

May Now Seize Cargoes Without Payment; France Expected to Agree.

[BY CABLE TO THE CHICAGO TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, Aug. 21.—The British government placed cotton on the contraband list today. France will follow with similar action tomorrow. No declaration of the sort is expected from Russia. It is possible that Italy may join in the action against cotton at a later date.

The government has placed cotton among the contraband articles only after months of hesitancy and after a violent press campaign. Various members of the cabinet have been bitterly assailed during the propaganda and it has more than once been declared by leading scientists that the government's procrastination respecting cotton has permitted Germany to manufacture explosives which, had cotton been withheld from that country, would have been out of the question.

In its declaration no hint is supplied regarding the methods to be pursued in protecting the cotton industry in America, but it is said that all possible measures will be taken to prevent abnormal depression in market conditions.

Prices to Be Stabilized.

Some scheme is to be adopted by which prices will be stabilized according to the best available information, but just what this scheme will involve cannot at present be stated. It is not improbable that it will take the form of extensive purchases of cotton in America by the British and French governments acting jointly.

At least it can be stated positively that the government intends to make an earnest effort against any interference with the legitimate cotton trade of neutral countries. In the past, under the ruling of the order in council it was the government's policy only to stop cotton suspected of an enemy destination.

Cotton Can Be Confiscated.

This policy will be pursued with the difference that while in the past England either bought the cotton or returned it, all cotton cargoes may now be confiscated. In fact, under the new declaration not only such cargoes, but the ships carrying them as well, if suspected of enemy destination, may be confiscated by the government.

In other words, the government no longer proposes to give cotton exporters a gambling chance of sending their article to Germany. Heretofore if such exporters failed to get their cargoes to a neutral country from which they might easily be exported to Germany it was certain that the cotton either would be returned to them or be purchased by Great Britain.

Through the coöperation of cotton exporters the government is supposed to be arranging a list of cotton importers in Scandinavian countries who may be relied upon not to export their consignments to Germany.

GERMAN FORCES CAPTURE BIELSK; SEPARATE FORTS

Russian Line Between Grodno and Brest Litovsk Cut; Stronghold Periled.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—Gen. von Gallwitz's forces have captured the city of Bielsk, it was officially announced this afternoon.

The capture of Bielsk puts the Germans astride the Bialystok-Brest Litovsk railway, cutting the rail communications between the Russian army still holding the Grodno fortress and the Russians at Brest Litovsk. Bielsk is a city of about 30,000, twenty-five miles southeast of the fortified city of Bialystok and fifty miles northwest of Brest Litovsk.

Gen. von Gallwitz's left wing is now threatening to surround a Russian force at Bialystok. The Russians are expected to evacuate the city, falling back behind the railway.

Russian Forces Retreat.

South of Bielsk, Von Gallwitz's right wing has driven the Russians across the Biala river. The Bavarians operating on Von Gallwitz's right flank have broken the enemy's resistance, and since dawn today the whole Russian line has been in retreat after desperate efforts to check the German advance.

The Russians who were driven from Kovno fortress have evacuated the positions they took up on the Jesia river and are falling back toward Vilna.

The early fall of Brest Litovsk fortress and the breaking of the Russian center was forecast by military critics in commenting on the capture of Novo Georgievsk.

From a distance of less than six miles the Germans are bombarding the outer forts of Brest Litovsk.

German Armies Augmented.

The Germans who invested Novo Georgievsk are moving eastward to join the forces of Prince Leopold of Bavaria, who is striking at the Russians northwest of Brest Litovsk. Field Marshal von Mackensen is concentrating large forces Georgievsk are moving eastward to join The official statement follows:

"Army group of Field Marshal von Hindenburg: In the fighting east of Kovno, 450 prisoners were taken. South of Kovno the enemy evacuated his position on the Jesia river and is retreating in an easterly direction. Near Gudele and Sejny Russian positions were stormed. In the fighting west of Tykocin the Russians lost 610 prisoners.

Approach Near Brest Litovsk.

"The army of Gen. von Gallwitz took Bielsk and south of that place drove the Russians over the Biala.

"The army group of Prince Leopold broke the renewed resistance of the enemy yesterday afternoon and evening, and since early this morning the enemy has been in retreat. More than 1,000 prisoners have been taken.

"The army group of Field Marshal von Mackensen advanced its left wing over the Koterka sector and from the mouth of the Bug to Pulva. The enemy continued to retreat. Near Brest Litovsk and east of Vladova further progress was made."

RUSSIA DECIDES TO GRANT MORE LIBERTY TO THE JEWS.

Residential Restrictions in Cities, Except Petrograd and Moscow, to Be Removed During War.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 21.—Owing to the occupation by the Germans of a great part of the pale of Jewish settlements and the inclusion of the remainder in the sphere of military operations, the condition of the Jews is critical. Five hundred thousand Jewish residents have been deported and a probably greater number have taken refuge in the interior provinces, where they have no legal rights.

Prince Cherbatoff, the minister of the interior, brought the question of their status before the council of the empire and that body has decided temporarily to permit Jews to settle in the cities of the empire, with the exception of those of Moscow and Petrograd and the suburban residences of Emperor Nicholas.

JEWS RALLY FOR FREEDOM.

Meeting Today to Arouse Interest in Those Engaged on European Battlefields.

A Socialist massmeeting will be held at the West Side auditorium at Taylor street and Racine avenue at 2 o'clock this afternoon under the auspices of the Chicago National Workmen's Committee for Jewish Rights. Clarence Darrow, Seymour Stedman, Perez Hirschbein, Dr. I. Markus, and M. Bakall are billed to speak. The meeting is to interest Jewish workingmen in the movement to secure for Jews the fullest possible national, political and civic rights in countries in Europe in which they are offering their lives on the battlefields.

WRITER IN BRITISH PRISON.

Penned "Information Calculated to Prejudice England's Relations with America."

LONDON, Aug. 21.—Theodore Sington, described as a journalist, was remanded today by a Manchester magistrate on the charge of having violated the defense of the realm act by sending to an American publication "information calculated to prejudice his majesty's relations with foreign governments."

The prosecutor stated that if the articles in question had been published they might have caused material injury to this country in the minds of American readers.

Mr. Sington denied that his articles were intended for publication.

CROWDS WATCH RUSS WAR FILM

Battlefields Brought to Studebaker Throngs by the "Tribune's" Pictures.

Where was everybody going up Michigan avenue last night? Why, to the front with the Russians at the Studebaker.

Well, not everybody, maybe, because the Studebaker, though large, still has a capacity limit. It was filled to that capacity limit, and more so.

The "more so" stood outside the doors, filling the lobby and tailing out on the street clear to Van Buren, waiting on weary feet a-turn within. With the rat-a-tat-tat regularity of machine gun shots the crowd surged into the theater until every seat, clear through to the topmost tiers, was occupied.

And then the rest waited until the ones and twos and threes had been around the circle of seeing and dropped out, creating little islands of emptiness in the great audience which were speedily populated by the fortunately nearer waiters.

McCormick Tells of Film Taking.

R. R. McCormick, THE TRIBUNE war correspondent, introduced the pictures with a few remarks that made patent the difficulties of securing such pictorial reporting of foreign warfare.

"The chiefs of staff had decided that newspaper correspondents were not to be allowed," he said. "For often in the past it had happened that the most accurate news of positions and action had been obtained from the most friendly correspondents. But THE TRIBUNE felt there was a legitimate field for the war correspondent which offered interesting news, not betraying military secrets, that would be of patriotic value to our own country."

Permission was secured to visit the warring lines and get pictures, and on Feb. 7 Mr. McCormick, accompanied by two motion picture operators, Edwin Weigle and Donald Thompson, sailed warward.

"But," said Mr. McCormick, "I found it was not feasible to visit opposing armies, so while Thompson and I went to Russia, Weigle stayed in Germany alone."

Of Great Value to U. S. Army.

It isn't so easy to take pictures of actual warfare, opined Mr. McCormick, on the actual scenes of conflict, recalling a day in his service on the drainage board when he gave a permit to take movie pictures for a "war in South Africa" along the drainage canal. He recommends that as the easiest way to do it.

"The motion picture camera is a near-sighted animal, and some of the pictures worked for hardest and under the most difficult conditions prove total failures," he explained, because of the conditions of atmosphere, of range and focus, of manipulating the camera.

"I speak frankly about it," he continued. "What we have is bona fide. There isn't a thing shown that isn't true. It will be of great value to the United States army.

A round of applause answered him, and then the pictures flashed their plainer-than-print report of the Russian front.

See Famous Fighters Face to Face.

Positions of fighting were shown, the guns in action, the troops in motion, the aeroplanes in flight, the caring for the wounded, and the scores of things that make war exciting and terrible. The various officers in command met the Studebaker throngs face to face; at least, the Studebaker throngs met the officers.

Even the czar was there. When he got out of his automobile a wave of hand clapping swept through the crowd, punctuated by a few sharp hisses.

The music marched with the men. It fell softly while Mr. McCormick spoke; then swelled into sweeping melody during heavy action. Much of it was compounded of the Russian's own music, selected by Mrs. McCormick, who had accompanied her husband as near to the front as a woman dared. She wasn't on the lines, but she had heard the firing.

The pictures begin to show on the hour. Mr. McCormick will speak with them this evening at 8 o'clock, and during the day Donald Thompson, the photographer, lectures in accompaniment.

MESSAGE BY KAISER PRAISING HIS TROOPS

LONDON, Aug. 21.—A message expressing deep gratification over the capture of Novo Georgievsk and paying high tribute to the courage of German troops has been telegraphed by Emperor William to Dr. von Bethmann-Hollweg, the German imperial chancellor, says a Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam. The emperor's message as given by the newspaper follows:

"Thanks to God's gracious assistance, the tried bravery of the conqueror of Antwerp, Gen. von Bessler, the heroic courage of our brilliant troops, and the excellent German and Austro-Hungarian siege artillery, the strongest and most modern Russian fortress—Novo Georgievsk—is in our hands.

"Deeply moved, I have just expressed my thanks to my brave troops, whose spirit was splendid. It is one of the finest feats of arms ever accomplished by any army. It was a sublime day for which I humbly thank God. The booty in Kovno has increased to 600 guns."

The chancellor replied to the emperor with the following message:

"Full of gratitude to God, the entire people rejoice over the heroic deeds of the army and, knowing our cause is just, look to the future with entire confidence. The unanimous resolution of the reichstag shows the entire people are firmly united behind our brilliant army. Thousands sang songs of triumph, and 'Now Let Us All Thank God,' before the palace."

BIG GUN DUELS CONTINUE ALONG WEST BATTLE FRONT.

Germans Drop Forty Shells Into Reims, but Only One Person Was Wounded, Paris Reports.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—The following official statement was issued tonight at the French war office:

"In Artois the artillery on both sides has been active in the region of Noulette and in the Neuville section.

"Cannonading also has been rather violent in the region of Roye and Lassigny, in the Aisne valley, and in Champagne.

"The enemy has fired about forty shells on Reims. Only one person was wounded, so far as reported.

"Bomb fighting on the Perthes-Beausejour front in the Argonne has continued. We shelled the German trenches effectively in reply to their shelling at Vauquois.

"In Alsace, in the region of Ammertzwiller, our mortars and bomb throwers have played havoc with the German positions and have blown up several ammunition depots."

KAISER INTENDS TO LEVY COST OF WAR ON ENEMIES.

German Secretary of Treasury Estimates Belligerents Are Spending 75 Millions a Day in Fighting.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—The German government, through Secretary of the Treasury Helfferich, has virtually served notice that she intends to levy heavy indemnities against her enemies, if they are defeated, at the end of the war. Dr. Helfferich told the reichstag that despite their exhaustion Germany intends to impose the war burdens on those "responsible for the war."

In this connection Dr. Helfferich estimated that the war is costing all the belligerents combined almost $75,000,000 a day, more than $2,000,000,000 a month, and about $25,000,000,000 a year.

WINSLOW GETS PROMOTION.

Rear Admiral Given Command of Pacific Fleet—Admiral Howard for Naval Examining Board.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—President Wilson today designated Rear Admiral Cameron Winslow to be commander in chief of the Pacific fleet, succeeding Vice Admiral T. B. Howard, who will resign in November. Winslow will relinquish command of the fleet at San Diego, Cal., about Sept. 1. Howard will become president of the naval examining boar

SAY ALLIES WILL SUE FOR PEACE

German Socialists to Vote for New Credit; Future to Be Established.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—In the course of the debate today in the reichstag, Dr. Eduard David, the Socialist leader, said:

"There lives in the hearts of the German people, as in all other peoples, a longing for the day of restoration of peace. It were ill for humanity if it were otherwise. The European peoples are bleeding from thousands and thousands of wounds. Every day of the war means further frightful destruction of values.

"Therefore, I point again today to the declaration which our party made in the reichstag. We adhere to the principle declared on Aug. 4, 1914, that an end must be made to the war as soon as our enemies are inclined to make peace.

Not Waging War of Conquest.

"Lust for conquest must not prolong this war unnecessarily. Emperor William said we were waging no war of conquest and the chancellor's speech yesterday supplied further proof. Unfortunately, Germany's enemies are not yet inclined to peace; notwithstanding their severe defeats.

"Their leading statesmen only recently asserted the determination to continue the war until Germany is crushed and their plans for conquest are realized. They are still looking for allies among the neutrals. They say time is their ally and hope to wear out Germany's economic and military power by protracting the war.

"If we desire peace, therefore, the only thing left is to compel them to see that their hope is futile."

Success to Moral Power.

Referring to the chancellor's words to the effect that Germany owes her success to moral power exerted in the direction of freedom, Dr. David said:

"And I hold it to be my duty to add that we expect a greater measure of liberty for the German people. With this hope we shall vote for new credit. We must reach the goal of equal civil rights attending equal civil duties.

"Whoever did not know it before must have learned through this war that the great masses of the German people stand so high in efficiency, in the spirit of organization, in the sense of social duty, that the demands for full political equality cannot longer be refused. In a struggling for that goal we vote for the present war credit."

Feel Grateful to Pope.

Dr. Peter Spahn, a Clerical, expressed gratitude to Pope Benedict for his efforts in behalf of peace. He said:

"The position of the holy father which has been created by the war compels us to think of an international arrangement which would do justice to the rights and dignities of the papacy."

Dr. Spahn indorsed the chancellor's position concerning the freeing of Poland from "the Russian yoke." Maj. Ernst Bassermann, national Liberal leader, spoke in the same vein. He added, however, that the Polish problem must be solved with due regard to Germany's national interests, as well as the interests and demands of the Poles.

Future Must Be Guaranteed.

"Victory must bring us peace which will guarantee our future, dictated solely from the standpoint of Germany's national interests," he said.

Vladislaus Seyda, a Polish member, expressed satisfaction at the chancellor's position, saying Poland would have the opportunity of developing its national life and reviving the culture of former times.

"We express firm confidence that the present war will create political conditions for the Polish nation which will guarantee free development of its national life in the future," he said.

LYNCH NEGRO IN LOUISIANA.

Shreveport, La., Aug. 21.—An unidentified negro who entered the bedroom of the 17 year old daughter of Edward Adcock, a planter living near Coushatta was hanged by a mob in Grand Bayou swamp shortly afterward. The negro was taken from the custody of Deputy Sheriff Scott, who had captured him after a brief chase.

COUP BY ALLIES PENS UP TURKS IN DARDANELLES

Bold Stroke Cuts Off Line of Communication and Blocks Retreat of 100,000.

BY LOUIS EDGAR BROWNE.

[By permission of Chicago Daily News.]

Mudros, Near Eastern Base of Allies, Aug. 20, via Athens, Greece, Aug. 21.—Through a bold stroke the British army has dealt the Turks a humiliating and disastrous reverse, resulting in the capture and destruction of the main lines of communication between Constantinople and the forces defending the Gallipoli peninsula, thus entirely cutting off the ammunition and food supply. This strategic success, it is calculated by the allies, will equal the effect upon the Balkan political situation of the fall of Warsaw.

The demoralization and surrender of the Turkish army defending Gallipoli peninsula are predicted for the near future.

The opening of the Dardanelles and the eventual fall of Constantinople are now said to be inevitable, and it is only a matter of time before the twentieth century crusaders will raise the standard of Christianity on the mosque of St. Sofia.

Allies Spring a Coup.

The result was brought about by a gigantic ruse. Huge and heavily equipped forces were concentrated by the British and French on various inland bases near the Asia Minor seacoast. The allies made a great display, indicating an intention to invade Asia Minor. Thereupon the Turks threw every resource of the nation into the defense of the seacoast. Warships of the allies made several violent demonstrations against the newly constructed works. The Turks rushed every available man to the defense of Smyrna, Adramyti, and other Asiatic cities.

Suddenly during the night of Aug. 13 thousands of troops at half a dozen bases embarked and steamed hastily to a known rendezvous. The Turks, learning that the British army was moving, prepared to give it a hot reception at any point along the entire coast of Asia Minor.

Landing a Complete Surprise.

Like a thunderbolt from a clear sky the British invaded Gallipoli peninsula at Suvla bay, where the Turks were hopelessly unprepared for an assault. During the night an immense fleet gathered in the Gulf of Saros from all points of the compass. There were hundreds of transports, destroyers, cruisers, and trawlers bristling with khaki clad soldiers.

The huge expeditionary force—one of the largest ever launched at the heart of an enemy's country—was flung against the Turks at the spot where they least expected it. The landing was orderly, scientific, and unopposed, and it was followed by a rapid advance to a position four miles inland, which was immediately fortified.

Cut Off 100,000 Turks.

This move entirely severed the enemy's lines of communication, with the result that 100,000 Turks, or what is left of the seven army corps defending the peninsula, are nearly surrounded and virtually besieged. The enemy's retreat is now impossible. Entirely cut off from escape, it must either fight to the death or surrender.

It is now a question of how long the Turks can subsist on the supplies they have. It will be an utter impossibility for them to get enough for their daily needs because the British command both land and sea communications.

The landing was splendidly executed. Under the supervision of the navy, half a thousand small boats, launches and pinnaces, bristling like porcupines with fixed bayonets, carried the troops quietly ashore and returned repeatedly for fresh loads. Each man was equipped with an intrenching tool, ammunition and food for three days. Immediately after the landing fifty Turkish outposts surrendered and these were the only soldiers of the enemy seen during the day.

Quiet and Orderly.

The spectacular bombardment and continuous roar of cannonading which were a feature of the original landing at Siddel-Bahr, were conspicuously absent this time. Everything was quiet and orderly, as if it were a peace maneuver, and not a shot was fired until nearly dark.

Turkish reports say that 60,000 British troops landed within twenty-four hours.

When half the force was ashore it was divided into two sections, one marching inland to the south of Salt lake, now a sunbaked and deeply ditched plain, and the other marching north beyond the lake. The forces deployed through the salt marsh, covering as much ground as possible. The first section moved northeast and the second southeast in an attempt to make a junction with the Australian and New Zealand forces north of Gaba Tepe.

Halt for Brief Rest.

Two miles inland the forces halted for a brief rest. Reconnaissance parties reported that there were no Turks in sight and the troops advanced to make as much ground good as possible before the enemy offered resistance. They covered six miles before nightfall of Saturday. Artillery, mule transports, water wagons, kitchens, and hospitals were brought ashore in sufficient quantities for temporary purposes.

Finally Turkish forces were hurriedly mobilized and 70,000 engaged the allies in the most sanguinary battle of the war in the Dardanelles, but lost, and now are in a precarious position.

Reichstag Leaders Approve Chancellor's Stand—Socialists Demand Nation Consider Peace Overtures.

BERLIN, Aug. 21.—The German chancellor's intimation that Poland under no circumstances will be returned to Russia was approved by several reichstag leaders in speeches today. Dr. Bassermann, National Liberal leader, reminded the reichstag, however, that in discussing Poland's future Germany must consider her own interests as well as those of the Poles.

Dr. David, Socialist leader, expressed regret that Germany's enemies are not ready for peace. The Socialists, he said, held fast to their original stand that Germany should accept peace overtures if they are made by her enemies and emphasized the view that Germany is not waging a war of conquest.

SAYS ALLEGED RECRUITING AGENTS MUST FACE TRIAL.

San Francisco Judge Denies Motion to Quash Indictment Against Ralph K. Blair and Others.

San Francisco, Cal., Aug. 21.—Judge Maurice T. Dooling, in the United States District court, denied today summarily a motion to quash the indictments found by a federal grand jury last month against Ralph K. Blair and others charging violation of neutrality in the recruiting of men here for British military service. Judge Dooling also overruled all demurrers interposed by the defendants and set the trial of the cases for Oct. 18. The steamer Sacramento neutrality case will come up for trial Monday before Judge Dooling.

Detroit Electric

—a real automobile

—no more like the electric car of a few years ago than the Mauretania is like Fulton's steamboat. Each passing year has marked a far advance in electric car construction.

The Detroit Electric of 1916 is a modern, powerful automobile in every sense of the word. It is a car with all the speed you really need. It is a car with battery capacity which guarantees you greater mileage without recharging than you ordinarily use in a day's motoring. It is a car with plenty of power to climb hills and pull through heavy roads. Yet—even while the Detroit Electric has steadily advanced in value—the price has steadily declined through the economies of greater production.

GIANT ZEPPELIN SHOT TO EARTH

Russ Bring Down German Aircraft and Capture Its Crew.

ITALIANS WIN IN SKY.

PETROGRAD, Aug. 21.—A German Zeppelin, heavily laden with bombs, was shot down by Russian anti-aircraft guns while approaching the railway center of Vilna, east of Kovno. The crew was captured.

Hit by Four Shots.

The airship was hit four times. It contained the pilot and engineer, together with eight soldiers, a machine gun, bombs, incendiary darts and photographic apparatus.

This is the first instance since the war began in which one of Germany's monster dirigibles has been brought down and its crew captured.

A British aviator destroyed a Zeppelin, but over Belgian soil and behind the German lines.

PARIS, Aug. 21.—An Italian air squadron pursued a group of Austrian aviators along the Adriatic, forced them to give battle, and brought down three of the Austrian planes, according to a Turin dispatch to the Figaro today.

CALLS WILSON DEFENDER OF RIGHTS OF AMERICANS.

Tumulty, in New Jersey Speech Taken to Indicate President's Policy in New Crisis.

Spring Lake, N. J., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Joseph P. Tumulty, secretary to President Wilson, in an address he delivered here today spoke of the situation with Germany as extremely grave and said that President Wilson stands as the defender of the inalienable rights of Americans, whether on land or sea.

His words drew cheers from 200 prominent Democrats of New Jersey, who took his words as an indication of the president's policy in regard to the latest German submarine attack. Tumulty was wildly cheered when he said that a united nation would uphold the president in what he referred to as "a great international crisis."

"To all the world," said Tumulty, "the president represents the majesty, the integrity, the very sovereignty of a great people, a people bent upon no mission of injustice, but interested in asserting and maintaining at every cost those rights of international law and humanity so vital to the life of the nation itself, rights which were procured for us in an ancient day in America at a cost of blood and great sacrifice."

ASSERTS U. S. GREED HURTS SOUTH AMERICAN TRADE.

U. S. Agent Returns from Trip and Scores Americans for Charging High Interest.

Exorbitant rates of interest and the failure of American traders to adjust themselves to the peculiar credit necessities of the country are the causes of the scant export trade of the United States to Central America, according to Garrard Harris, who has just returned from a tour of the southern countries as an agent of the department of commerce.

"The bankers and brokers take advantage of the shortage of money in Central America to charge their clients from 100 to 120 per cent per annum," said Harris. "They evade the law to do this and they gain nothing by it, as the European trader comes in and sells directly to the merchants on long term payment with interest at 6 per cent.

"When American merchants learn to follow this example they will have a large trade in Central America, as they can easily undersell their European competitors and at the same time supply a better article."

GERMANS PASS NEW WAR LOAN; $2,500,000,000

Dr. Liebknecht, Socialist, Refused to Cast Vote and the Reichstag Jeers Him.

BERLIN, via wireless to Sayville, Aug. 21.—The new German war loan, providing $2,500,000,000 for war purposes, was passed by unanimous vote of the reichstag today.

Dr. Karl Liebknecht, Socialist leader, whose demand that the government state on what terms it would consent to an immediate peace was yesterday ignored, sat in silence when the vote was taken. Other members of the reichstag, including some of the Socialist members who voted to support the new loan, hooted and laughed at Liebknecht.

Germany's Finances Excellent.

The vote was taken after Dr. Karl Helfferich, secretary of the German imperial treasury, had concluded a two day speech on the condition of the nation's finances, in which he supported the new war loan.

Dr. Helfferich said Germany's financial and economic conditions are excellent as compared to that of her allies, but warned the reichstag that this is no time for extravagant waste. He admitted that German currency has depreciated, but he said that Germany's enemies who formerly talked loudly of that fact, are now silent because of the financial situation in their own capitals.

Sees Victory and Peace.

"This new war loan," he said in conclusion, "will contribute to victory and peace, giving us guarantees against aggression and activity of our enemies, at the same time leading our enemies back from the curse of misled passions and artificially cultivated hallucinations, and bringing quiet and liberty to bleeding nations.

"Finally, it will bring that peace which the whole of Europe needs in order to maintain a place in the world and fulfill her mission."

SINKING OF TWO VESSELS CAUSES PROTEST BY SPAIN

Personal Letter of Regret Over Losses Is Written by German Ambassador to Madrid.

MADRID, Aug. 21.—The Spanish government has protested to Germany against the torpedoing of two Spanish steamers, the Peria Castillo and the Isidoro, in the North sea. The German ambassador at Madrid has written a private letter to the foreign minister expressing regret.

Two More Vessels Sunk.

PARIS, Aug. 21, 5:15 p. m.—A dispatch from Brest to the Havas agency reports the sinking of two steamships from American ports. The British steamer Carterswell of about 4,000 tons gross, which sailed on July 25 from Galveston for Havre with a cargo of grain, was sent to the bottom yesterday by a German submarine. Its crew of twenty-four was taken aboard a fishing boat.

The Belgian oil steamer Daghestan, 2,818 tons gross, from Philadelphia Aug. 6 for Rouen, and three sailing vessels also have been sunk.

RECEDING FLOOD REVEALS ELEVEN ST. LOUIS DEAD

Two Others Reported Lost in Nearby Districts; Police Prevent Looting.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21.—Eleven bodies of victims of the flood that swept a narrow section of St. Louis and suburbs on Friday were recovered today. The death toll in the territory round St. Louis was increased by one person.

The latest victim perished when a boat in which he was rowing with three others in East St. Louis capsized.

Of the eleven dead in St. Louis and suburbs, ten were negroes and one was a white woman. The farmer who was drowned near Edwardsville was Frank Luffmann.

Des Peres River Subsides.

The Des Peres river, the rise in which was responsible for most of the destruction of property and all the destruction of life on the Missouri side of the Mississippi, fell rapidly today and normal street car service to suburban towns was almost restored.

The Missouri Pacific railroad resumed suburban passenger service this afternoon. The St. Louis and San Francisco railroad, however, was handicapped by a rise in the Meramec river, which flows along the Frisco main line for 100 miles, and several bridges over the Gasconade river were threatened by a rise in that mountain stream.

Large Factories Damaged.

Several large factories along the Des Peres river were badly damaged by the flood, and most of these establishments will be closed for a week to ten days.

The police have closed in on the area which was inundated and lookout is kept to prevent looting.

Conservative estimates of the damage in St. Louis and St. Louis county alone place the loss at $1,000,000. Damage in Illinois in the neighborhoods of Edwardsville, Alton, East St. Louis, Granite City, and Anna, where crops were destroyed and homes washed away, has not been computed.

East St. Louis in Peril.

East St. Louis, Ill., Aug. 21.—Danger of a great flood here became imminent tonight, when the Wabash embankment, sixteen miles northeast of here, threatened to give way before waters flowing through a diversion channel.

Word was telephoned here that the water was within two feet of the top of the embankment, and that the embankment might give way. Two hundred and fifty men with 5,000 bags of sand were rushed to the scene to strengthen the embankment.

If the embankment breaks, the water will flow down the Cahokia valley through the main business section of East St. Louis.

Five square miles of East St. Louis already are under water, as a result of the partial flood here yesterday, but by far the greater part of the city, thus far, has escaped.

Indiana Farmers Big Losers.

Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 21.—Indiana farmers will suffer a loss of $25,000,000 on their wheat crop alone, due to the prolonged rainy weather, according to I. E. Kinney, one of the largest grain dealers in the state.

Capitalists Toil in Streets.

Galveston, Tex., Aug 21.—Hundreds of citizens, rich and poor, are being impressed into service here as street cleaners. These salvage gangs are rapidly cleaning away the mud and débris, some places piled ten feet high. Special efforts are being made to remove the rotting carcasses of animals.

Minnie Florrea, the 16 year old girl who was washed sixty miles from the Velasco coast guard station to the Galveston beach, owes her life to her distaste for salt water. When asked how she managed to float so far, she replied: "I never could stand to swallow salt water or get it in my eyes; so I kept my mouth and eyes shut, and the wind just blew me in."

Give Up Hope for Ship.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Practically all hope for the safety of the United Fruit steamer, Marowijne, overdue five days in New Orleans, was dissipated today when Capt. John Johnsen of the Sjoa, a vessel of the same line, reported that he had left the port of Belize, Honduras, twelve hours behind the Marowijne, and, following practically the same course, had neither seen nor heard anything from the steamship.

LAST BOAT VICTIM BURIED.

Hundreds Are Unable to Get Into Chapel at Funeral of Emma Meyers.

Emma Meyers, the last victim of the Eastland disaster, was buried yesterday afternoon at Oak Ridge cemetery. Coroner Hoffman and other county and city representatives attended the services in Sheldon's chapel, 912 West Madison street. An audience of 500 persons was crowded in the room and twice that number stood outside until the funeral procession passed.

COMPERS' ORDER SUSPENDS 100,000 UNION MEMBERS.

Members of Thirty-six Jewish Labor Organizations, Who Refused to Obey, Are Disciplined.

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—One hundred thousand members of thirty-six Jewish labor unions, which refused to obey the mandate of Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, to expel the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America, were suspended today by the Central Federated union.

This action, taken by Gompers' order, was a result, he said, of an attempt by east side labor leaders, acting through the clothing workers, to imbue the federation with socialism.

According to Gompers, the activity of socialist leaders became so intense as to assume the appearance of a rebellion within the federation and to threaten seriously the welfare of that organization.

SHIP BY WATER TO SCOTLAND

Cargo of Wheat Loaded in Chicago to Make Journey Across Seas.

A cargo of wheat was loaded yesterday at South Chicago for direct shipment to Leith, Scotland, the first direct shipment ever made from this market. The cargo is of over 100,000 bushels and is being shipped by Shaffer & Stream from their South Chicago elevator on the steamer Turret Chief. The boat will be lightened at Port Colborne, Canada, and will be reloaded with the part of the cargo lightened at Montreal. From Montreal it will go direct to Liverpool and thence to its destination at Leith, Scotland. The Turret Chief is a moderate sized boat.

SPOUSE STOLEN, GETS ANOTHER'S, SO WIFE CLAIMS

Mrs. James Abell Becomes Miss Vera Fife and Meets Arthur Weber.

About two years ago James Abell, an auto dealer in Los Angeles, deserted his wife and ran off with his stenographer. Mrs. Abell returned here to the home of her parents at 4517 Racine avenue, obtained a divorce, and took back her maiden name, Vera Fife.

She became acquainted with Mr. and Mrs. Arthur R. Weber of 4411 Beacon street. Weber is a dealer in automobile supplies at 1421 Michigan avenue. The Webers often took Miss Fife auto riding. Then Weber began leaving his wife at home and taught Miss Fife to drive his car.

Wife Refuses to Believe It.

Friends began to whisper things in Mrs. Weber's ear. She refused to listen. They couldn't be true, she said. Miss Fife and she were too good friends. Why, they had even gone to Delavan Lake, Wis. together. The friends then went to Miss Fife.

"Why shouldn't I steal him?" Miss Fife is quoted as having said. "Another woman ran off with my husband. Turn about is fair play."

Weber's mother, Mrs. Matilda Weber of 1251 Wilson avenue, appealed to her and received the same answer. Weber, however, promised to be good.

Arrested in Kenosha.

But on a certain afternoon in June a motorcycle policeman in Kenosha, Wis., stopped an automobile traveling at the rate of thirty miles an hour. Miss Fife was at the wheel.

It was Weber and Miss Fife.

"I've been waiting to hear something like this," said Mrs. Weber at that time. Her tone was grim.

That was all. On July 2 she went to Delavan with her two sons, Arthur Robert Jr. and Duncan. A week later she slipped back into town and went to a flat opposite her own in the next building. Miss Lulu Parks, a former policewoman, met her at the door. For a week Miss Parks had kept her eye on the Weber flat windows. The shades had not been drawn. Mrs. Weber went away and returned with her lawyer. Together they waited until 2 a. m., when a limousine deposited Weber and Miss Fife at the door. Mrs. Weber, weeping, made for her flat. What happened next was reported as follows:

She rushed inside and grabbed a revolver from her dresser drawer. The lawyer caught her hand. He quieted her until Miss Fife had time to put on her street clothes and slip towards the back door. Mrs. Weber overtook her and reached out with her toe. The kick was not wasted. The door slammed.

Bill for Liquor.

Before returning to Delavan Mrs. Weber obtained a signed contract from her husband to behave and a promise to pay her $40 a week. When she returned last Tuesday she found a toilet set belonging to Miss Fife in her apartment. Then there was a bill for liquor and beer and another for groceries enough for a dozen dinner parties.

Yesterday Mrs. Weber filed suit for a divorce, naming Miss Fife, setting forth that her husband had been accustomed to spending nearly all his $100 a week on other women and asking that she be awarded a substantial part of it.

Mrs. Weber has returned to Delavan; her husband is staying at the home of his parents, and Miss Fife, it was said, had gone to South Haven, Mich., to escape unpleasant publicity. The Weber children have been sent to a Michigan farm.

HERZOG FACTORY GIRLS CONFER

Chief Said to Have Urged End of Strike at Various Plants.

MILITANTS KEEP GOING.

The dove of peace hovered over the Herzog factories for the first time in a week yesterday following the report that instructions had been given by President Nathan Herzog to settle the strike at once.

Secretary Louis Herzog at noon invited a committee of the 800 strikers to a conference in his office.

Statement by Herzog.

The following statement was issued by Mr. Herzog:

"The newspapers have unintentionally given an erroneous notion of our differences with the glove workers. The incident which started the present controversy was stupid. It began with a wrangle between a worker and a foreman and could have been easily and satisfactorily adjusted had any member of the firm been consulted.

"There was no demand, nor has there been a demand for a change of hours or increase of wages. The working conditions at the factory are such as to make this place a model of its kind in the United States. The building is modern and was erected with the single purpose of making it the last word in construction which should consider the welfare of the workers. It was inspected by officials from the fire, health, and state factory inspection departments and pronounced by them to be perfect in its appointments.

"The Herzog policy has been democratic. The members of the firm have always been close to the workers and this incident could not have occurred had it not been for the fact that both partners were absent at the time. There are no stringent rules, no fines, and the wages are higher than those paid for similar work in any other factory in this country. The question of unionism has never been raised and we have never objected to membership in unions by our workers. Our house has always believed, and still believes, in the proper form of arbitration and it has been, is now, and will continue to be ready to submit any differences to fair adjustment."

Militants Fail to Moderate.

Though considered significant, this development failed to moderate the militant tone of a massmeeting of strikers held in the west side auditorium. Neither here nor at the Herzog factories on Throop street, where 100 girl pickets stood guard all day, was there any evidence of a desire to compromise.

Chief interest in the massmeeting centered about an effort to induce Polish girl workers in the factories to strike. Emily Napieralski, secretary of the Polish Women's alliance, made a stirring plea to her compatriots to aid in the fight.

"You are the money makers of America," she told them. "Stand with these strikers and suffer with them to the end—until the cause is won. You are fighting for the good of all other girl workers in America.

"We don't want starvation wages While we all want to work, we want to be paid for what we do—to earn a decent living, so there will be no necessity for a commission on morality or for seeking aid from the United Charities."

Big Union Head Due.

It was announced that Benjamin Schesinger, international president of the garment workers' union, will reach Chicago at 9 o'clock this morning to assist in organizing the garment workers of Chicago.

"This union spent $235,000 to win a strike in Cleveland," President John Fitzpatrick of the Chicago Federation of Labor said. "If the 10,000 ladies' garment workers in Chicago go out on strike you will see a real fight."

Chicago police and the city administration were scored by the speakers.

"Herzog can't intimidate us, with all the police and his hired detectives and gunmen behind him," President Fitspatrick shouted. "It looks as if the city police were being used to protect Herzog instead of the city. There's going to be an investigation to see if this is to be permitted."

Her Husband Got 'Burning' Letters.

MRS. ARTHUR COOMBS

Arthur H. Coombs, father of three grown sons and recipient of love letters from his cousin, Mrs. Cora V. Hill, that would make a Byron jealous, asserts he is not going to California right away to claim his new found soul mate, but intends to remain in Chicago and fight his wife's suit for separate maintenance.

Mrs. Olga Coombs found the letters and through them first learned of the "other woman." Mrs. Hill had not seen Coombs since they were children until a year ago when she stopped off in Chicago for a few hours and was invited to the Coombs home at 610 Cornelia avenue by Mrs. Coombs.

"She was a homely little wrinkled thing of 44," said Mrs. Coombs, "and not a bit attractive. Jealousy never entered my mind. She was of the gushing kind, so glad to see me. After dinner my husband and she talked together in the sitting room for a long time. It was then I lost him, though I did not know it until I found the letters long afterward. He took her to the train."

GRAND RAPIDS EXPRESS EMPLOYE HELD FOR THEFT.

Charged with Stealing Jewelry Shipped by Chicagoan, Says He Did It to Help Wife.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—An alleged confession by David Moran, former employé of the American Express company, is alleged by the police to clear up a robbery that has puzzled the company officials for some time. The jewelry, reported to have been taken from Moran, who was arrested yesterday while bargaining with a pawnshop proprietor, was being shipped by Edward Sturgis, a retired Chicago capitalist. It was valued at $5,000.

BUFFALO FIREMEN FIGHT TWO FIRES; LOSS $400,000.

Blazes Ocur at Same Time—Several Civilians and Three of Force Are Overcome by Smoke.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Buffalo firemen battled two big fires early today, the combined loss in which will total $400,000. While half the force was fighting flames in the Robertson-Cataract Electric company's plant and the Builders Exchange block, in Court street the other half was battling a blaze at the Globe Elevator company in Tennessee street. Several civilians and three firemen were overcome by smoke.

ENGINEER GETS STATE JOB.

A. H. Krom, 828 East Forty-second street, formerly electrical engineer in the city department of gas and electricity, has been appointed assistant telephone engineer on the staff of the state public utilities commission of Illinois. Mr. Krom is a graduate of Purdue university and has been active in the organization of the American Association of Engineers, recently formed in Chicago.

BOY MILLIONAIRE DISOWNS FATHER IN COURT ACTION.

William Crossman Mills Lee Decides Against Living with Parent—Likes Stepfather Better.

White Plains, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—William Crossman Mills Lee, the 14 year old millionaire, disowned his father in court today. His father, William Mills Jr. of Venice, Cal., had brought action to take him from his stepfather.

"Whom do you want to live with, my son," asked the counsel for the stepfather, "your present father, Mr. Lee, or your father, Mr. Mills?"

"I want to live with my father Lee," said the child, simply, and without a second's consideration.

Young Lee inherited $1,500,000 from the estate of his mother, Mrs. Georgia Crossman Mills Lee. Mrs. Lee divorced her husband, Mills, the boy's father, and married Lee. Recently she inherited a fortune from her father, William Crossman, a coffee importer. She left $50,000 to Mr. Lee and named him and his mother, Mrs. Kenyon Lee, as guardians for her son.

ASKS MORE TROOPS IN HAITI.

Admiral Caperton Wants Reinforcements to Protect Foreigners in Trouble Zones.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—The navy department today received a dispatch from Admiral Caperton suggesting the sending of reinforcements for his command.

Port au Prince and Cape Haitien were said to be adequately policed, but men were understood to be needed to protect foreigners at many other points where revolution is rampant.

Acting Secretary of the Navy Roosevelt announced that a battalion of artillery, comprising 350 men and twelve 3-inch field pieces, had been ordered to mobilize at Annapolis in readiness for Haitian duty. The men will be taken on the Tennessee, now returning from Haitian waters.

THE COST.

It should be understood by all who are ambitious to have a home that it does not require a huge bank account to secure an excellent class of furniture nowadays.

In other days period furniture was very expensive.

Avail yourself of the special knowledge that Revell & Co. have regarding the combination of well known artistic furniture and a very low price.

Whatever else you do, have the furnishings of your home indicate that you have taste and character. It means advancement for you always.

Avoid mere cheapness. Cheap furnishings at any price, and good furnishings at a low price, are two separate propositions.

PLACES MARKED ON "BLACKLIST" FOR SLUGGERS

97 Buildings Picked for Vandalism, Key Bared by Murder Reveals.

Assault, arson, and the destruction of property—any crime on the statute books. These were "services" expected of the crew of automobile sluggers who terrorized Chicago during the recent painters' strike. Their pay ranged from $40 a week to $200 for a big "job."

This discovery was made yesterday by the police in investigating the nature of the services for which Charles Victor, the labor slugger, shot and killed Thursday night, was demanding $1,000.

Arrest of the members of the sluggers' crew, which is said to have been directed by Roy Shields, a notorious gunman, is expected today. From the Criminal court building came the report that indictments against some of the sluggers would be considered next week.

Find Black List of Buildings.

Addresses of ninety-seven buildings marked for deeds of vandalism on the part of the sluggers' crew are contained in the "black list" of the Painters' District council, now in the possession of the police.

In order that each member of the gang of midnight automobile raiders, who sped past the buildings with bricks and slung shots and firebrands, might know the marked places, the list was mimeographed. Each member of the crew—there are believed to have been six—was provided with a copy. One of the copies fell into the hands of Lieut. McMahon of the Central Detail police station through the search that was made of the room occupied by Victor.

Police Look Up Places.

Although the police have not traced all the addresses on the list, they have discovered that enough of the places mentioned were attacked by sluggers to make positive the identification of the list. Several detectives were assigned to the work of finding out whether the buildings at the given addresses had been attacked or not.

Several other detectives scoured the city in search of William Clem, a "pal" of Victor, and the man who accompanied the latter to the painters' meeting when he met his death. Clem is said to have started out from the meeting with a revolver, intent on "getting" those responsible for the shooting of his associate.

State's Attorney Active.

Acting State's Attorney Frank Johnston Jr. assigned Assistant State's Attorneys Charles Center Case Jr. and John F. Higgins to watch the developments growing out of the Victor shooting and the inquiry into the activities of the labor sluggers. It was disclosed that for several months the state's attorney's office has been gathering information concerning shooting affrays and slugging assaults of various labor unions.

Lieut. McMahon instructed the detective sergeants assigned to the central station to be on the watch for labor officials with slugging propensities, and carrying revolvers, and to search them whenever possible. It is believed that there will be few gunmen in attendance at future meetings of labor unions.

Some Cases Investigated.

A few of the deeds of the painter sluggers' crew which are being investigated by the police are:

APRIL 29—Two sluggers entered house at 3556 Prairie avenue, attacked two nonunion painters. One identified as Steel Van Deusen, but prosecution was dropped.

APRIL 30—Plumbing in house of A. Seidler, 4441 Michigan avenue, torn out and walls smeared with black paint.

MAY 14—Windows in Western Union office, 433 North Clark street, smashed. Mark Clayton, William Klenz (believed to be Clem), and Thomas Hitt arrested, but acquitted by Judge Hopkins.

MAY 15—Two nonunion painters employed by Fales & Thayer beaten up at 1106 East Sixty-second street and the premises fired.

MAY—Sluggers set fire by a gasoline explosion to shop and garage of Joseph Davidson, business manager of the Employing Painters' association, 4823 Prairie avenue.

APRIL—Store of A. P. McEvoy, former president of employers' body, at 835 North Clark street, attacked. Beer bottles thrown through windows.

APRIL—C. J. Swanson, painter contractor at 5432 North Clark street, attacked and windows of his shop broken.

APRIL—Windows of shop of C. A. Erickson, 1020 North Clark street, smashed.

APRIL, MAY, and JUNE—Windows of store of J. T. Driscoll, head of the contractors, smashed, six times in all.

MAY—Three windows being installed by George D. Milligan company on State street smashed by sluggers.

Judges Afraid to Sentence?

Charges that certain judges are afraid to sentence labor sluggers, even though the evidence warrants it, came from Mr. Driscoll.

"When the windows in the Western Union store on State street were smashed a bystander took the number of the automobile," he said. "He reported it, and the police found the automobile with three men and a woman in it, as well as one of the identical slungshots found in Victor's room. Judge Hopkins refused to send the men to the house of correction."

Assistant Chief of Police Schuettler also said that great difficulty was experienced by the police in obtaining convictions.

Not Confined to Painters.

The list of addresses was not confined to buildings on which nonunion painters were employed, but included buildings where other nonunion workmen were hired, or where nonunion material was installed. Among these picked out for depredations were J. T. Driscoll, C. A. Erickson, George D. Mulligan company, painter contractors; the South park board, the Cosmopolitan Glass company, the Manhattan building, the Great Northern hotel, the Citizens' brewery, the Gottfried Brewing company, and the Standard brewery.

Following the list of addresses, the existence of which was disclosed by THE TRIBUNE, a notation is made of the class of nonunion workmen originally involved. "P" stands for painters, "G" for glaziers, "S. M. W." for sheet metal workers, "L" for lathers, "E" for electricians, "F.H." for fixture hangers. The list follows:

Rich "Kids" Also Enjoy Summer Sports.

DOROTHY VAN STEENDEREN
JANE McLENNAN
JACK DURAND

The "poor little children of the rich" had the time of their lives yesterday afternoon at the Winter club in Lake Forest, where some fifty of them participated in all kinds of outdoor amusements and sports, from swimming in the artificial pool to running footraces.

Beginning early this summer, W. H. Austin, athletic instructor, has been carefully training his small charges in the various outdoor sports, and in yesterday's exhibitions they showed agility in everything they undertook.

Dorothy Van Steenderen demonstrated how to "sail" across the lake in a tub, and Jane McLennan steered her baby sailing vessel to victory against all comers.

Jack Durand was a regular "seal" in the water. A large crowd of parents were present.

FILES CASH REPLY TO SUIT.

City Answers Mandamus Proceeding with Information That Funds Are on Hand.

The city of Chicago yesterday filed an answer in the Superior court to the suit brought by Oliver Chadwick against it and Charles H. Sergel, city treasurer, seeking a writ of mandamus compelling the payment of a voucher for $125. The city admits the allegations, averring that the ordinances under which Chadwick seeks payment were legal and recites that there is now on hand ample funds from which the voucher can be paid.

SOCIALISTS PLAN TO TAKE UP PROHIBITION QUESTION.

They Will Hold Convention to Finally Discuss Subject in Chicago Next Month.

The Socialist party, which has never been known to favor prohibition, is undergoing a change. This is evidenced by the fact that they have called a convention of elected delegates from the thirty-five ward organizations in Cook county to be held at Phoenix hall, at Division and Sedgwick streets, on Sunday, Sept. 19. It will be attended by more than 400 delegates to decide on the question: "What position shall the Socialist party take regarding liquor?"

A lively discussion is expected, as quite a number of the Socialist organizations that have already elected delegates have instructed them to support the prohibition side of the argument. Some members of the foreign speaking language organizations are members of the United Societies, and a strong effort no doubt will be made by them to prevent the Socialist party from taking any position on the question under discussion.

JUDGE THOMPSON ORDERS ARREST OF BUCKMINSTER.

Capias Issues for Man Under Indictment as Member of "Arson Trust" When He Fails to Appear.

Capiases for the arrest of Frederick Buckminster, former detective sergeant, under indictment on charges of arson and burning to defraud, were issued yesterday by Judge Charles M. Thomson when the defendant failed to appear. The case is one of the so-called "arson trust."

Buckminster was indicted in connection with a fire at the Northwestern Can company's plant, West Kinzie and Orleans streets, four years ago.

On motion of Acting State's Attorney Frank Johnston Jr. the bonds of Buckminster were increased from a total of $30,000 to $40,000. The prosecutor asserted that he had information that the defendant was planning to flee and forfeit his bond and that one of the sureties had conveyed his property.

Section Hand, Disappointed at So Much Idleness, Tries to Beat Out Brains.

Tony Falco, a section hand who lives with thirty other workers beside the Northwestern tracks near Howard avenue saw it was raining when he woke up yesterday morning.

"That settles it," he said. "I'm through. Every day it rains. I can't work, and if I don't work I get docked. I'm going to end it all."

Taking a twelve pound sledge, Falco stepped from the shack and began to hammer himself on the head. He was stopped by his Italian companions and taken to St. Francis' hospital.

N. E. A. AIMS AT IMPROVEMENT IN RURAL SCHOOLS

Committee Will Take Steps to Better the Health of the Country Pupils.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Oakland, Cal., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Penny lunches, dental inspection, and school nurses, which in the past have been associated with schools of the cities, will be introduced to 12,000,000 rural school children if the plans of the health committee of the National Education association carry.

The report of the committee was made public today by Chairman Thomas D. Wood of Columbia university. Though nearly every member of the committee comes from a large city, the committee has spent its efforts on the health of rural school children, and its program for next year will be along the same line. It works with a committee of the American Medical association.

Prof. Wood stated that the children of the rural schools are less healthy and handicaped more by physical defects than the children of the cities, including all children of the slums.

Rural School Health Neglected.

"We are working on the health and welfare problems of the rural schools," his report read, "because we believe it is the most important and most neglected phase of the welfare problem in the United States. As a result of our preliminary studies we have demonstrated that the rural school is in sanitation and general fitness for its important use, relatively the worst type of building in the whole country, including not only all types of buildings used by human beings, but also those used for live stock and all domestic animals.

"There are two reasons why the children of the country are not as healthy as those of the city. The country home and the country school are, on the average, less sanitary than the city home and school. The country school child at home and at school receives less intelligent instructions on health care than the city child. Relative to their importance, the country children receive less careful attention than all the other living things that grow on the farm.

Works for Country's Welfare.

"Our program is to do all within our power to influence the country to improve the healthfulness and attractiveness of the rural school and the health and general welfare of the country school children. We are sure that the country school is the strategic agency through which to improve the health, welfare, and general standards of the living of the rural community as a whole."

The committee during the coming year wants to publish a report on "the condition and care of the health of rural school children" which is ready for publication, then duplicate the health charts it has at the Panama Pacific exposition and to sell them at cost, to offer prizes for the improvement of rural schools, to gather information from all parts of the country about noteworthy improvements being made, and about provisions for the better care of the health of the country school children.

The committee asked for an appropriation of $10,000 to carry on its work.

GERMANY HOLDS ITS LAWS BIND TEUTONS IN U. S.

World Charges Envoy Warned Munitions Concern of Its Penal Liability.

viser of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company, an importing and manufacturing concern whose principal office is at 23 Tempelhoffer, Berlin, with branches throughout the civilized world, including many states in the American union, and operating with a capital of 63,000,000 marks (about $16,000,000).

A. LICHTENSTEIN, New York manager of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company, whose headquarters are at 30 Church street.

DR. LANDSBERGER, a legal adviser of the German ambassador.

ERICH JOSEPH, general manager of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company's plant at Koppel, Pa.

First Letter to Von Bernstorff.

The correspondence relating to the setting aside of American law governing the conduct of persons protected by it is confined to a period of four months of the present year, March 11 t[illegible]17.

The first letter relating to the subject was written by Mr. Kaufmann on March 11 and addressed to his excellency, Count von Bernstorff at the Ritz-Carlton hotel, New York City. Mr. Kauffmann in this communication called the attention of the German ambassador to an order for 9,000 tons of portable railway track to be shipped to Russia. He asked the German ambassador if the acceptance and fulfillment of this order would come within the provision of paragraph 89 of the "Gesetzbuch," the German penal code, and whether the German ambassador would give his consent to the acceptance and execution of the order in question.

Ambassador Sanctions Contract.

Inclosed in the letter was a communication also addressed to Count von Bernstorff by the "Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company per A. Lichtenstein, manager," setting forth that the Russian order could be filled by any one of a number of firms in the United States; that it represented a profitable business, and that the firm would have no hand in its delivery.

In this connection, however, Lichtenstein, in referring to the probable destination of the shipment, added: "But we can also eventually get the shipment in hand, if that should be desired"; also "that complete returns will be made later through our Berlin headquarters."

On the same day that the imperial ambassador received Kaufmann's letter he acknowledged it, saying he had no objection to the acceptance of the order by the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel concern. To make sure of the fact, however, the ambassador referred it to Dr. Landsberger for an opinion as to the application of the German penal code in the United States.

Suggests Delay in Order.

In a letter of March 29, apparently inspired by the request of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company for as great expedition as possible, was inclosed an opinion by Dr. Landsberger and indorsed and approved by Orenstein of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company. The letter was not signed, though there is little doubt that it was written by Dr. Landsberger. In it the writer says:

"The firm can, if it accepts the order, help the German cause by delay in executing it, for which purpose there are a variety of possibilities; for instance, by securing an agreement for a longer delivery term, by delay in shipments, etc. In like manner other German firms have proceeded successfully."

At another point in the letter is this passage:

"The question is even raised as to whether it would not be possible for him [the manager of the Orenstein branch] to get the shipment in hand, to have it made through the Baltic sea, and to advise me seasonably of the departure of the steamer."

Opinion Sets Forth Penalties.

The opinion inclosed in this letter is without date. It establishes the fact that a decree was published by the imperial government last fall providing that "any person who knowingly and contrary to any German embargo on exports shipped goods to a hostile country, either directly or indirectly, will be punished by imprisonment for three years and a fine of not exceeding 50,000 marks, or either."

That there are exceptions to this penalty is established by the statement in the opinion that paragraph 89 of the German penal code provides a punishment of "imprisonment for not to exceed ten years in the penitentiary or in a military fortress," of any person "who intentionally, during any war against the German empire, renders assistance to a hostile power or inflicts loss or damage upon the military forces of the German empire or upon those of any ally of theirs."

The opinion states that paragraph 89 of the German penal code "can, for instance, be imposed, if any of our subjects in foreign countries, America, for instance, avail themselves of existing supplies for shipment to hostile powers."

Delays in Accepting Order.

This opinion seems to have delayed action on the part of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company until July 13, when Erich Joseph, writing on the letter head of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company of Koppel, Pa., put the matter up to Dr. Stobbe, the imperial German consul at Philadelphia.

After reciting the facts, as outlined above, Mr. Joseph inclosed all the correspondence herewith presented, and asked the German consul general to advise him if the order should be taken, as it was the opinion of the New York branch that the order should be refused.

Consul General Stobbe replied to Mr Joseph's letter on July 16, sending a copy of it to Cedarhurst, Long Island, where the German embassy was established for the summer. Prince von Hatzfeldt, chancellor of the embassy, received the communications from Dr. Stobbe and forwarded them to Privy Councilor Heinrich F. Albert, the chief German financial agent in New York.

"In my opinion it would be hazardous for your firm to ship locomotive cars or wheels to Russia," Dr. Stobbe's reply says. "All these transportation means would lighten the transport of troops, ammunition and provisions for the Russian government and your firm would, within the meaning of paragraph 89 of the penal code, be rendering aid to the enemy thereby."

Sweeping aside the plea of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company that the articles desired by Russia could be secured from other firms and that the Orenstein-Koppel company would not have any hand in the delivery of the material to the Russian government, the German consul general says that these reasons "will in no measure relieve you from liability. Inasmuch as, according to your letter, you do not wish to violate either the letter or the spirit of the German law, nor the love for the fatherland, I would respectfully suggest that you propose to your home office in Berlin that the orders in question be refused for the reasons mentioned."

Application of German Law.

The first letter in the correspondence relating to the application of the German law in the United States from Kaufmann to Count von Bernstorff inclosed the following letter, also addressed to Count von Bernstorff by Manager Lichtenstein of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company presumably at the suggestion of Kaufmann:

[Translation.]

"Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company, No. 30 Church street, New York, March 11, 1915.

"His Excellency Count von Bernstorff, imperial German ambassador, at present Hotel Ritz-Carlton:

"We respectfully refer to a conversation had with Mr. H. F. Albert yesterday afternoon, and take the liberty of informing your excellency of the following facts:

"Some months ago an American came to us who represented himself as a business friend of a local Russian firm and offered us a large order of portable railway track, altogether 9,000 tons, consisting of rails, ties, and appurtenances. These rails, ties, etc., are all current material here in the states and can be manufactured without trouble by any steel mill, as they are not covered by any patents and trade marks, and can be ordered from any other firm here.

Suggests Delaying Shipments.

"The negotiations with our American business friend in behalf of his connections in Russia have now progressed so far that we are ready to close the contract. But before we go into this business further we would respectfully beg to ask whether such business is not in conflict with existing German laws.

"We wish to state here that we will only sell the material free on board ship at New York, against payment here in New York to a first class American bank; and, further, that we ourselves will not manufacture the goods, but will pass the order on, as soon as received, to the United States Steel corporation for filling. In view of these facts we are in a position to supervise carefully the production of the materials, and to delay the order, if that would in any way be desirable.

Could Control Shipment.

"As stated above, we are selling the material, free on board, in New York, and, therefore, have nothing to do with the direct shipment of the material, also do not know to what port the shipment is to go, but we can also eventually get the shipment in hand, if that should be desired.

"We have further explained that the whole order can be filled by any American steel plant, and we, therefore, believe that we will not in any way violate paragraph 89 of the penal code. Through the filling of the order in the manner stated we will only bring profits to a German firm, as complete returns will be later made through our Berlin headquarters.

"In view of the especial urgency of our decision in this matter, we beg your excellency for as prompt a reply as possible and remain, in expectation of further advice, very respectfully yours,

"ORENSTEIN-ARTHUR KOPPEL COMPANY,

"Per A. Lichtenstein, Manager."

Ambassador Gives His Consent.

The urgent request of both Kaufmann and Manager Lichtenstein for an early reply moved Count von Bernstorff to send from the Ritz-Carlton hotel the following acknowledgement of both communications to Kaufmann:

(Translation)

"Imperial German Embassy, Washington, D. C., March 11, 1915.

"Mr. S. Walter Kaufmann, counselor at law, 60 Wall street, New York City.

"My Dear Mr. Kaufmann: To the letter of March 11, 1915, from the firm Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company, as well as to your own letter of the same day, I respectfully reply that according to the statements contained in both letters, as well as in view of your conversation with Mr. Albert, who has informed me of the substance thereof, I have no objections to the acceptance of the order by the firm Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company, and feel sure that there is no possibility of a conflict with the German laws, in respect to paragraph 89 of the penal code.

"Very respectfully,

(Not signed)

"Imperial ambassador."

Sees German Cause Helped.

The next letter of the series, relating to the business ventures of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company, while dated and manifestly directed to the German ambassador, does not bear any signature. There is little doubt, however, that it was written by Dr. Landsberger. It is as follows:

(Translation.)

"March 11, 1915.

"I respectfully return to your excellency the letter of Attorney S. Walter Kaufmann, together with the letter of the manager of the branch of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company of March 11, 1915, with the following remarks:

"Both of the gentlemen talked the matter over with me yesterday. The question of law as to how far the firm would violate the German decree in making the shipment was thoroughly discussed. An opinion regarding the meaning of the law is respectfully inclosed. According to it, it depends upon whether the firm intentionally renders assistance to a hostile power by the shipment.

"This question appears to me to be whether the shipment is undoubtedly intended for Russia. It refers to an order which, if it is not accepted by the Orenstein firm, not only can be filled by another American firm but without doubt will be filled.

Conduct of Other Concerns.

"On the other hand, the firm can, if it accepts the order, help the German cause by delay in executing it, for which purposes there are a variety of possibilities, for instance, by securing an agreement for a longer delivery term, by delay in shipments, etc. In like manner other German firms have proceeded successfully.

"The manager of the Orenstein branch is prepared to employ like means and has given me firm assurances, which, trusting to the advice of the attorney, Kaufmann, I thoroughly believe in. The question was even raised as to whether it would not be possible for him to get the shipment in hand, to have it made through the Baltic sea, and to advise me seasonably of the departure of the steamer.

"Aside from that, the great advantages are to be considered which the taking of this order will produce, not only for the German firm itself but also indirectly for the German economic condition itself, material influences of the commercial value of the mark through consignments of the money to Germany, etc. Under these circumstances I am, therefore, of the opinion that the cause of the special state of affairs which will be the result of the taking of this order and in view of the verbal assurances given not only will the scienter disappear but the giving of assistance to the enemy will not be fulfilled.

"If your excellency indorses this agreement I pledge myself to supply a certificate, a draft of which is inclosed, which the Orenstein firm can later employ for the improbable possibility that difficulties might later arise in Germany.

(Not signed.)

"To the imperial ambassador, Washington, D. C., at present Hotel Ritz-Carlton, New York City."

Opinion by German Counselor.

The opinion sent along with the above letter by Dr. Landsberger and approved by Mr. Orenstein for the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company, to whom it was submitted, is in German, of which the following is a translation:

"Opinion—Regarding shipments to hostile countries.

"According to the decree published last fall, any person who knowingly and contrary to any German embargo on exports, ships goods to a hostile country, either directly or indirectly, will be punished by imprisonment for three years and a fine of not exceeding 50,000 marks, or either.

"The text of the decree states, 'in so far as other greater punishments are not provided in other penal statutes.' This excerpt refers us especially to (probably) paragraph 89 of the penal code, which provides that any German who intentionally, during the war against the German empire, renders assistance to a hostile power, or inflicts loss, or damage, upon the military forces of the German empire, or upon those of any ally of theirs, shall be punished by imprisonment for not to exceed ten years in the penitentiary or in a military fortress. Under certain conditions then, the infringement of the embargo on exports can be punished by this harsher penalty provided in the penal code.

Law Applicable in America.

"The above mentioned provision of the penal code can, however, also find application even if the infringement of an embargo export does not take place. For the penalty provides by paragraph 89, in the penal code, is imposed for all shipments and other trade by any German during the war, by means of which international assistance is rendered to a hostile power. It can, for instance, be imposed if any of our subjects in foreign countries, America for instance, avail themselves of existing supplies for shipments to hostile powers

"In this connection 'shipments to hostile nations' are to be understood as embracing those also which are at first consigned to a business house in a neutral country, by which, however, it is understood the goods are intended for further shipment to a hostile country. On the other hand, it is to be observed that according to paragraph 89 a penalty is not incurred when the infringement is due to carelessness or negligence, but only when intentional assistance is rendered to a hostile power. There must then be a scienter, and whether such is the case is a question for the courts to decide in view of all the surrounding circumstances.

Company Accept Opinion.

"It would, therefore, be appropriate to find out if the leaders of our foreign governments were advised not to proceed according to their own opinions as to doubtful shipments to neutral countries and shipments direct to hostile countries, but in each such case to secure the opinion of the proper imperial representatives as to whether assistance will be rendered to a hostile nation through the contemplated shipment, and then to govern themselves accordingly."

The copy, which was originally corrected to read as this one does, was signed "Dr. Landsberger," and was followed by this:

"I indorse the above opinion and suggestion, and hereby transmit to the managers of our branches the advice that they observe is carefully.

"B. ORENSTEIN."

Another Letter on Subject.

If there was any correspondence between March 11 and July 13 relating to the affairs of the Orenstein-Arthur Koppel company it is not in the possession of the World. The next communication available is the appeal written on the latter date by Manager Joseph of the Koppel plant to Dr. Stobbe, the German consul general at Philadelphia, for instructions as to the obligations of the firm to recognize the application of the laws of Germany in the United States. Dr. Stobbe's reply to the letter follows:

[Translation.]

"Philadelphia, Pa., July 16, 1915.

"The Imperial German consulate, No. 266 South Seventh street.

"In replying please refer to J No. 3099-15.

"In my opinion it would be hazardous for your firm to ship locomotives, cars, or wheels to Russia. All these transportation means would lighten the transport of troops, ammunition, and provisions for the Russian government, and your firm would within the meaning of paragraph 89 of the penal code be rendering aid to the enemy thereby. The circumstances which you mentioned, viz.:

"[A] That Russia would secure the mentioned articles from another American firm in case they are not furnished by your firm;

"[B] That you will deliver the material free on board at New York and not know to what port the shipment will go;

"[C] That you are in a position to delay the delivery of the order to the prejudice of the hostile country ordering them, will in no measure relieve you from liability. Inasmuch as, according to your letter, you do not wish to violate either the letter or the spirit of the German law nor the love for the fatherland, I would respectfully suggest that you propose to your home office in Berlin that the orders in question were refused for the reasons mentioned. Very respectfully yours,

"IMPERIAL CONSUL.

Gossard Styles for Fall

IN twenty-six Spring and Fall seasons we have never offered so many beautiful models with new style and comfort features.

Tomorrow these new models will be shown for the first time this season at our three stores.

Every designer, tailor and couturier insists on a carefully corseted figure this season. Some advocate very close corseting, and our world-wide organization tells us that women generally welcome this change.

Almost every magazine has some article on "The return to well fitted corsets," and the choice of discriminating women is largely in favor of Gossards—the original front-lacing corset.

With dozens of different models in every conceivable kind of dainty white and pink material, and a corps of Graduate Corsetieres in three stores conveniently located to facilitate your shopping, we invite you to a trial fitting in any of these new Gossard Corsets—tomorrow.

For Tall Figures

A new special Gossard for the tall, rather large proportioned figure. Gives figure a well rounded, graceful effect. In both Pink and White Brocaded Silk Batiste, $12.50.

A General Purpose Model

A general purpose model with elastic sections in skirt, medium bust and fitted waist.
In a fine, though heavy Coutil—a striking value at $5.00.
Charge accounts solicited.

Keeping faith with their customers, O. W. Richardson & Co. have become known as the leading Rug and Carpet house of the West.

This same practice is establishing rapidly the new furniture department.

The fact that we are out of the high rent district, coupled with our combined wholesale and retail buying, enables us to reduce greatly our prices. When we show the Semi-Annual Sale prices reduced from the former prices, you must keep in mind that the former prices are in themselves great reductions under the so-called regular prices. ARTISTS' MODEL, ESTRANGED, SAYS SHE'LL SUE

Mrs. W. F. Stone Living Apart from Husband, a Crerar Library Employe.

Mrs. W. F. Stone, a model who poses at the Art institute and lives at 1460 East Fifty-seventh street, is living apart from her husband. When she gets enough money saved up, she says, she is going to sue for a divorce. Mr. Stone is employed at the John Crerar library and is the son of a former federal jurist at Denver, Colo.

"I loved my husband dearly for over nine years, but not long ago he started to treat me severely," the wife said. "He said I needed discipline. I rebelled against this and all my love turned. Now I no longer care for him. I have two dear little kiddies that I can and have been supporting through sewing and through my work as a model."

Art Shop Failed.

Mrs. Stone married when she was 20. She and her husband opened a little art shop below her apartment, but business did not go well at all. So the shop was closed, and now all the pictures adorn the walls of the model's Bohemian apartments. Mr. Stone has traveled widely and is an art critic, but he delighted too much in abstruse mathematics, his wife asserts.

"Mr. Stone is very impracticable," said Mrs. Stone last night. "All I have is my beautiful auburn hair which makes me useful for posing. Of late I have been posing as a Japanese girl—you know—with one of those luxurious mandarin black silk gowns and a rose in my hair.

Wants to Keep "Kiddies."

"I never pose without drapery. I want to keep the kiddies and you never can tell but what that sort of thing might hurt my chances of keeping them. My husband was here tonight. Saturday night is his evening to see the children."

OFFICIALS KNOW IDENTITY OF LEO M. FRANK SLAYER?

Gov. Harris Keeps Secret Some Steps in Investigation—Claims Ignorance of Names of Lynchers.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 21.—It was intimated in official circles here tonight that the identity of a member of the so-called "vigilance committee" that lynched Leo M. Frank was known to some officials and that the information probably would be placed before Gov. Harris next week.

Nothing that seemed likely to lead to identification of any of the men had come to the governor today, he announced. He said early in the day that he was not making public all steps he had taken to investigate the abduction and lynching, and this caused some speculation. The statement even was interpreted by some to mean that he knew who some of the men were, but he later said there was no such significance to his words.

Gov. Harris today conferred with Herbert Clay, solicitor for the Blue Ridge circuit, in which Cobb county is situated, and Judge J. H. Patterson, Superior court judge in that circuit. After a long conference late today Judge Patterson let it be known that he would prepare a special charge to the grand jury which will meet Sept. 1. Mr. Clay assured the governor he would do all in his power to find and bring to trial men responsible for the lynching.

OPPOSES FRANK FUND MOVE.

Opposition to the collection of a fund for the apprehension of the lynchers of Leo M. Frank was voiced yesterday by Maurice B. Kovnat, secretary of the Anti-Capital Punishment Society of America.

"I am opposed to the movement to send outside money to Georgia to aid in apprehending the Frank slayers," said Mr. Kovnat, "for the reason that citizens of that state have brought the stain of illegal murder on their own heads, and it is up to them to vindicate themselves without help from outsiders.

"I am as much opposed to the hanging of the criminals that hanged Frank as I am to the hanging of any criminals."

Confesses Slaying Negress.

James Atkins, alias Fred O'Connor, a negro, was arrested in Gary, Ind., yesterday and confessed, the police say, to slaying Mrs. Mary Cross, a negress, in her home, 31 East Twenty-eighth street, with an ax the night of Aug. 13.

AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHERS

Will Be Pleased to Know of the New and Perfect Service Installed by the Buck & Rayner Stores.

Films left at any of their five stores before 9 a. m. will be finished before 5 p. m. the same day. This enterprising firm has just installed a model plant for developing and finishing and expense has not been spared in the equipment. Their contention is that pictures worth taking well are pictures worth making well.

Experts have been placed in charge of this department with something besides salary to look forward to, and the one great aim will be to give service and superior work.

Smaller firms and those who do not have their own finishing plant are obliged to send their work out to some other firm, and the result is that several jobs are developed together, part of which may be underexposed and part over-exposed. But with the Buck & Rayner system each film will be developed separately, which will insure just the proper exposure on each negative.

No work will be taken in their plant except that of their own customers, and their prices will be no more than that charged for ordinary work and slower service. Films left at any of their stores before 9 a. m. can be called for at 5 p. m. the same day. The aim of this new department is to have the amateur make the nearest B. & R. store his photograph headquarters.

As a special inducement for a few days the Buck & Rayner stores will make you a beautiful enlargement, 5x7, of your chosen negative, absolutely free with a developing and printing order amounting to one dollar.—Advertisement.

Art Model Wants Divorce.

WHAT'S A MERE HUSBAND TO A WOMAN IF THERE'S A DOG?

One Man Asserts Positively His Wife Thought More of Fido than of Him.

"I would rather lose my husband than my dog—I care more for my dog by a mile than I do for Arthur, and would much rather get rid of Arthur than my dog."

This was his wife's statement, according to Arthur S. Stangland in a cross bill filed yesterday in the Superior court, in which he asks freedom from Mrs. Maud Stangland.

He charges she was infatuated with one Barthorpe, with whom, by auto, she visited various resorts of questionable nature. He also asserts he has pictures of her, kissing and hugging Peter Duesing, and that he found her in the company of one Hudson, wearing only a night gown.

When he complained of her conduct, he asserts she threw a cup of hot coffee at him, which, fortunately, he dodged.

CHILD KILLED BY WAGON.

Delivery Driver Held After 2 Year Old Boy Is Run Down in Street.

Two year old Edward Tokarske, 1538 Wolfram street, was instantly killed at noon yesterday when he was struck and run over by a delivery wagon driven by Charles Weber, 1565 Clybourn avenue. Weber is being held at the Sheffield avenue police station to await the coroner's investigation. The accident happened in front of the Tokarske home.

EASTLAND U. S. GRAND JURY REPORT MAY BE DELAYED.

Not Ready for Two Weeks, District Attorney Clyne Says—Landis Orders Damage Claims Filed.

The federal grand jury which has been investigating the Eastland tragedy since July 29 adjourned yesterday after listening to the testimony of one witness—William Nicholas, local steamboat inspector. The grand jury will resume its deliberations on Tuesday. It is understood that the delay is occasioned by the preparation of further evidence in the office of United States District Attorney Charles F. Clyne.

"The grand jury probably will not be ready to report for two weeks," Mr. Clyne said.

Upon receiving from Charles E. Kremer, attorney for the St. Joseph-Chicago Steamship company, a conveyance of the Eastland to Denis Sullivan, Chicago vessel agent, newly appointed trustee of the boat, Judge Landis issued a notice to all persons having claims against the steamship company arising out of the accident of July 24 to file them under oath with a commissioner to be appointed later, who will also hear the claims for damage.

OBREGON BACKS CARRANZA; FINAL REPLY AWAITED

Rejection of Suggestions by U. S. and Latin Americans May Force Action.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—Gen. Alvarado Obregon, foremost of all the Mexican leaders operating under the direction of Gen. Carranza, has informed the United States and the Latin-American republics of Argentina, Brazil, Chile, Bolivia, Uruguay, and Guatemala that he will remain loyal to his chief.

"My opinion is," Obregon says, "that if our sister republics sincerely desire for our beloved Mexico a future of peace and prosperity and are ready to lend their aid to accomplish it they could do so by allowing the Constitutionalist administration to end its work of pacification and to establish a really democratic government."

Carranza's Reply Not Awaited.

Only the formal reply from Gen. Carranza rejecting the suggestions of diplomatic representatives of the seven American nations is now needed to convince officials here that there is no hope for the restoration of peace in Mexico except by the use of force. The Carranza reply is expected to be received not later than Tuesday, which is the last day in the ten indicated by the diplomats as a reasonable period within which the answers should be forwarded.

Gen. Carranza expects to send his reply from Mexico City. In it he will again state his claims to the leadership in Mexico and ask for recognition from the United States and the six other republics. The reply of itself will necessitate another conference between Secretary Lansing and the Latin-American diplomats. It probably will be held in New York next Thursday or Friday.

Brazilian Minister Received.

President Wilson today devoted a portion of his time to the consideration of affairs in Mexico. The president received at the White House Señor Cardoza, the Brazilian minister to Mexico, who for more than a year has been in charge of affairs there. The president thanked Señor Cardoza warmly for the manner in which he has looked after American interests. Between now and the next conference between Secretary Lansing and the Latin-American diplomats, the Brazilian minister will be asked freely about conditions in Mexico.

On Monday evening Secretary of State Lansing will entertain the Latin-American diplomats at dinner in honor of the Brazilian minister. It is expected to bring about even more friendly relations between North and South America and it may result in a decision on the part of the Latin-American diplomats to act jointly with the United States in the future discussion of the Mexican situation.

Speculation Over the Outcome.

There is much speculation here as to what the outcome of the conference will be if the Latin-American participants are not willing to act jointly in the future. In many quarters it is believed that the situation can have only one outcome and that that is armed intervention.

On the other hand, the conference may renew its representations to Carranza, thus delaying the use of force as long as possible.

Nogales, Ariz., Aug. 21.—Hermosillo, capital of Sonora, was taken today by Carranza forces under command of Col. Carlos Carranza, according to a report received here, and Gen. P. Elias Calles is expected tomorrow to attack Nogales, just across the American line, and its Villa garrison, under Gov. Maytorena.

SALESMAN WRITES NOTE; ENDS LIFE ON SOUTH SIDE.

G. W. Weber of Prairie Avenue Shows Devotion to Mother and Sister Before Shooting Self.

G. W. Weber of 5312 Prairie avenue, a salesman, shot himself in the head at Washington park yesterday. He was unconscious and in a critical condition when taken to the Washington Park hospital. He had written this note:

"I can't stand it no longer as this has been the worst day yet. My head is driving me mad and I cannot control myself any longer. I am worn out with my feelings. I kiss the hand of my beloved mother and sister and beg of them to forgive me. The only peace they will have will be had when I am gone. I ask the Lord for peace for my soul.

"G. W. WEBER."

On the other side of the envelope was the following scrawl:

"Notify H. C. Van Pelt, care of F. H. Noble & Co., 555 West Fifty-ninth street. Phone Wentworth 590."

ROBBED BY HIS NEW FRIENDS

Sorenson Also Badly Beaten Up by Strangers Whose Acquaintance He Made.

Ollie Sorenson, 162 West Oak street, was beaten and robbed of a bank book and $3 in currency last night in Washington square by two men whose acquaintance he had made the night previous. His bruises and a possible fracture of the jaw were dressed by an ambulance physician. The men had obtained his address the night before and, visiting him invited him to the park, where they attacked him.

CHICAGO BLIND ENJOY ANNUAL OUTING IN PARK

Boys and Girls Use the Swings with Zest and the Older Folks Dance.

A boy with his knuckles white from gripping the ropes squirmed with joy as the swing in National grove, near Riverside, glided higher and higher from the ground his eyes had never seen.

In another corner of the park two girls, clasping each other's crossed hands, swung round and round, and although their heads were thrown back they could not see the sun breaking through the clouds which had been threatening all day.

It was the eleventh annual picnic of the Social and Mutual Advancement Association of the Blind yesterday, and more than 100 persons, including a few who could see, were there.

Blind Lead Blind.

Incidentally, the blind were constantly leading the blind without disastrous results. When once one of the sightless had been shown where a tree or a bench was, he or she was able to guide fellow members of the club in perfect safety. Members took turns in going down the long lane from the grove to the car line to assist late comers.

The blind folk danced to music played by the blind; they held races and walked about under the trees. Although a few stumbled, not one fell, and no one lost the way.

When John Peardon, who is a piano tuner, arrived at the park he asked to be taken at once to the dance hall. He had tools with him, for he had been told the club could have the use of the dance hall if the piano, which was in a deplorable state, could be repaired.

Piano Gets Tuning.

By the time the rest of the crowd including the orchestra, arrived the piano was in shape and what was more, according to Charles Johnson, one of the piano tuners for the public schools, a sound was produced every time a key was played. The man who had the peanut concession in the park said he didn't think it was possible.

"This society is organized for the social and economic advantage of the members," said Dr. Jacob Bolotin, a blind physician.

MOOSE ANNUAL OUTING TO FOX RIVER AUG. 29.

Numerous State and City Notables Invited to Take Part in Pilgrimage at Mooseheart.

Aug. 29 will be Moose day in Illinois. It will be the first annual pilgrimage to Mooseheart, the Mecca, school, and home of the Loyal Order of Moose, on the banks of Fox river, four miles from Aurora.

Moose from all over Illinois and various parts of the nation are to attend. The committee in charge predicts a crowd of more than 5,000.

State and city officials have been invited to participate, the honorary executive committee including Gov. Dunne, Lieut.-Gov. O'Hara, Mayor Thompson, former Gov. Deneen, Mayor Jones of Blue Island, County Treasurer Stuckart, County Clerk Sweitzer, and many others.

The general committee is composed of Edward J. McGuire, chairman; Edward A. Denney, assistant chairman; Dr. Harrison G. Champlin, secretary; and E. W. Ryan, treasurer.

Chairmen of the other committees are: Speakers, William F. Gailing; transportation, John Porter; reception, Edward J. McGuire; athletic, Edward J. Freund, refreshments, D. J. Gilfoy; grounds, William Ryan; financial, Dr. H. G. Champlin; publicity, J. M. Ames; prize, Fred Ellers; badge, M. H. Hays; contest, J. Kenney.

Women are taking an active part also in the arrangements.

Athletic events, band contests, and other forms of entertainment have been arranged for the day, beginning at 10 o'clock. A feature will be the drill for the Moose silver trophy.

GIRL ROBBED OF PAY ROLL BY TWO UNARMED YOUTHS.

Awaiting Elevator in Building Occupied by Clothing Firm When Boys Seize Her.

Miss Beatrice Goldberg yesterday was robbed of $150 by two unarmed youths. Miss Goldberg had returned to a clothing concern at 500 South Peoria street with the pay roll money which she had drawn from a loop bank, and was waiting for an elevator when the boys who were loitering in the hall seized her. One snatched her handbag and both fled.

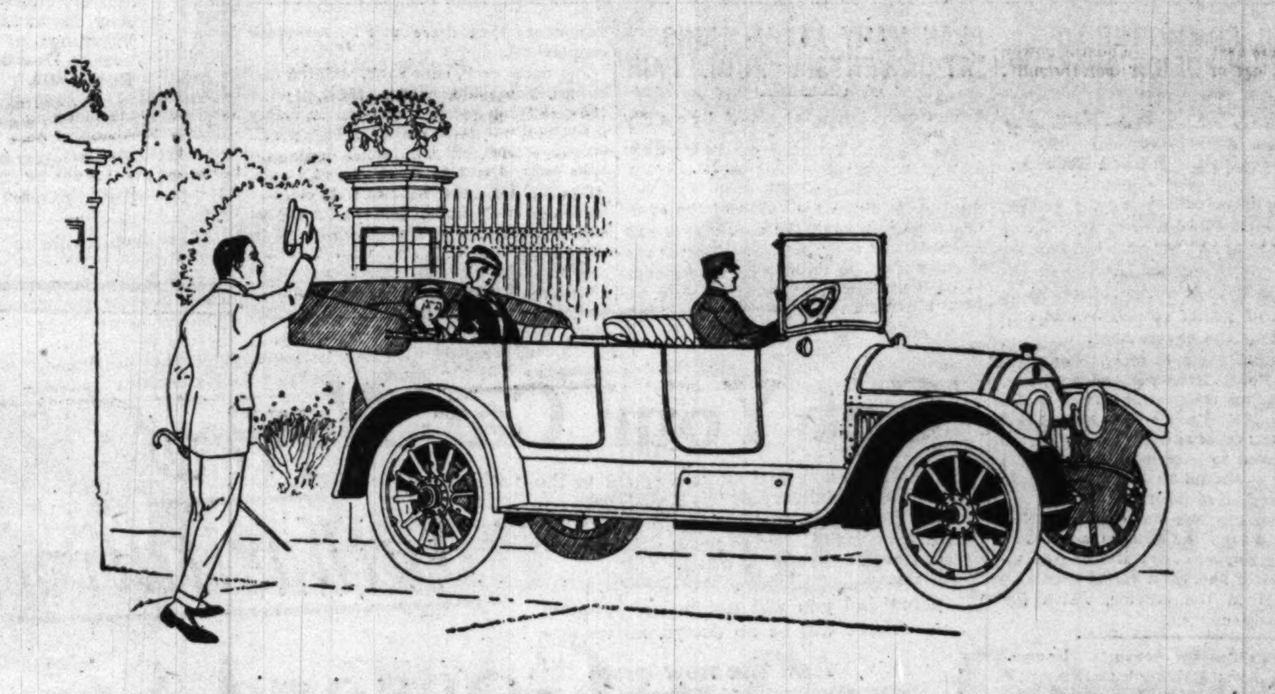
FEAR FOR SENATOR SHIVELY.

Indianian Said to Be Seriously Ill at His Summer Home in Brookville, Pa.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—News was received here today that Senator Benjamin F. Shively of Indiana, who is ill at his summer home in Brookville, Pa., is in a precarious condition.

Wife Divorces Police Sergeant.

Mrs. Hattie Grace Conroy, 4132 North Avers avenue, was granted a decree of divorce yesterday from Peter A. Conroy, police sergeant, on charges of cruelty. She testified that he weighed 200 pounds and that on various occasions he beat her.



Cadillac Eight-Cylinder Luxury
Now More Pronounced Than Ever Before

The Cadillac Eight today is the finest car that ever bore the name of Cadillac. It is also the roomiest car, the most comfortable car.

The seats are five inches wider. The trimming is the finest long grained leather; it feels like a fine glove. Electric step lights are provided for tonneau doors. The lustrous finish of the body has been made more durable. With these and other refinements, the Eight-Cylinder Cadillac now offers the highest class coach work to be had in any car.

Today the wise man considers only modern cars with V-type motors. All other types are acknowledged now outclassed. The Cadillac standard has become the standard of the world; all aim to equal it. But the only known-to-be-successful V-type motor is the Cadillac. So each day its sale grows larger. Certainty is what men want.

Certainty of power—certainty of smoothness—certainty of easy handling and safety—certainty of luxurious, comfortable riding—certainty of long life and economical upkeep—certainty of substantial value for years to come—these are the Cadillac certainties—certainties no other car can offer.

MILLIONS SPENT IN ADVERTISING THIS GIRL'S FACE

Who Says Beauty Doesn't Pay When You Take Case of Miss Mae Burns?

"Where are you going, my pretty maid?"
"In search of the 'Ad man,' sir," she said.
"And what have you learned from him, fair maid?"
"That my face is my fortune, sir," she said.

Chicago proudly claims to be the home of the most profitable face in the world. It is a charming set of $5,000,000 features, and is owned by Miss Mae Burns, a young and pretty photographer's model.

While it is, of course, impossible to give exact figures, it is estimated that considerably more than $5,000,000 has already been spent by national advertisers, who have graced and increased the selling quality of their ads by the pictured presentment of Miss Burns' features. In addition to this her portraits have appeared in millions of catalogues, on more millions of postcards.

Leaving the "movie" stars out of consideration, Miss Burns is without doubt the most photographed person in the United States, if not in the entire world. Her record day's work was posing for more than 900—yes, actually 900—separate and distinct photographs. This was for a big millinery concern, and each pose represented the model wearing a different hat.

Think, you ladies, whose millinery ambition seldom soars beyond the limits of a modest dozen or so hats a year!

First Sitting Brought $2,500.

Miss Burns was "discovered" by a north side commercial photographer about two years ago, and a few months after she had left her convent school. Struck by the possibilities of her girlish beauty, he secured her consent to pose for a series of photographic studies. Reproduction rights to three of these pictures were sold to a well known calendar concern for $2,500, a record price for photographic studies, and incidentally creating a demand for the services of the pretty model.

The three studies that determined Miss Burns' career as a professional model have since been reproduced literally by millions, both on calendars and post cards, in lifelike colors and in plain black and white, and show no signs of waning popularity.

Face Has More than Mere Beauty.

Although a native of Chicago, Miss Burns has posed for leading photographers from New York to San Francisco. Her services are in constant demand and she receives big fees. Independent and self-reliant, she is as modest as she is pretty. That she is pretty—unusually so—no one viewing her pictures on this page will deny, but according to photographers her faces possesses more than mere beauty—it holds the attributes of expressiveness and mobility, those qualities so dear to the photographer's heart.

Perhaps it is because of this that Miss Burns has for months been deluged with offers from the "movies."

IT WAS A DAY OF PICNICS.

Organizations of All Sorts Hold Outings in Chicago Parks and Suburbs.

Picnics were held all over Chicago yesterday. More than 1,000 Modern Woodmen and Royal Neighbors gathered at Evergreen park, Ninety-fifth street and Kedzie avenue. At Ravinia members of the Empire State society met to talk over old times and renew acquaintances. Tent No. 2, Daughters of Veterans, had a picnic in Garfield Park. In Lincoln park the medical women had their annual outing. The third annual Prohibition picnic, postponed on account of the Eastland disaster, was held at Riverside with an all day program.

CHICAGO GIRLS STORM JERSEY IN SUFFRAGE CAUSE

Daughter of Judge Torrison and the Misses Koop Get a Big Reception from Voters.

Passaic, N. J., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—In their efforts to convince the voting population of Passaic that they should vote "yes" on the suffrage amendment when it comes up before them on Oct. 19, six young women from Chicago, Connecticut, and Canada are taking this city by storm.

Miss Margaret Torrison, daughter of Judge Oscar M. Torrison, 2027 Humboldt boulevard, Chicago, and Miss Elsa and Margaret Koop, daughters of Julius Koop of 2020 North Kedzie boulevard, Chicago, are being well received.

Greet Factory Employes.

During the noon hour recess, meetings will be held at all the larger manufacturing plants, at which the Chicago women are speakers. The appeals continue until the whistle summons the men back to their work.

There were many street meetings held tonight the first being held at Second and Passaic streets. A tremendous crowd gathered around the suffragists' three automobiles, which were decorated with signs and banners. The campaigners drove through the main streets, announcing through a megaphone their next meeting place.

Stay Week in Each Town.

The Misses Koop and Torrison are active in many suffrage campaigns and they are making a great impression on New Jersey voters, staying a week in each town, interviewing the voters and telling them the necessity of enfranchising New Jersey women.

Miss Mina C. Van Winkle, state president of the Women's Political union, spoke before a large audience tonight at the Second ward park.

AUCTION

COUNCIL COMMITTEE TO TAKE UP POLICE SHAKEUP.

Ald. Lynch Can't See Why Age Hinders Executives in Department Performing Good Service.

When a subcommittee of the council committee on schools, fire, police, and civil service meets Tuesday, Ald. Thomas J. Lynch, the chairman, will show the stand council took when reductions in the force of postal employés was contemplated by the government.

The committee is to meet to question Chief of Police Healey about his power in demanding resignations from police veterans. Ald. Lynch said he believes the chief's "Oslerization" theory is good when applied to patrolmen, but he does not think it should be enforced on men holding executive positions.

The alderman will show the council a resolution protesting against any reduction in the number of postal employés, because such a reduction would oust men grown old in the service, which was unanimously carried.

Agent Taken on Serious Charge.

Mortimer Levy, 3266 North Clark street, an agent and collector for the Prudential Insurance Company of America, was arrested and locked up at the Hudson avenue police station yesterday morning on a serious charge made by Mrs. Amelia Buecklin, 1506 Mohawk street. She accuses him of attacking her in her home. He denies the charge.

PLAN MANY ATTRACTIONS AT ONWENTSIA "RUBE" FAIR

Seventeen Concessions Already Have Been Let by Chairman, and Others Will Come In.

Uri B. Grannis, chairman of the committee in charge of the concessions and sideshows of the "midway zone" at the Country Fair, to be held on the grounds of the Onwentsia club Saturday, Aug. 28, announces that there will be seventeen concessions.

The baby rack, cane rack, striking machines, fish pond, paddle wheel, "pitch the coin," toy and balloon counter, candy machines, popcorn machine, candy and crackerjack counter, photograph and tintype gallery will be in charge of Mrs. J. Allen Haines, Mrs. Ralph H. Poole, and Mrs. Uri B. Grannis, assisted by a large committee. The fish pond will be primarily for the children, with valuable prizes.

There will be many other attractions.

STOP CARRYING OUT ASHES

Burn

Petroleum Carbon

in your boiler, furnace, hot-water heater, range or stove. Burn it this winter and you will always burn it.

PETROLEUM CARBON revolutionizes your heating problems. It is the by-product of filtered crude-oil—solidified—ready for every use where fuel is needed. You cannot carry out ashes because 99 per cent of it burns into heat. It gives off no soot, smoke, ashes, or odorous gases. Carbon produces the heat you now get, and Petroleum Carbon is 99 per cent carbon, giving the maximum efficiency of any substance you can shovel into your heating apparatus—and it costs less.

"THE ASHLESS FUEL"

Hotter Than Hard Coal—More Heat for Less Money.
No Big Ash Piles—Less Than 1% Ash—No Clinkers.
Clean and Easy to Handle—Weighs Less Than Coal.

When you can burn something that you know is a perfect fuel and when you know that that perfect fuel will give more heat than you are now getting with less trouble and at a lower cost—isn't it the wisest thing to at least try it?

Get Your Car Now

The Thomas B. Jeffery Company
Jeffery
Kenosha, Wis. U.S.A.

THIS is a special announcement to those who have been disappointed in the delivery of "light six" cars.

This organization, in spite of the heaviest demand for "sixes" in our history, is still able to make deliveries of the 1916 Jeffery "Six" the same day we receive your order.

We anticipated the tremendous demand for this car; we are prepared and you will not be disappointed.

There will be no delays, no waiting, here.

And the new price this year is $1350.

This is the same car, remember, which sold this spring at $1650, and which at the old price was unquestionably the greatest value in a "six" Chicago had ever seen.

Now there is a still further saving of a clear $300.

Why not have your new "six" today?

And remember, too, that this car has not been cheapened in any particular. It has not been skimped to "make a price."

There has been no yielding here to any fancied demand for cheapness.

The price of this Jeffery model has been lowered without regard to any "trend of the market" simply because with greatly increased production manufacturing costs are lowered, and it is the purpose and policy of the Jeffery Company to establish this as the standard "six" at a standard price, in exact accord with their policy in producing the new Jeffery "Four."

This Jeffery "six" is a car of proven value and demonstrated performance.

You are taking no chance in its purchase—it's no experiment. Hundreds of residents of this city can give you the facts—we will gladly give you their names.

And you can get this car now.

No car in the world selling within several hundred dollars of the Jeffery price is even a serious competitor.

And you don't have to wait.

The New Jeffery "Four," seven passenger, with divided front seats—the first automobile of its quality, size, and efficiency to sell at a $1035 price—is also on exhibition at our salesrooms.

PLAN BY DYSON TO FREE ILLINOIS OF HOG CHOLERA

Proposes Methods Similar to Those Used in Cattle Epidemic; Costly at Start.

Two million dollars' worth of actual experience to the treasury of the state of Illinois may result in stamping out a $4,000,000 annual loss in the state from hog cholera.

The last legislature appropriated the two millions to compensate cattle owners for stock which was slaughtered by state officials in the successful battle against the foot and mouth disease epidemic.

Dr. O. E. Dyson, the state veterinarian and executive head of the state live stock board, now proposes to stamp out hog cholera through the methods and tactics which were used with effect in the fight against the foot and mouth disease.

For Quarantined Area.

Dr. Dyson figures that there can be a quarantined area set aside in the stockyards—Chicago and elsewhere—where proper precautions would prevent the transfer of the cholera germ to otherwise uninfected stock farms.

In a statement given to THE TRIBUNE yesterday Dr. Dyson suggests that there will be strong and definite antagonism to his suggestion, and he specifies the interests which may oppose him. He claims, however, that in the first year under the proposed system the net saving in hogs that ordinarily die from the ravages of hog cholera within the state can be cut from four millions to two millions.

Dr. Dyson will call for the first week in September a conference in Chicago of county agricultural experts, representatives of live stock publications, the stock yards, the commission houses, and others vitally interested.

Proposed Code.

Dr. Dyson will suggest the following code as a proper means to be used by the state in estopping hog cholera:

Public stock yards, such as exist at Chicago, East St. Louis, and Peoria, should be required to establish a "free" and a "restricted" division for swine, as were established for cattle during the foot and mouth epidemic.

Owners, prior to shipping, should make affidavit to transportation companies that swine are not affected, and transportation should be prohibited in the absence of such affidavit.

"Infected" or "exposed" herds of swine should be loaded into cars direct from wagons or from local yards set aside for such purpose. Under no circumstances should cholera infected hogs be driven over public highways or yarded in open pens of local loading stations.

Cars loaded with infected or exposed swine should be placarded by the local agent of a railroad as "Hog Cholera—To Be Unloaded in Restricted Division." Such cars should be thoroughly disinfected before return.

The live stock commission should place within a restricted quarantined area upon any farm such swine as have been exposed to cholera. All swine so quarantined should be sorted and serum treatment administered to those which need it by temperature test. Advanced stage hogs should be slaughtered immediately.

Infected premises, hog houses, and buildings and loading stations should be disinfected according to rules of the United States department of agriculture.

Co-operation Necessary.

"If we can stop it, and I think that we can," Dr. Dyson said, "we should have the coöperation of every on the square hog raiser in the state. An infected cholera hog gets to market now, under our present rules, only by a system of connivance that is nearly as bad as the disease in the animal."

Train Kills Carpenter.

George W. Rooz, a carpenter, 1921 South Peoria street, was instanly killed yesterday when struck by the No. 8 fast mail on the Baltimore and Ohio railroad at Leavitt street, near Garfield boulevard.

LINCOLN JUBILEE TO OPEN TODAY IN THE COLISEUM

Delegates from All Parts of the Union Come to Negro Exposition.

Delegates from nearly every state in the union reached Chicago yesterday to attend the Lincoln jubilee and exposition marking the half-century of negro freedom, which will be opened today in the Coliseum under the auspices of a commission appointed by Gov. Dunne, of which Bishop Samuel Fallows is chairman.

The Illinois legislature appropriated $75,000 for the exposition and the legislatures of nineteen other commonwealths appropriated varying amounts to be expended by commissioners appointed by their governors. From other states religious and educational organizations have sent delegates. Gov. Dunne will be present to inaugurate the exposition.

Secretary Thomas W. Swann of the Illinois commission, who went to Washington to invite President Wilson to the opening, brought word to Bishop Fallows that the president expects to come to Chicago before the closing date, which will be Sept. 16.

McAdoo Wires He Can't Come.

Secretary of the Treasury William C. McAdoo, who was expected to take President Wilson's place, sent a telegram yesterday saying that government affairs, presumably cabinet matters, prevented his coming at the last minute. In the telegram, which was sent through Dixon C. Williams, former president of the Southern club, Mr. McAdoo said in part:

"This exposition is a wonderful achievement in itself and a striking testimonial of the extraordinary progress, enterprise, and development of the negro race."

The exposition will open with joint religious services at 3 p. m., with Bishop Fallows, who has devoted ten years of his time to the promotion of the exhibition, in charge. Pastors of several hundred negro churches in all parts of the country will be present. Bishop Fallows received assurances from scores of Chicago ministers that they will attend and will invite their congregations as well.

Come from Many States.

Commissioners from Arizona, Colorado, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Ohio, Oklahoma, Oregon, Pennsylvania, New Mexico, Texas, West Virginia, Wisconsin, and Wyoming will represent their governors and legislatures at the opening exercises.

"Let us keep step to the music of the republic," an injunction written by Lincoln, is the keynote of the exposition which is made up of exhibits which are claimed by Bishop Fallows and his fellow Illinois commissioners to be the most striking collection of the achievements of the negro ever assembled. The Lincoln collection also is extensive.

The exposition takes the negro at 1860 when there were 4,441,730 of his color in the United States, 90 per cent illiterate, and traces his progress in education, religion, agriculture, industry, art, literature, commerce, sociology, and miscellaneous pursuits up to the year 1915, when the negro population of the country is 9,828,000 and has 400 schools and 31,000 churches, with illiteracy reduced to 30.5 per cent.

ROMER FAILS TO SHOW UP; COTTAGERS IN HIGH GLEE.

Long Lake Residents Celebrate Ousting of Realty Man Accused by Little Girls.

Emanuel C. Romer didn't come back.

Whereupon the summer cottagers at Long Lake last night held high jinks at the regular weekly meeting of the Long Lake Improvement association and celebrated the ousting of the real estate dealer from the community he is alleged to have contaminated by his displeasing attentions to little girls.

Over on the other side of the lake Romer's family silently endured the ostracism of their former neighborly resorters and wondered what would happen next.

When the last train from Chicago arrived and Romer failed to appear there was just a shade of disappointment and a lot of happiness. The disappointment might have been a foiled desire to see "a little fun," but the most steadfast of the vigilantes was glad the dictum of Long Lake has been accepted by Romer without further contest.

Of course, he may come back today but the threat of a warrant still holds good.

TRADE INVASION OF CHINA IS PLAN MAPPED BY U. S.

Scheme Contemplates Development of an American Vested Interest in Republic.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—An aggressive campaign to secure for American business a share in the development of the enormous resources of China has been planned by the departments of state and commerce.

The plan contemplates the development of an American vested interest in China that will insure the United States a fair share of that country's foreign trade, and be powerful enough to take care of itself in the complicated political commercial situation there.

The scheme was developed by Paul S. Reinsch, minister to China; Julean H. Arnold, commercial attaché at Peking, and Dr. E. E. Pratt, chief of the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce. The plan was generally indorsed and the bureau of foreign and domestic commerce already has begun work along the lines suggested.

Dr. Pratt issued today a summary of the Chinese trade situation which stated in part:

"A well capitalized American bank is necessary to American trade advancement.

"China offers splendid inducements to American capital in mining enterprises, especially in tin, zinc, antimony, lead, coal, and iron.

"China offers splendid inducements to American capital and American machinery in connection with the erection of cotton yarn mills.

"Opportunities for the investment of American capital are offered in the China rug making industry for rugs for the American market.

"American capital and expert management applied to tanning Chinese hides with a tannery at Kalgan, Tien Tsin, or Hankow would be a paying venture.

"China imports annually nearly $10,000,000 (gold) worth of aniline and synthetic dyes. A high grade American substitute for the European products could probably secure a great deal of this trade, which is now at a standstill owing to the lack of supplies.

"With the favorable exchange which exists at the present time, Chinese products, which previously went to Europe, should find markets in America. Among these are sesamum seed, vegetable tallow, hides, egg products, mineral products, wood oil, peanuts, bean oil, gall nuts, etc."

Work along some of these lines already has been begun by agents of the commerce bureau in the United States, and several New England business men now are in China closing contracts for the installation of American machinery in cotton mills built under Chinese government supervision.

CITY HALL CROWD PLANS TO HOOK UP WITH SHERMAN

Willing to Trade Presidential Delegates for Thompson Committeeman Votes.

SPURN SUPPORT OF MANN.

BY CHARLES N. WHEELER.

Kingston, Ont., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The gulf storm that is sweeping up the great lakes hit Thousand islands this morning, drenching the Lowden camp on Cranberry lake.

Mayor Thompson decided to pull up stakes at once, although his plans were to stay until Monday. A messenger was dispatched to Gananoque to get in touch with the Pullman castle on Alexandria bay and have a launch dispatched at once to the Canadian shore. Thompson, Lundin, and Lowden are in the wilderness fourteen miles from the main shore.

The three men will reach the Pullman castle some time tonight, and for the next two days will put the final touches on the Illinois political program amid the environs of "Millionaires' bay."

Will Hook Up with Sherman.

That the presidential mixup will figure in the Illinois fight as viewed by the Lowden-Thompson-Lundin directors is accepted here as inevitable.

The Thompson forces have decided to hook up with Senator Sherman. Congressman Mann's boom, so far as Illinois goes, they seem to think, has gone up the spout. Whether Senator Sherman will be hooked or not is not known here, and whatever hooking is done will be a free will offering on the part of Lundin and his aids.

The city hall spokesmen have concluded that Sherman will get about all the national delegates in Illinois downstate and that Thompson's committeeship fight may be relied upon to carry several congressional districts in Chicago.

The Thompson people now plan to ask their people to support Sherman in the delegate fight in the hope that the Sherman downstate folk will support Thompson for national committeeman.

Lowden Figures in Program.

Lowden figures through the entire program. Charles G. Dawes, president of the Central Trust company, is both a strong Lowden and Sherman man. He is particularly interested in Sherman. Lundin has decided to bring Dawes actively to the support of Lowden also and in the meantime spread the gospel that the Sherman forces logically should tie up with the city hall machine builders.

If the proposition has not already been made, it is understood it will be shortly, that the Sherman people may have the solid support of the city hall forces in the national delegate fight in Cook county in return for the support of Thompson for committeeman by the principal Sherman men downstate. That is, Thompson is ready to trade presidential delegates for committee delegates.

Lundin to Swallow Pride.

Senator Sherman has no use for Lundin personally. Lundin knows it, but believes that the Sherman organization, or a good part of it, can be brought into the Thompson camp, and in the effort to do that Lundin is ready to take whatever personal dislike Sherman has for him and bear it with a smile.

Whether or not a deal is consummated with the Sherman people, both Lundin and Thompson believe that Sherman will get nearly all of the Illinois delegates. They don't credit Mann, it is understood, with more than one or two districts in the entire state.

Accordingly they now are seeking the stronger political alliance, and Mann, despite Col. Lowden's great personal friendship for him, is not to be given any aid by the city hall crowd if the present program is carried out.

Will Wait for Better Times.

Thompson's presidential aspirations, or the aspirations Lundin has for him, are based on the assumption that anything might happen in the national convention with no particularly imposing star among the candidates.

The city hall, according to present plans, first will go along with Sherman, content to land Thompson as committeeman if possible, and then wait for a deadlocked convention or join hilariously in the picking of the nominee if it is done quickly.

ACTOR TO BE BROUGHT BACK.

Charles Buehn Held in New York on Charge of Stealing Ring in Chicago.

Detective Sergts. Burns and Carmody of the detective bureau left last night for New York to bring Charles Buehn, an actor under arrest there, back to Chicago. A warrant for Buehn was sworn out in Chicago Thursday by Miss Stella Rossick, an actress, who told the police that Buehn had stolen a diamond ring, valued at [illegible], from a trunk in her room at 4914 Glenwood avenue. Buehn was taken at the general delivery window of the New York postoffice, where he had gone for a letter.

HOT WATER HEATER KILLS.

Woman in Bathroom Dies from Exhaustion of Oxygen in Closed Room.

Mrs. Catherine Rutza, 2312 Altgeld street, was found dead in the bathroom of her home last night from the exhaustion of oxygen by a lighted hot water heater. Mrs. Rutza had lighted the gas heater and closed the door. The heater burned all the oxygen in the room and its flame had been extinguished. A physician was unable to revive Mrs. Rutza.

Bandits Compel Autoist to Help in Robbery Tour

Merchant's Son Is Forced to Drive Two Men Part of Their Way.

DUEL WITH VICTIMS

Carl Marty Jr., was sitting in his father's automobile in front of his home at 324 Wisconsin street shortly after 7 o'clock last night when two young men approached and covered him with revolvers. Young Marty made no outcry. The men climbed into the car, one beside him on the front seat and the other in the rear.

"Drive to California avenue and Madison street just as soon as you can get there and do just as we tell you," said the man in front, shoving his revolver against Marty's side.

Marty drove to the place as fast as he could. When he reached Madison street the machine was compelled to draw up because of a street car blocking the way. Fearing the men would take him somewhere out in the country and perhaps murder him or compel him to drive them on a tour of robbery, he leaped from the machine and jumped on the street car. No effort to stop him was made.

Notifies the Police.

Marty, who is a son of the head of Carl Marty & Co., cheese merchants at 327 West South Water street, notified the first policeman he saw. Detectives were sent to California and Madison street. The car had disappeared. The license number, Ill., 2027, was flashed to all stations.

A couple of hours later the automobile containing three men stopped in front of the saloon of Thomas Kofoed at 3159 West Chicago avenue. The latter was alone in the place at the time. His son, Anker, was asleep in a rear room.

Two of the men got out of the car and pointed revolvers at the saloon keeper. A pair of Great Dane dogs, chained back of the bar, began to bark, and aroused the son, who came running into the room. He made for the dogs to unchain them, but one of the men opened fire and three bullets whizzed in his direction. The son grappled with one of the robbers.

The other had managed to get behind the bar and opened the cash register. He grabbed $40 in bills and ran out. His accomplice broke away from young Kofoed and both leaped into the car as the elder loosed the dogs and fled into the street, firing his revolver. He ran after the machine for half a block and emptied his weapon at it. He noticed the license number was Ill., 2027. The robbers escaped.

Boys Shoot Merchant.

Frank J. Eaton, 60 years old, proprietor of a delicatessen store at 543 West Sixty-eighth street, was shot through the right shoulder by one of three boys who attempted to hold him up. Policeman Timothy O'Connor, attracted by the shot, chased Walter Blakely of 6119 South Halsted street, one of the trio, and captured him. Eaton told the police he knew one of the other boys as George Gilfeather.

W. J. Koepe of 206 East Thirty-ninth street was strong armed and robbed of $400 and a watch by two negroes beneath the elevated structure at Thirty-fifth street in the afternoon.

Most of the members of the band of auto highwaymen who robbed eight saloons on the southwest side on July 5 and 6 are believed to have been rounded up in the raid on 1411 Washington boulevard early in the day, when three girls and three men were taken into custody.

John Clark of 753 Sebor street, who the police say admits he took part in the holdups, claims Laverne Nalles and Harriet McLean, two of the girls arrested in the raid, also were members of the party.

Names Those in Raid.

He named Owen Loftus, alias Frank Mead, of 610 South Desplaines street, another of those arrested in the raid. The third man, according to Clark, was John McKnight of 753 Sebor street, at present in the county jail awaiting trial on a charge of robbery.

Charges of disorderly conduct have been placed against the other girl and two men arrested in the Washington boulevard raid. They are Mabel Doyle, Walter Henning, and Edward Donnelly. Information regarding the whereabouts of the men and women was received by Capt. O'Brien in an anonymous letter. The writer promised to send a second letter telling where other highwaymen might be captured, but Capt. O'Brien has not received this as yet.

SHOT BY 18 YEAR OLD BOY, YOUTH IN SERIOUS CONDITION

Alfred Teller, 14, in Hospital, and Police Hunt for His Mysterious Assailant on Railroad.

Alfred Teller, 14 years old, 4213 North Kamerling avenue, was shot yesterday by an 18 year old boy, for whom the police of Cragin are searching. The shooting, which took place on the tracks of the St. Paul railroad, was the outcome of a quarrel Teller and Peter O'Boyle, 17 years old, 1931 Lowell avenue, and two other boys. He was shot through the left lung, several inches above the heart, and was taken to the Norwegian Deaconess hospital.

FUNK ILLNESS NOT SERIOUS?

Chicagoan Reported to Be Suffering Only from "Severe Cold" at South Bend.

South Bend, Ind., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Clarence S. Funk of Chicago, former president of the Rumely company, who is ill here at the home of James D. Oliver, was reported late this afternoon to be improved. A statement was given out by Mr. Oliver that Mr. Funk had been suffering from an attack of cold. Although not serious, Mr. Oliver said it was impossible to say when Mr. Funk would return home.

'FRIEND' BETRAYS BANK WRECKER IN HIDING HERE

E. L. Hendry Returned to Memphis, Where His Financial Losses Total $80,000.

WEST SIDE WAGE WORKER.

E. L. Hendry of Memphis, under five years' sentence as the wrecker of a chain of night and day banks with an incidental embezzlement of some $80,000, was returned to Memphis, Tenn., last night by operatives of the Burns Detective agency to be surrendered by his bondsman. It was a "friend" who "turned him up."

Hendry was arrested on the west side after a week of patient investigation which disclosed the former bank president in the rôle of a wage earner pending a decision in the United States Court of Appeals from the state courts of Tennessee.

Under Five Years Sentence.

The convicted banker was first arrested, tried, and convicted in Memphis upon a showing of loose methods in his twenty-four hour banking scheme and sentenced to the penitentiary for five years. Appeals to the State Supreme court went against him and as a last effort his case was appealed to the United States courts. His appeal bond was furnished by the National Surety company of New York.

It is here the discord enters. The National Surety company refused to accept the risk without being itself assured, and Hendry's best friend, John Richmond, a New York business man, volunteered $10,000 in collateral that Hendry might have his freedom pending the appeal.

Richmond Loses Nerve.

Now, it appears, Richmond has lost nerve over the certainty of Hendry's willingness to surrender should the finding of the lower court be confirmed, and he has asked the bonding company to make certain of Hendry.

James E. McGraw, a Burns operative of Memphis, came to Chicago on the trail of the banker and found him living quietly on the west side and working by the week.

He Resists Arrest.

He resisted the efforts of the detectives to return him to Memphis, and an appeal was made to United States Commissioner Mason for a court order. This was denied by Commissioner Mason, with the statement that only a request from the bonding company, with an agreement to cover expenses, would case him to issue an order for his removal.

In the New Morrison hotel, where the arrest was made, Hendry was detained in a room with the detectives while the court plea was being made. Sounds coming over the transom did not seem to indicate that Hendry was deliriously happy over the prospect of going back to Memphis.

Unless Hendry gets new bonds he must wait in jail for his appeal to be decided.

WOMAN'S ARREST WITH STRANGER STIRS HINCKLEY.

Mrs. Faxon, Held with Salesman, Was Known as Most Beautiful Woman in De Kalb County.

Aurora, Ill., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The little town of Hinckley was bubbling over with gossip today as a result of the arrest at Peoria last night of Mrs. Katherine Faxon, described as "the most beautiful woman in De Kalb county." She was arrested on complaint of her husband, George Faxon, a wealthy retired farmer.

With Mrs. Faxon at the time of her arrest was F. H. Gibbs, believed to be a traveling salesman. The couple, the Peoria police assert, have been living in Peoria for four weeks as man and wife.

The couple are held under $1,000 bonds pending a hearing Monday. Both have been in jail since midnight last night.

The husband learned that his wife, who left Hinckley some two months ago, was in Peoria. Faxon came to Aurora and told his troubles to the Aurora police. Accompanied by Detective A. G. Wirz, he went to Peoria yesterday, where he caused a warrant to be issued for his wife and Gibbs.

TWO CANOEISTS RESCUED FROM DROWNING IN LAKE.

One of Rescuers Almost Succumbs in Efforts to Help Them, Pending Arrival of Boat.

William Sloan and Earl Dodge, members of the Columbia Canoe club, were "coasting" on the rollers off Wilson avenue yesterday and their canoe went over. Albert Siegel of 4633 Broadway on the shore, summoned Anthony Kerfoot, Arch Ferguson, Albert Gillen, and other members of the Atwater club. They manned a rowboat.

Hughes tried to swim to the canoe to render aid pending the arrival of his mates, and was most overcome before he and the two canoeists were taken aboard the boat.

On shore the men were taken to the Marine hospital and attended by Dr. H. S. Gregory.

4 HURT AS AUTO OVERTURNS.

Two Passengers Pinned Under Car Near Barrington Are Rescued by Farmer.

Two persons were pinned under an automobile which overturned yesterday afternoon four miles east of Barrington, Ill., and were rescued by Lawrence Hirn, a farmer. Frank J. Fecke, 2854 Sheffield avenue, owner and driver of the car, was bruised about the body, and his wife has a broken collar bone and probable internal injuries. M. Fecke and wife, the two other passengers, were slightly injured.

THE LONELY LITTLE GIRL; THE MOTHERLY WOMAN.

The girl, a guest at the Y. W. C. A., was taken to the police station after the lady started to take her away from the home. The woman cleared herself of any wrong intentions and was released. The girl is being detained.

'BRIGHT LIGHTS' PROVE TOO MUCH

Woman Victim of Drug Sobs Out Her Story to U. S. Agent.

Six years of Chicago's "bright lights" brought Margaret Morass, who also is known as Margaret Lauder, 28 years old, to the office of United States Commissioner Lewis F. Mason yesterday afternoon, charged with having opium in her possession in violation of the Harrison anti-narcotic law.

The "dope," said to have been supplied by Dr. Arthur L. Blunt of 9 East Harrison street, has undermined the woman's health, if her own story is true, but it did one good thing by reuniting her to her aunt, Mrs. Marguerite Brown, who, during the six years that she has been in Chicago, has striven ineffectually to keep track of her.

Aunt a Bible Teacher.

Mrs. Brown, who is a Sunday school teacher at the Moody Bible institute, is the wife of Fred S. Brown, employed by the Wear-Proof Mat company.

"It's all a frameup," the girl sobbed to Commissioner Mason after she had wept freely in greeting her aunt. "I haven't broken any law. I'm trying to cure myself, and if they will only let me alone for a week more I will be all right.

"I have been living in a place at 10 West Grand avenue. When I refused to stay there any longer, the owner of the rooming house, a man who calls himself McFarland, told the police to arrest me."

The woman, according to her story, was married to James Morass in Detroit nine years ago. She says she got a divorce from him after he had shot her in a quarrel two years later.

Liked "Bright Lights."

Then she came to Chicago and followed the "bright lights," as she called them.

Commissioner Mason, after he had the story of Mr. and Mrs. Brown, who told of having tried to place Mrs. Morass in various sanitariums in an effort to rid her of the drug habit, ordered that she be sent to the Chicago Refuge for Girls until Aug. 31.

Policewoman Loses Her Case Against Flirt

Georgiana Juul, Evanston's police woman, has lost her first case. A jury in Justice Harrison's court in Evanston yesterday, after fifteen minutes' deliberation, acquitted Frank Calkins, a chauffeur, who had been arrested by Miss Juul on a charge of flirting.

Calkins, who is a married man living at 1720 Asbury avenue, and is employed by William H. Hill, 1632 Ridge avenue, was arrested the night of July 30 by Policewoman Juul after she had taken an automobile ride with him. The first case against him was nonsuited on a technical ground and a new warrant sworn out by the policewoman.

There were a number of women in the courtroom and Attorney Robert Wing commented as follows:

"These Evanston women have come here to see that justice is meted out, but they have a wrong view of justice. They want to see this man convicted.

"The press is less decent than a rattlesnake. They have printed stories about this defendant which were scandalous. The rattlesnake gives a warning before it attacks, but the press does not."

DUNNE DOESN'T APPEAR.

Governor Scheduled for Visit, but Disappoints Many Friends.

Gov. Dunne, who was expected in Chicago last night from Springfield, did not put in an appearance at the Hotel La Salle, as was expected by a number of friends and political adherents. There were many calls upon the clerk for information, but his answer to all was that the governor was not expected and that if he did put in an appearance there was little probability of his name getting on the register.

The governor, however, will pass a few hours in Chicago today. He is scheduled for a visit in Boston, where there is to be a conference of governors early in the week. It is not believed that he will leave Chicago before Monday, as several appointments await him here.

RAID CHINESE ON LONDON TIP

U. S. Officials in Chicago Swoop Down on Seven Illegal Shops.

A tip from the London police sent fifteen government revenue and customs agents on a tour of the Chinese district in the neighborhood of Twenty-second street yesterday in search of raw opium.

Efforts of the raiders were fruitless, in so far as opium was concerned, but they brought back to the federal building correspondence between Chinese business houses and opium firms in Bangkok, Siam, which may lead to wholesale arrests on charges of smuggling.

It is known that the Siam opium firms, mentioned in the correspondence taken, have supplied London firms with the drug, and it is believed these oriental corporations have done the same thing for Chicago Chinese opium dealers.

No arrests were made by the revenue and customs agents who were in charge of Dan Chapin, revenue agent at Chicago. They were armed only with search warrants. Seven Chinese stores, three of them on Twenty-second street, it is said, were visited by the raiders and in four of the seven correspondence with the Siam firms was discovered.

It will be held and translated by the government in an effort to connect the owners of the stores in which the letters were discovered with opium smuggling.

Customs Inspector W. D. Grenshaw signed the complaints on which the search warrants were issued. His information came from the London police through the channels of the American and English embassies.

Two months ago anonymous letters from Philadelphia were received by the London police telling of an illegal opium trade carried on through female agents between Bangkok, Siam, London, and Liverpool.

On the strength of these letters and information obtained by English detectives, the police of England raided several Chinese firms in London and Liverpool, obtaining correspondence which connected the opium smuggling with seven Chicago Chinese firms, according to the tip sent to Chicago.

LAKE FOREST "HELP" SAVES PERILED JOB FOR A DRIVER.

Lot of Fun Had in Chase of Pheasants That Escape from Rear of Automobile.

French maids, Parisian chauffeurs, English butlers, ordinary stable boys, and all the aristocracy of Lake Forest backdoordom galloped around in circles yesterday in an effort to save an expressman's job for him. And when they had rounded up a pair of English pheasants—$25 per pair—they heaved an aristocratic sigh and said they'd had a lot of fun anyway.

The pheasants were destined for the estate of T. E. Donnelly and were being transported in a coop that rattled on the rear of an automobile. A slat in the coop came loose and the pheasants were off.

A lad who screamed that the driver's "chickens" were out started the chase and pretty soon Lake Forest was agog. But the pheasants are safe now and so is the driver's job.

BRIDEWELL FOR HOTEL MAN.

Judge Adopts New Policy Toward Keepers of Disorderly Resorts.

Judge Rufus S. Robinson adopted a new policy regarding "shady" hotels yesterday. He sentenced Charles Davis, proprietor of the Queen hotel, 603 Wabash avenue, to serve thirty days in the bridewell and pay a fine of $100. He discharged those arrested as inmates of the place. Heretofore the practice has been to fine the inmates. In this case the judge had them turn state's evidence and convict the proprietor.

POLICE GET MANUAL TO READ

Tells Them All They Should Know About Municipal Code and Sanitation.

A manual containing information every citizen and public official should know regarding the requirements of the municipal code as to sanitary conditions of sidewalks, streets, back yards, and vacant lots has been prepared and distributed among the members of the police department for study and enforcement. The manual contains letters from the health commissioner and commissioner of public works.

BEAUTY DOCTOR'S STORY STRAIGHT; GIRL STILL HELD

Mrs. Ashbaugh Asked 16 Year Old Y. W. C. A. Guest to Live with Her.

YARNS OF THE MAID CONFLICT

Mrs. Christina Ashbaugh, a beauty doctor of Newport, Ky., who was taken into custody Friday night when she attempted to take 16 year old Madge Warrick from the Young Women's Christian association at 820 Michigan avenue, was released yesterday. Miss Warrick will be held for the juvenile officers, because of conflicting stories she has told.

In answer to the telegram sent to Newport by the police, the following message from Christ Ebert, chief of police of Newport, was received:

"Christina Ashbaugh lives at place stated, with her husband. Massage or chiropodist artist. Govern yourselves by the facts."

Here's Woman's Story.

"I went to Cincinnati to study to be a beauty doctor," said Mrs. Ashbaugh. "Then I came to Chicago to take a course at the Moler college. Miss Warrick told me she wanted to get a position, but had been unable to find work. I felt sorry for her and gave her a little money.

"I told her she could go home with me for a while. I have two children, and once I had a girl from an orphanage stay with me for three years, until she got married. I went to the city hall to see a Mr. Mahony, who is a lawyer, I think. I wanted to see about taking the girl out of the state. I didn't have much money, and I thought maybe they might furnish transportation for the girl. I was leaving the Y. W. C. A. merely because I had been asked to go. I had broken the rules by coming in one night after 11 o'clock."

Miss Warrick stood by Mrs. Ashbaugh in her statements and turned against Miss Esther Anderson of the Y. W. C. A., who had caused both to be held.

Here's the Girl's Story.

"They told me I could go back to the Y. W. C. A. last night," she said, "but I told them that if they were going to keep out Mrs. Ashbaugh I was going to stay away, too. She is the only one who has been kind to me here. My stepmother wouldn't take me in. Miss Anderson told me I could have a room over there for a few days and she would help me get work. But she didn't. Instead she let the bills pile up on me. I had only a little money. Mrs. Ashbaugh offered me some money, but I didn't take it.

"I didn't intend to leave with Mrs. Ashbaugh until she had got the papers from the court. I went to my room to get some stockings out of my suitcase, and found Miss Anderson had it. She wouldn't give it to me. So I went around the block to find a dry goods store and buy some. When I came back the policewoman was waiting. Mrs. Ashbaugh never took me anywhere I shouldn't go."

Spoke to Hoyne Aid.

Lieut. McCauley learned that the man to whom Mrs. Ashbaugh had spoken at the city hall was Assistant State's Attorney B. J. Mahony.

"Mr. Mahony was not in his office," said the lieutenant, "and she was directed to Mrs. Josephine Lawrence, in charge of the welfare work of the Juvenile court. Mr. Mahony was in court, and both the girl and Mrs. Ashbaugh made statements to him. Mrs. Ashbaugh's story was straightforward, but the girl's was contradictory. Mrs. Benjamin Warrick, the girl's stepmother out on Albany avenue, told an investigator she had asked the girl to stay with her until her husband returned from his run as an engineer on the Santa Fé road, but that Miss Warrick refused."

MRS. ROY M. SHAYNE, ILL, GETS DIVORCE "BY PROXY."

Unable to Leave Her Home, She Is Granted Decree on Evidence of Two Chauffeurs.

Judge Mangan in the Circuit court yesterday granted a divorce to Mrs. Virginia A. Shayne from Roy M. Shayne, son of John T. Shayne, a wealthy furrier, on statutory grounds.

Mrs. Shayne was granted her divorce "by proxy," as she was in her father's home, 103 Bellevue place, where she has been in a steel jacket because of spinal trouble for the last ten months.

Two chauffeurs, formerly in the employ of Shayne, gave details to substantiate the charges on which the decree was granted.

"My hours used to be from 8 o'clock in the morning until 3 or 4 o'clock the next morning," testified John J. White, 1253 North Clark street. "I had to drive to cafés until 1:30 in the morning. Then I would drive to various apartments, especially to a place in the 2300 block on Wabash avenue."

Robert Dawes, 1365 North La Salle street, corroborated the testimony of White.

MYSTERY IN AUTO SMASHUP.

Deputy Sheriff and Five Others Hurt in Evanston, Police Withholding Names.

Deputy Sheriff Amiel J. Changelon, formerly an Evanston alderman, and five other men were taken to St. Francis hospital in Evanston yesterday following a mysterious automobile smashup. Changelon and Frank Cottrell are suffering from cuts and bruises. The names of the others have been withheld. News of the accident reached the police at 3 o'clock yesterday morning. Mrs. Changelon at her residence, 1023 Ayres avenue, said she knew no more than that her husband was in the hospital.

NEED 4 MONTHS TO GET FIRST LINE OF NAVY IN SHAPE

Expert Cites Weakness in Sea Power as Well as in Army in Event U. S. Must Fight.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—In view of the threatening aspect of the dispute with Germany THE TRIBUNE has obtained the following statement of our military preparedness from an expert whose name cannot be revealed.

The first line of the navy could be put in fighting shape in from three to four months by concentrating upon it enormous energy. The crews could be filled up among recently retired sailors and by drafting men from the vessels of secondary importance. The state of discipline in the navy, never as high as in the best European navies, has considerably deteriorated under the influence of Secretary Daniels, and would need fully this time to bring it up to battle condition.

Target Practice Below Par.

The target practice is also far below the efficiency of the English and Germans before the start of war, and its efficiency has been decreasing, while that of the English and Germans has been bettered during the months of tension.

To man the rest of the ships of the navy and to drill the crews and to put them in battle condition would take at least one, more likely two years, and then the lack of scout boats, adequate submarines, and supply vessels would prevent the fleet from being effective as a unit.

The ammunition supply could not possibly be provided in this country, but could probably be purchased abroad.

Have Nucleus for Army.

As to the army, of course we have no army. We have the makings of an army, and if they were utilized to the best possible efficiency we could have a presentable force capable of operating in defense of New England and New York in from six to twelve months.

The first step would be to recall to America all the troops in the Philippines, Hawaii, the canal zone, Cuba, Alaska, and Porto Rico, who would be of no use there, and in case of naval catastrophe would fall certain prey to the enemy. Their places should be taken by national guard regiments mustered under the colors. Not the best national guard troops should be used for this purpose, but those somewhat lacking in discipline, because it is easier to discipline volunteer trops in foreign service than at home.

Place for Regular Officers.

The best National guard regiments should be mustered in in their present condition and as many regular officers as can be spared should be distributed among them.

The regular army should be expanded by making every battalion the core of a regiment, adding to it two battalions of new troops. Officers would be found by promoting existing officers, by promoting competent regular soldiers, and by selections from private life.

The field artillery would be used in the same method as the infantry and cavalry to expand into greater numbers of field batteries.

Practice with Coast Guns.

For heavy field artillery, of which we have none in the United States, we would take our coast artillery men, who are accustomed to the handling and firing of heavy guns. These would continue training with their guns and would practice maneuvering dummies while heavy field guns were being constructed, so that when these guns were ready there would be gun crews prepared to use them.

After three months' preliminary training in camps the assembling of the field force would begin by concentrating such troops [illegible] were sufficiently instructed to act as [illegible]. To this field army the garrisons in the outlying parts would have a right to come by showing greater efficiency than some of the new units at home, which would be sent out to take their places. The field army delivered in size, it would give the general officers an opportunity to practice maneuvers, an opportunity which American generals never have had. In this way, inefficient general officers could be weeded out before they brought a catastrophe upon their troops.

Good Army in Six Months.

At the end of six months if politics had not interfered, there would be an army capable of acting on the defensive in the United States. In the succeeding months its efficiency would increase rapidly and at the end of a year, if thought advisable, this army would be in shape for action over seas.

During this training both officers and soldiers who were found physically unfit for active duty would be mustered into a reserve training corps and would set to work training the reserves to fill up the front line and eventually become first line troops themselves.

Two great efforts would have to be made; to get good officers and to get rid of bad officers.

Mistake Known Too Late.

Untrained troops are frequently as anxious to retain inefficient officers as are inefficient officers to hold their jobs, and neither men nor officers appreciate their mistake until confronted with the necessity of going into action when it is too late to remedy the error.

The question of equipment, other than heavy field artillery, would not be serious. The supply of rifles on hand and the capacity of the government arsenals would supply all needs in this direction for the first year of war, and as no field artillery other than that needed for target practice would be used, the accumulation of an adequate supply would be a simple matter.

There would be the usual trouble with inventions in that foolish plans would be pressed by influential backers and official recommendations would be resented by noisy outcry, but these and many other disagreeable, not to say horrible things are unavoidable if this country goes to war.

FALLS DEAD IN ENGINE HOUSE

Lieut. John M. Hughes of engine company 70 was making out a report of a fire early yesterday, when he dropped dead in the quarters of the company, 2100 Eastwood avenue. The company had just returned from a small fire when he fell. A physician was called and he said that death probably was caused by heart disease.

He Will Make 'Em Soldiers for U. S.

COL. W. J. NICHOLSON

BUSINESS MEN JOIN U. S. CAMP

Col. William J. Nicholson, U.S.A., Will Be in Charge of Instruction.

Simultaneous with the announcement yesterday that Col. William J. Nicholson, U. S. A., commander of the troops now stationed at Fort Sheridan, had been selected commander of the citizens' camp of military instruction to begin Sept. 20, came applications from several men throughout the state, who wish to become proficient officers.

Chief among these is Edward Winter, an attorney of Danville, Ill., who was the Bull Moose candidate for state auditor at the last election. Harry P. Pearsons, mayor of Evanston, and John E. Van Natta, 127 North Dearborn street, representing the "First Infantry, National Reserve," were others who applied.

The applications of these men has added impetus to the movement for all are prominent, and, with Mayor Thompson and other state officials in attendance the camp will take on an aspect similar to that at Plattsburg Barracks, N. Y., where Mayor John Purroy Mitchel of New York and other notables attended.

Among others who sent applications for membership to the camp yesterday were:

W. B. Brown, Durand Steel Locker company, Chicago; Keith Spaulding, 76 West Monroe street; J. A. Pathe Jr., Cincinnati; William R. Collins, 711 First National Bank building; Dr. J. W. Miller, Cincinnati; Ralph A. Bond, 2601 Elston avenue; L. F. Wilson, 122 South Michigan avenue; John E. Waters, 1009 Chamber of Commerce building; Harland B. Kauffman, Oregon, Ill.; Frederick C. Mochelle, 6828 Evans avenue; E. C. Welborn, 208 South La Salle street; Andrew H. Skelton, Morris, Ill.; James V. Caughlin, 613 City Hall; W. T. Charles, Woodstock, Ill.; Charles E. Kohl, Majestic theater.

DR. ANNA SHAW ON SICK LIST; FRIENDS INSIST ON A REST.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, the national suffrage leader, is taking a brief respite from her strenuous campaign and is resting in her home at Moylan, until Monday. Dr. Shaw suffered a slight attack of indigestion while on the train to New York early yesterday, where she was scheduled to speak.

Her friends insisted that she return home and break off all engagements until Monday.

On Monday she will return to New York and begin a speaking tour, which will continue until Nov. 2.

MEDAL TO MRS. VANDERBILT.

PARIS, Aug. 21, 5:30 p. m.—The foreign office, upon recommendation of the ministry of war, has awarded a gold medal to Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt of New York, president of the American committee for clothing the wounded. In conferring the medal the foreign office expresses appreciation of the services of Mrs. Vanderbilt, "whose active sympathies have so often come to the aid of our wounded."

BAD LEADERSHIP MAKES CANNON FODDER OF MEN

Drill Camp Students Taught Vital Need of Clockwork Action Under Fire.

Military Camp of Instruction, Plattsburg, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—A letter has recently been received by a student in this camp from an Englishman who has just lost his only son at the Dardanelles.

"I can bear the loss of my boy," he writes, "but I can never learn to bear the thought that he did not even have a sporting chance."

This feeling, shared by thousands of British fathers and mothers, explains the reason for and the object of this camp. Without trained officers it would be impossible to train troops. The regular officers of the present army would all be needed ten times over in the first line. And even if troops could be trained without experienced officers they would be but cannon fodder. This is more clearly borne out each day. The students are learning how complex, how highly finished, but how practically and fundamentally sound this military machine is.

Army Plans Carefully Laid.

The foundations for a greater United States army appear to be well laid. Common sense and economy of time and life are the guiding principles. But experience in each detail is needed to complete the whole. Like parts of a clock, all must be in place and working smoothly or the result will be confusion if not chaos.

A striking example of the necessity for training and one which makes all realize the seriousness of the work is deployment in extended order for the firing line. Capt. Dorey, commander of the camp, expresses it as follows: "Here discipline and accuracy are absolutely necessary. Success in battle now, as always, depends to a large extent on having the most men at the right place before the enemy gets there. If an attempt were made to march the men to their positions in close order they would all be killed before they arrived, and if a line were built up one man at a time it would be too slow. And so extended order tactics (the moving of a few men at a time) is adopted as the best method to use.

Open Order Hard to Control.

"The greatest difficulty with this system is that it is hard to control. When men become spread out they become unmanageable unless well disciplined. Therefore it is necessary in training to do the movements accurately and strict discipline must be enforced, even more than when the men are in the ranks. Extended order naturally appears ragged. There seems to be confusion. And to add to this extended order is used at a time when the enemy's bullets are causing more disorder. Therefore the best discipline and training must be devoted to this and accuracy and precision required."

Each day the men spend several hours at this extended order, running forward fifty or a hundred yards in skirmish lines and throwing themselves flat on the ground. Often an unfortunate man comes down in a mud puddle. Then, at the order, they are up again, running forward, presumably under fire.

May Betray Whole Line.

If any man gets up too quickly he gives away the position of the whole detachment, drawing the enemy's fire to sweep his companions when they arise. When deploying, the platoons (bodies of twenty-four or thirty-two men) distances are very carefully laid out. "For," said the company commander, "we figure that one shrapnel shell will wipe out a whole platoon and we must arrange our distances so that the next will not be caught.

From this the civilian students see why untrained soldiers under untrained officers are cannon fodder, and why the Englishman felt that his dead son had not "even had a sporting chance."

Rifle Fire Important.

Rapid and efficient rifle firing is vitally important in order to concentrate the greatest possible field of fire on the enemy. Great care is given in rifle practice. For three days the men have practiced sights, squinting eyes until they blur, and doing gallery work (firing at short distances at small targets). Last night the order went out to go on the "range" this morning, assembling at 5:30 a. m. Until the 10 o'clock taps the men sat around in little groups receiving instruction from the United States Marine Corps score book, cleaning their rifles, practicing setting of sights and windage, and wondering how to figure their "zero" on the new rifles. About 1 a. m. a heavy thunderstorm struck and played havoc in the camp. At 4:15 all were up, and after a hasty dressing, a half wash and breakfast, marched to the rifle range. Here the men were divided for the different targets, and each had five shots "prone" and five "kneeling."

Few Understand Small Arms.

The conditions were difficult, for the men were inexperienced and there was no opportunity for detailed instruction, but this way of throwing the men on their own initiative is a good teacher. The delightful and reassuring, but dangerous theory that all Americans are born rifle shots is shattered by experience here. Probably the men of this camp have had considerably more than the average amount of shooting experience, and yet over a half have never used a rifle before and not more than a quarter have had any training of real value. Game shooting proves of little help.

Again, the necessity for training is seen in the first aid work. Every soldier is taught to use the little first aid kit attached to his belt, to know the position of the main arteries, and so to be able to save the wounded from bleeding to death; how to put on a tourniquet, rough bandages, and splints. How many Englishmen now lie dead or are maimed for life because their comrades did not know how to help them!

When Col. Roosevelt or Gen. Wood call for military preparedness it is because their experience has taught them the necessity for training, and the danger. And to the former it is doubly brought home, because he knows that in the event of war his four sons will go to the front. In this camp are two of his sons, a nephew, and a son-in-law—Dr. Richard Derby. In the previous students' camp was his youngest boy.

We may well wonder how many of our "anti-militaristic statesmen" and their sons will do this.

ANOTHER DAUGHTER BORN TO ALMA GLUCK, NOTED SINGER

New York, Aug. 21.—[Special.]—A daughter was born last night to Mme. Alma Gluck, the singer, now at Lake George, according to an announcement made by her managers here today. Mme Gluck is the wife of Efrem Zimbalist, the violinist. They were married in June, 1914.

This is Mme. Gluck's second daughter. At the time she was "discovered" as a woman on the east side with a voice of great possibilities she was the wife of a young insurance salesman. In the winter of 1911 she became estranged from her husband and in October, 1912, she sought freedom through the divorce courts.

UNITED MIDDLE WEST SUPPORTS DEFENSE PLANS

Legislators Ready to Vote Money for Improving the Army and Navy.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Washington, D. C., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—That sentiment in the middle west as well as along the seaboard is in favor of strengthening materially the military forces of the United States is shown by a nation-wide canvass made by the National Security league. The result of the survey was made public today. It shows that both Democratic and Republican legislators are ready to vote for material increases in appropriations for the army and navy at the next session of congress.

Illinoisans Favor Defense.

Senators and congressmen from Illinois express themselves in letters to the league as follows:

SENATOR SHERMAN—I am in accord with the recommendations of the secretary of war and other authorities for adequate armament for defensive purposes. I have some very sincere convictions on peace conventions and arbiturial tribunals, but I do not understand this requires disarmament on our part. On the contrary, until such peace agencies are sustained by an adequate union of nations we must maintain our armament for defensive purposes. Under present conditions there is but one sane course. It is to keep this country where it can defend itself properly against any aggressor.

REP. CHIPERFIELD—Most certainly I favor an adequate national defense.

Denison Advocates Preparedness.

REP. DENISON—I am in favor of any steps being taken that will improve the military and naval preparedness of our country for war.

REP. RODENBERG—I am heartily in favor of the proposition that the United States should be prepared for defense and for the maintenance of its rights by an adequate military and naval force.

REP. STERLING—I shall support such measures in congress as are necessary to maintain a sufficient army and navy to secure us against our enemies. I do not believe that our army and navy are sufficient in their present condition for that purpose.

REP. STONE—I believe in a strong navy and certain increases over present provision in the army. I trust nothing but good will result from the efforts of the National Security league.

Campaign Committees Are in Line.

The chairmen of the Democratic and Republican congressional campaign committees have written to the league in favor of better conditions of preparedness, their statements being as follows:

REP. DOREMUS, Michigan, chairman of the Democratic congressional campaign committee—You may put me down as being in favor of a real strong navy for defensive purposes. I do not favor a large standing army, but think that the young men of the country should be more thoroughly trained to military life.

REP. WOODS, Iowa, chairman of the Republican congressional campaign committee—The question is a large one, and would require a statement of considerable length to express one's views properly, unless to give a simple and short statement of the principles, and in that case I could do no better than to indorse the statements made in the address of President Washington to congress, as given in the letterheads of the National Security league.

NEW FIGHTERS FOR UNCLE SAM!

The United States Military Training Camp, founded by Maj. Gen. Leonard Wood, is now in full swing at Plattsburg, N. Y. Rich and famous men, as well as poor and humble, are students at the school. John Purroy Mitchel, Mayor of New York; Dudley Field Malone, collector of the port of New York, and other noted citizens are undergoing the same rigid training as is given any "rookie." The student body comprises 1,200 members from all walks of life. Lively scenes of the daily program, including infantry drills and movements of armored autos and artillery, will be shown in Budapest, the capital of Hungary, is one of the most beautiful places in Europe. At the height of the Russian invasion this Danube river city was seriously threatened. Striking moving pictures of scenes therein, including Emperor Franz Josef's magnificent palace and street promenades, were obtained by a TRIBUNE photographer during the eleventh month of the war. They will be shown in THE TRIBUNE ANIMATED WEEKLY, released tomorrow (Monday).

Other War Pictures, taken by a Tribune photographer and to be seen in tomorrow's release of THE TRIBUNE ANIMATED WEEKLY, show passengers on board a steamer crossing the English Channel. They have been warned of the danger of a submarine and are all equipped with life belts. Still another war picture shows the terrible effect of a 30-centimeter gun.

HOW FRANCE, UNREADY, MET CRISIS OF WAR

BY CAROLYN WILSON.
[FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

[Copyright: 1915: By The Chicago Tribune.]

PARIS.—[Special.]—Can it be really a year since that vague whisper went around Paris about 4 in the afternoon, "C'est la mobilisation générale—c'est la guerre."

Can it be a year since that sultry August night when hundreds of thousands of people moved slowly up and down the Grand boulevards from the Madeleine to the Matin office, a crowd so dense there was no passing through, a crowd so serious, so tense that there was nowhere the sound of a raised voice, or of a laugh?

Can it be a year tonight since I sat with hundreds of people in the crowded space in front of the Café de la Paix and again the vague whisper passed through the crowd, "Jaurès has been assassinated?" And the crowd, sick with the thought of war coming upon them unprepared, gave this terrible piece of news no more than a "O, is that so? How? Too bad!"

Because we never comprehend and realize to the full when action is at its highest present tense, and because the year's time has shed a different light over many of the events of that first week, it might not be inopportune to try to collect a little the impressions of the most remarkable year in the history of any living man.

First Days of Terror.

Those first few days were days of frozen terror, a fear too great to be expressed in words or signs. Totally unprepared for war, with a population only half that of Germany's, a superstition that the French on account of their absolutely unwarlike temperament would not make good soldiers, even the most loyal French were benumbed with dread.

The papers abounded with eulogies of "nos petits soldats" until the stranger, and perhaps the Frenchman himself, was subconsciously led into the belief that all the soldiers were little and rather pathetic, and the heart was filled with an overflowing love and pity which nevertheless was very bad for the spirit of the country, since pity is destructive and implies distrust.

I sometimes wonder where all those "petits soldats" have gone to. They neither appear in the newspapers nor on the streets. They have been superseded by the "poilu," that hardy, roughened individual who is now known as one of the best fighters in the world.

Men Seem to Have Grown.

If it wouldn't be absurd to think it, one would say that all these men have grown two or three inches in height. Whether it is military clothes and bearing, or not, I don't know, but the race of "nos petits soldats" so fondly and persistently clung to by writers of "sob stories" has vanished from the earth.

I remember those first days when the question of England's entrance hung in the balance. The tension here in Paris was so positive, so actual, that it seemed as if it were a band of fine steel drawn tight around the heart, of which one was conscious every minute, every second.

Would they fight? Would they? It meant all the difference between life and death to France.

And when England had declared war, there was almost a spirit of rejoicing and jubilation in the France which was sending off her men by the millions.

And all those hot days when men marched by, bowed under their heavy knapsacks, and the still, breathless nights when the clear call of the bugle would summon us from our terrace to the dimly lighted Montparnasse silently to watch another regiment leaving.

Lassitude of First Days.

The utter lassitude of those days—the heat, the tramless streets, the endless walking to be done, the closed shops, the painful uncertainty, life broken into three parts only—the morning, the noon, and the evening paper.

And then the tears! I, who never weep unless I am furiously angry, cried helplessly every time I saw a group of young volunteers go cheering through the streets, every time I saw a father reach out trembling hands to read the evening paper, at the glimpse of the 20-year-old officers filing by the Alsace statue, saluting with bared swords and on their earnest young faces, white with emotion, the determination to win back the lost land for France or die.

Then came the black days of September, and after them the new spirit of France was born, that spirit which spells patience, endurance, resignation; and after them, too, came a wave of black, of mourning through all France which shall never give way to colors and gayety again while any of us are still alive.

France Has Amazed World.

At the end of a year France is to me the nation par excellence of the war. The French have amazed the world as soldiers, as tacticians, as citizens. "L'Union Sacrée" is more of a remarkable fact here than in Germany, where anything else is treason and mutiny.

They have stood the brunt of the entire war. Seven of their departments—their richest—are invaded. Their land is overrun with English who are just sitting around and not fighting. They are producing ammunition not only for themselves but the English.

They have lost—no one knows or dares to think how many men. And yet now, at the beginning of this second year, with their losses, their financial depression, their scarcely changed line of front in eleven months, with the English army unready and the Russians retreating, there is no one of them who would give in, even for splendid peace terms.

As to the other countries I have seen during the war, word pictures will have to suffice. I do not know them as I know France.

Germany, I had known and loved before the war. Because I determined to keep these pleasant impressions uppermost in my mind I was termed a pro-German here in Paris.

Love for Germany Fades.

But as proof after proof rolled in of German culpability, the love faded, and only an admiration of accomplishment remained—an admiration which was only strengthened by my month in Germany.

Perfect order, perfect system, forethought, invention, meticulous regard for details, amazing unity and loyalty, dogged courage and determination. Even my bitter prison experiences cannot keep me from admitting all that.

But the thing I regret most is that the wonderful "entente" which seemed on the road to achievement between the French and the English is now a thing of the past, and can never come into being.

How well I remember the touching, delightful homage the French offered the English during the first months of the war! It was something very rare and precious, a spontaneous friendship extended to every Britisher by the humblest peasant and the most aristocratic mother.

Long suffering France could not hold out this homage indefinitely, and has now withdrawn it.

By this I do not mean to say that there is discord between the two allies. That would be an entirely false impression. But they are working on a business basis, without any of the alleviating charm of deference or sympathy.

Switzerland's Heart of Gold.

Switzerland I have found on my two trips to be a hardy, husky little country—William Tell all over again, with a heart of gold.

Switzerland is the Good Samaritan of this war. In an unpretentious, unboastful devotion she has probably done more than any other state to lessen the sorrows of the wounded and prisoners, of the poor refugees returned to France.

She has undertaken the enormous exchange of letters between prisoners and their families and is voluntarily tracing all heralded as "disappeared."

She is suffering from the long enforced mobilization of her army, but you never hear a whisper of complaint; there is nothing there but consecration and unselfishness.

And Italy—how well she is doing! She, too, has been regenerated by the war. What a difference between my six weeks there last October and the month I have just spent. She is ready, prepared, determined, close mouthed, unhysterical, and, best of all, accomplishing—a valuable and esteemed ally.

Learned to Admire French.

So that is my year, full, interesting, varied. And perhaps the thing I am most grateful for is that I was here in France, because before the war the French had meant to me just one of the Latin races, touching me in no way save through their art and their past literature.

And now they are the people that I admire and love most, next to my own. People write me, in answer to my enthusiastic descriptions of the French, and they say:

"Isn't it just that it has become the fashion to say that the French are wonderful—to extol them and put them up on a pedestal? Doesn't one repeat it as a thoughtless platitude, much as it has become the habit to say, 'Mary Garden has no voice, but she certainly can act'?"

Perhaps it is the fashion; but a platitude it is not. When enough of the world is doing the same thing, that becomes a fashion, doesn't it? And a very large percentage of the world is crying with me today, "Vive la France!"

CHARGES U. S. OFFICERS DRANK TO THE KAISER.

Portland, Ore., Aug. 21.—That two army officers in field uniform last night drank the toast "Deutschland über allies" and "Germany forever" in the Imperial grill at Astoria was the charge made by George Shepherd, a prominent local attorney, in a letter today to Chairman Chamberlain of the senate military committee.

Shepherd's letter, witnessed by E. W. Wright, another prominent Portland man, said Shepherd had heard the officers were Capt. Waldron and Lieut. Gardner of Fort Stevens.

Chamberlain appeared wrought up over the alleged incident.

"Such an act, if committed, was a direct violation of army regulations," he said, "and in defiance of the administration policy of neutrality. How can people be expected to maintain neutrality if uniformed army officers drink such toasts?"

He at once forwarded the letter to Secretary of War Garrison.

WAR MOVEMENTS DURING THE WEEK.

DEVELOPMENTS in the war in Europe during the last week were as follows:

ON THE EASTERN FRONT.

Developments came rapidly on the eastern front during the last week, leaving the Russian armies in the most critical situation they have faced since the great Teuton drive through Poland and Galicia began early in May.

The fall of Kovno and the advance on Riga and Vilna leaves the right flank of Russia's second line of defense in a precarious position. This great stronghold west of the bend of the Nieman river was depended on to hold the north end of the river line, with Grodno, eighty miles to the south. This latter fortress is in imminent danger of being outflanked from the north, and its chief line of communication with Petrograd through Vilna cut. The abandonment of the latter place has been foreshadowed by the Russians ever since the German advance in Kovno and Courland provinces to the northwest of the Vilna district. With Kovno lost the swing to the east and south back of Russia's second line of fortresses has only to overcome the resistance of the grand duke's hard pressed armies to get to the rear of Olita, Grodno, Ossowetz and Bialystok.

The fall of Novo Georgievsk marked the passing of the last of the Russian Vistula line of fortresses. All Poland has been cleared of the czar's forces, except those fighting before Brest Litovsk on the river Bug, before Ossowetz, on the Bobr river, and along the Nieman from Grodno north to the Kovno district.

When the great Teuton drive began in May the Russian advance held all the mountain passes in the Carpathians leading into Hungary. The right of the czar's Galician armies was strongly intrenched along the Dunajec and Biala rivers.

The threatened invasion of Hungary brought together the great Austro-German armies under Von Mackensen at Cracow. With a tremendous preponderance of artillery these armies broke the Russian center on the Dunajec river front and the retirement of all the armies in the Carpathians began. The Russians made their next stand along the San river, but again the German guns smashed their lines and Przemysl, won from the Austrians after a long siege, was lost. Lemberg was abandoned by the Russians as they formed their new line along the Bug.

After the fall of the Galician capital the Austro-Germans swung to the northeast towards the Lublin-Cholm railway, threatening Warsaw from the south. Coincident with this advance came the development of the German offensive along the line of the Narew. As the pressure increased on the south and north of the Warsaw salient the Russians were forced to leave Warsaw to its fate and the retreat to the second line of defense began. Novo Georgievsk was left to be defended. It was thought to hold a garrison of 80,000 men, who were counted on to hold a larger force of Germans in check as a besieging force. The great Austrian and German guns battered through its defenses and Friday its fall was announced.

With Kovno lost and Riga in imminent danger of capture the Russian second line is becoming untenable and another of the great Teuton turning movements promises to be a success.

The Russian commander in chief is still confronted with the serious task of extricating his armies. Brest Litovsk, Ossowetz, Grodno, and Olita remain of his second line, but the defense of this salient is rapidly becoming as precarious a task as that which confronted him along the Vistula, with the German vise fighting along the Lublin-Cholm and Narew lines.

ALONG THE DARDANELLES.

What little news of the fighting in the Gallipoli peninsula filtered through during the week indicated that the effort to relieve the pressure on Russia would be made in that war zone instead of in France and Belgium.

A new force was landed on the peninsula north of the present positions at Cape Suvla. It was reported also that a general offensive was under way and that the allies had determined to batter their way to the defenses of the narrows at any cost.

One report was received that the British had succeeded in cutting the main line of communications of the Turks with Constantinople, which from a strategic standpoint was of more importance than the capture of Warsaw. Confirmation of this victory was lacking.

That the French and British must act and act quickly to relieve the pressure on their hard pressed Slav allies is becoming more obvious daily as the Austro-Germans advance in the east. Only through the Black sea can supplies of arms and ammunition be brought in expeditiously and in sufficient quantities to permit of Russian reorganization to offer a decisive fight to their adversaries.

Italy's early participation in the war on Turkey is expected. Rome's reason for remaining at peace with the enemy of her allies does not seem clear, especially in view of her attitude in the Balkans situation. There were reports during the week that a declaration of war against the sultan would be made in the near future. It was also reported that an expedition of 200,000 was ready to sail at Apulia for the Gallipoli peninsula at a moment's notice.

[Italy declared war on Turkey late Saturday.]

ON THE WESTERN FRONT.

While the Russians are battling for the existence of their armies before the victorious Teuton armies a definite calm seems to have settled on the western battle front. Only artillery engagements with isolated trench warfare of only local significance is reported by London and Paris. The French have claimed some advantage in this fighting, but the long expected general offensive shows no signs of developing.

There have been persistent reports of dissatisfaction over the nibbling tactics of Gen. Joffre, which, it is claimed, is assuming threatening proportions. From Paris comes the rumor that there is a well defined movement to displace the present commander in chief. Gen. Foch, whose offensive tactics won in the battle of the Marne, which brought the retreat of Von Kluck from before Paris and the general falling back of all the German armies to the line of the Aisne, is being urged by Joffre's enemies as his successor.

ON THE AUSTRO-ITALIAN FRONT.

Slight progress on all fronts was reported by the Italian staff during the last week, which were generally denied by Vienna. On the Isonzo front Goritz and Tolmini continue to withstand all Italian assaults and effectively check the long promised invasion of Istria and southern Austria. The chief combats were shifted to the upper reaches of the Isonzo and along the western Trentino front. Vienna reported that all attacks in the Tonole pass region west of Trent were repulsed. On the eastern side of the Trentino salient the Italians continued to batter at the Ausrian defenses dominating the Sexten valley.

The manner in which the Austrians are holding the Italians in check has not produced a favorable impression in London and Paris, especially now that Rome's stand in the political situation of the Balkans is embarrassing the entente powers in their negotiations with Bulgaria, Serbia, and Greece.

Italy's Albanian plans are proving a serious stumbling block in these negotiations and complicating the diplomatic game now being played at Sofia, Bucharest, Athens, and Nish.

Asquith's Hold on Parties Strong as Ever, Says O'Connor

BY T. P. O'CONNOR.
[FOREIGN CORRESPONDENT OF THE TRIBUNE.]

LONDON, [Special.]—Premier Asquith is today more firmly fixed in his position of ascendancy over the parties and men of Great Britain than ever, despite the precarious hold he seemed to have in the first days of the coalition cabinet.

To every close student of parliamentary history the spectacle and the results of the coalition government in England presents interesting studies. The new government started under the most unfavorable auspices, and for some weeks it looked as if it were certain to be shipwrecked almost before it had started on its adventurous voyage.

Indeed, it nearly came to grief within the first few days of its existence over the question of the appointment of Mr. Campbell to the lord chancellorship of Ireland. Liberal opinion was in a restive condition. The labor men were approaching open revolt, and the Irish, of course, had to fight against the Campbell appointment or relax very much their immense hold over Irish opinion—all Irish opinion, that is, which is quite sane, which means 999 out of every thousand Irish Nationalists.

Personal Feeling Bitter.

The political differences between the members of the new government were aggravated, in some cases at least, by strong personal antipathies. I remember as one of the tragic scenes of my life the time I met Mr. Asquith outside the house of commons within a few minutes after he had been subjected to a very wicked and unjustifiable attack by Bonar Law on his announcing that he intended to put the home rule bill on the statute book.

He looked pale, depressed, almost in despair, though he maintained that curious quietude of manner and outward appearance of Yorkshire stolidity which never deserts him. Mr. Asquith is not a man who harbors resentment, but he did resent that attack and remembered it, and I am sure that one of the bitterest parts of his experience in making the new coalition ministry was that he had to sit side by side with a man who he thought had assailed him so unfairly.

Nor did the anxieties of the harassed prime minister end there. He is a man of some few warm friendships, and among the men whom he had to send about their business were intimates of long years' standing. Lord Haldane was one of these. But the Unionists made the dismissal of Lord Haldane a sine qua non of their entrance into the cabinet, and Haldane had to go.

I have already told the story that, seated among his family, Mr. Asquith at last let go the full tide of his inner bitterness, and at the close of the first day of the coalition government described it as the most miserable day of his life. It was, perhaps, this strain of parting friendships that brought in another factor that was calculated to still further depress.

Politician Like Steeplejack.

For in political life every man who gets to the top may be compared to the steeplejack who climbs to the giddy heights of the cross on the top of a lofty steeple. The whole world stands watching to see whether he will slip or succeed.

For a few weeks the position of Asquith lay trembling in the balance. He himself was indifferent to the result; he is tired; he has had nearly nine years of office and in very strenuous times; he has had a some what difficult cabinet to manage, and politics have whitened the hair which I saw (it seems to me but yesterday) the shining fair hair of a stripling when he stood up to defend Parnell against the Pigott forgeries.

Irish Party Big Factor.

I think the Irish party was largely responsible for his holding on, as well, of course, as his sense that the country demanded his presence at the head of affairs. On one of the fateful days when the whole fate of the cabinet was trembling in the balance the Irish party held a meeting to decide on its policy. Without breaking the bond of secrecy which binds the inner councils of that party, I may say that a feeling of great confidence and great affection for Mr. Asquith was the dominating note.

It is curious how this man always asserts his immense intellectual predominance whenever he comes into close contact with other men, and this is what happened in the cabinet. I asked one of Mr. Asquith's colleagues and friends how the "P. M."—as he is familiarly called, just as Mr. Gladstone was always called "Mr. G." and Campbell-Bannerman was known as "C. B." by his colleagues—how, I say, the "P. M." was faring. I should mention that this friend of the prime minister was one of those who had taken the most pessimistic view of the coalition and had prophesied that it would not last for more than a few months.

Given New Energy.

"Why," he replied, "it has done the 'P. M.' all the good in the world; it has given him new life and renewed energy."

And then this gentleman, who has a gift of epigrammatic speech, said that while the cabinet consisted of members only of the same political party and personal friends tied to each other by long acquaintance as well as by common political sympathies, Mr. Asquith was inclined to sit silently during most of the discussions.

He was, said his friend, like the British materfamilias at breakfast who sits behind the big tea pot and listens silently to the chatter of her offspring with amused tolerance. But now, went on the friend, he watches everything; when anybody says something not very clever he gazes at him and the interrupter becomes silent; and when discussion—as is the case even in cabinets—becomes discursive the prime minister intervenes promptly and brings debate back to the real and inner issues, and thus guides and controls all these men of such strong characters mainly and of such intellectual distinction.

Opponents Become Friends.

Thus, then, Mr. Asquith has only friends today in a cabinet of which nearly half a few months ago were his strong political opponents. In the house of commons he is unassailable and almost omnipotent. The few voices that tried to carry on the newspaper campaign against him were drowned in the universal howl of misapprobation which rose from all parts of the house whenever they even whispered any such purpose.

The appearance of the house of commons has thus been entirely transformed from anything anybody has ever seen there since the beginning of time. The intimacy of political life has brought also the intimacy of social and private relations; and thus those men so estranged are becoming daily more friendly to one another. A. Bonar Law, the old time enemy, sits frequently at Mr. Asquith's side and they may be seen in constant consultation and in friendly converse. Some of the new ministers stand in isolation largely because they have such absorbing work in their offices.

"MOTHER LOVE."

How little do we appreciate a Mother's tenderness while living, how heedless are we in childhood of all her anxiety and kindness, but when she is dead and gone, when the cares and coldness of the world comes withering to our hearts, when we learn how hard it is to find true sympathy, how few love us for ourselves, how few will befriend us in our misfortune, then it is we think of the Mother we have lost.

A STATEMENT from THE WHITE COMPANY to MOTOR CAR BUYERS

IN view of the confusing market which confronts motor car purchasers, many are looking to this company for an expression of its attitude toward the innovations in mechanical design and new price levels now being announced. We therefore take this occasion to state our beliefs and purposes, which are based on fourteen successful years of experience.

We believe the four-cylinder motor is to be the standard and ultimate type. We therefore consider it wiser to continue perfecting this type of motor, which we have already spent years in developing, than to step abruptly into a field of design that is new to the entire automobile industry, and thus impose an experiment upon our customers.

With reference to price, the White policy will be as it always has been—to build cars to the White standard rather than to a standard that would make a cheap price possible. Materials and labor cost more now than ever before—consequently, lower prices must and do indicate compromised quality.

We hold it as a first principle of our duty to purchasers of White Cars to make a product that will give maximum service with the least amount of attention and of expense for operation and maintenance; a product of such quality and approved construction that it will command high value at any time the owner may wish to dispose of it; in all, to build motor cars which the owners can truly regard as investments.

White policy will always be governed by consideration for the ultimate service-value of White Cars. We will not take part in the spectacular methods, adopted solely for sales stimulation, which prevail in the motor car market at the present time.

In short, the stability of policy which has always meant security to White owners will continue. We neither consider it good business nor do we find it necessary to repudiate the design nor to depreciate, unnaturally, the value of cars which have been purchased from us, by making frequent radical changes in design and price.

RAVINIA PARK.

Music has its perfect concomitants at Ravinia park—a setting of white oaks, a landscape touched but not mauled by human intervention, a mosquito—not a perfect concomitant—now and then, but less now and more then than anywhere along the north shore, at calendar periods a moon which in scimitar or full disc hangs at the top of the trees or mellows the full sky, a rustling wind from the lake, or a soft wind from the Skokie.

With these concomitants, in this perfect setting of all things that can enhance the value of moments given to realization that man has a taste for other things than food, the Chicago Symphony orchestra would, if it had support, contribute to delight all the rare delicacies of fine music contrived to be to the ear what the light of the harvest moon is to the eyes when it makes aisles in a wood and a sheen on a field.

It would if it had support. Grand opera at Ravinia is good. It may not be grand, but it is good. It is less the thing than the orchestra. It means less in its surroundings. It is less a part of them, but it is more to the box office, and Ravinia, supported by a few people and by them against great discouragement, must, if it is to exist, consult the sales the box office man makes.

It is a complaint that American life is barren. They do things otherwise elsewhere. They make life copious and bountiful. They make it rich and attractive. They fill it with pleasant experiences. We do not. We leave it stark and exposed to all the realities. Why, then, cannot the American people find themselves and control their ways more pleasantly?

To this complaint the answer might be, for this region, Ravinia park, an institution which has never known what profit was, an institution which does not want to know what profit is, which merely asks that deficits do not engulf the people responsible for the management at the end of a season.

With opera Ravinia park is good. With the orchestra alone it would be better. It might have the better if it received the support which an important American institution deserved. It is an American institution. It is one of the kind which we hope will be multiplied for other generations. It is one of the kind which will mean a great deal in American life some time. This one is here now for this generation in this locality. A wise locality would support it.

REASONABLE PREPAREDNESS.

Mr. I. Hollingsworth Wood, to whom, as secretary of the Amerian League to Limit Armaments, reference has been made before, is determined to put "preparedness, so-called," in a pillory and pelt it to death with sarcasm. Mr. Wood has the pleasant task of persuading people that they do not need to do something disagreeable they are asked to do. The advocates of preparedness have the less pleasant task of telling people that they may have to do something that is not at all agreeable, and that it will be less disagreeable if they are more prepared for it.

Mr. Wood, for the American League to Limit Armaments, asks what, if we prepare, are we preparing for or against? There is an element of reason in that inquiry and the answer must be candidly that we do not and cannot definitely know.

That does not, however, as the league to limit would hasten to assume, indicate that preparedness is a wasteful folly by confession. The American nation cannot prepare itself to meet specified and apparent dangers which, possibly, by its preparation it would increase. We have no defined foreign policy other than one of keeping out of as much trouble as we can avoid. We have no alliances and no obligations to other nations.

It would be assumed by the league to limit that unless preparedness embraced every extreme possibility which might require it, it has been proved useless. Nations, it is said, do not fight individually but by groups. If we are to be prepared against Germany, we must be prepared against the German, Austrian, and Turkish group. If we are to be prepared against Japan, we must be prepared against the British, French, Russian, Japanese, Italian, Serbian, and Montenegrin group. We must have a bigger navy, if naval preparedness be considered, than the combined navies of any group which might prove antagonistic. The impossibility of this would be conceded. Then, triumphantly from the league, what's the use of your preparation when, after expense and labor, it does not prepare?

The answer is simple. Life cannot be prepared against all possibility and all contingency. No human being can be so prepared. No nation can be so prepared. If it follows that such preparation as can be made is futile, then the whole scheme of protective devices which surround the individual and surround communities is a foolish endeavor on the part of men.

Why know how to swim? You might be dropped in mid-Atlantic with no rescue possible. Why have a police force? A mob might sweep the whole force away and loot the city. Why have a fire department? Cities have been visited by fires which no department could control. Why waste time on health inspection? If you are spared typhoid by the work of the department, you may die of Bright's disease.

The scheme of protective preparedness never contemplates that it shall be found equal to all attacks upon it. Its philosophy is contained in the word reasonable. Logic is not necessarily reasonable.

The United States is asked to avoid provoking nations by its inability to resist. It is not asked to provoke them by arousing the fear in them that if they do not equip themselves better they will be unable to resist the United States.

Opponents of preparedness in the United States seem incapable of understanding that they are working upon a country which all through its history has been committed to the policies they advocate. Their work ought to be done upon stubborn, not yielding, minds. Carry the disarmament propaganda abroad. The United States always will be a laggard.

If the biggest navy in the world were represented by a shingle carrying a firecracker, the United States would be satisfied with a floating toothpick. If the most powerful army in the world were a squad of boy scouts, the United States would confide its defense to a 2 year old baby armed with a rattle.

FACE THE CONSEQUENCES.

THE TRIBUNE views the proposals to break off diplomatic relations with Germany with consternation. If war is to result we ought to make it, not expose ourselves to it.

Breaking off diplomatic relations with Germany gives that country a cause for war if she wants to take it, whenever she wants to take it.

Breaking off diplomatic relations with another country without intention to go to war can be done safely only when the country doing the breaking off is infinitely stronger than the country with which it breaks relations.

In international affairs breaking off diplomatic relations is the "fighting word." It is "knocking a chip off the shoulder." It is "slapping the face." Whoever does one of these things in private life must be ready to fight. He must be ready to give or expect to receive the first blow.

Breaking off diplomatic relations may not be followed by a declaration of war, very true. But then it may be.

The breaking off of diplomatic relations between Japan and Russia was followed by the Japanese attack upon the Russian fleet without a declaration of war. Russia did not consider the breaking off of diplomatic relations as necessarily leading to war, and as a result she received a knockout blow before she could put her hands up.

As a quick starter Germany has nothing to learn from Japan. She is the leading exponent of the doctrine that necessity knows no law, and she deems herself the judge of necessity as well as the judge of law.

Because of Austria's quarrel with Serbia she deemed it necessary to invade Belgium in violation of an existing treaty and to execute civilians for defending themselves.

If the United States breaks off diplomatic relations with Germany, Germany will take exactly such steps as she thinks desirable from her point of view.

If after breaking off diplomatic relations the United States confines itself to the commandeering of all the ammunition now being made for Germany's enemies the effect of the torpedoing of the Arabic may be exactly what it was hoped to be by the torpedoers.

But, on the other hand, Germany is war wild. The next step may as well be the torpedoing of an American merchant ship, or, if one can be reached, an American battleship.

Again, Germany is far sighted and of long purpose. She may let the quarrel drag along until her hands are free, and she may then use it to exact an enormous war indemnity to pay for the cost of this war or she may use it to break into South America or to take the Philippines.

Breaking off diplomatic relations with Germany is mortgaging our future to the kaiser.

If President Wilson feels that he does not intend to go to war, the time to back down is now. If he feels that the time for action has come, he should call congress into session to put the republic in a state of military preparedness to sustain its diplomatic position.

We cannot afford to break off diplomatic relations with Germany unless we have an army of half a million men and the second greatest navy in the world. This will cost hundreds of millions, but war with Germany without such a preparation will cost billions.

Controversy with Germany is not a Sunday school debate. It is a prize fight and a wrestling match, with no rules on fouls and with no holds barred.

Hitherto in America the controversy has been looked upon as one of repartee. It is very close to the stage of grisly death today. Let us face that fact.

EMBARRASSMENTS TO CULTURE.

When Sir Thomas More, who became a saint, occupied various positions in England, it was possible for a man of parts to know literally everything there was to be known. There were many of them at that time, prodigious in the breadth of their culture. Languages, modern and ancient, so far as the latter had been deciphered, were at their tongues' end. Even the ladies showed themselves occasionally able to sparkle about astronomy and rattle off Latin verses. Omniscience was something of a feat, it is true, but it was possible.

But the modern gentleman of means finds himself in a predicament. He who would affect culture is confronted with disconcerting statistics gotten up by the bureau of education at Washington. This year, it is recorded, there are more than 75,000,000 volumes in the 18,000 regularly constituted libraries of the United States.

Even after counting out the works of Harold Bell Wright—the federal statisticians have not taken the pains to do this—the actual quantity of tabulated culture is almost humorous in its magnitude. Much of the material must be fiction. But a knowledge of good fiction is necessary to the maintenance of adequate social defense.

Our seekers after culture must be appalled to think that even the dustman has his technique and that this knowledge is solemnly incorporated into municipal reports. His difficulties are augmented by the danger of becoming an expert. He may ride his hobby into a learned profession.

Such a course, with all its disadvantages, is the only way out for our gentleman. It is at best a mean evasion, but it offers a means of defense. A carefully cultivated passion for John Donne, or even for one so obvious as Chaucer, will serve. With such ammunition it is possible to be ignorant of James and Bergson, or to admit an early but luckily interrupted interest in Shakespeare.

LA MARQUISE DE FONTENOY

[Copyright: 1915: By the Brentwood company.]

COMMANDER THE HON. MAURICE NELSON HOOD of the Royal Naval reserves, who, having been missing since the operations against the Germans in Belgium last autumn, has now been judicially presumed dead, was the only surviving son of Viscount Bridport. The latter represents two of England's greatest naval heroes—namely: Nelson and Hood.

When Admiral Lord Nelson fell in the battle of Trafalgar he left no legitimate issue, and his honors passed to his only surviving elder brother, the Rev. Dr. William Nelson, who, moreover, received in national recognition of Trafalgar the Earldom of Nelson, with a perpetual pension of $25,000 a year, inalienable from the earldom.

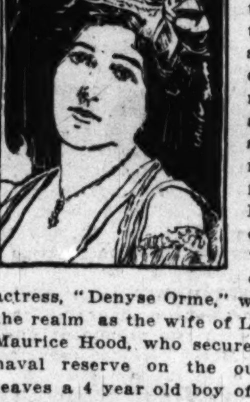
The descent of the earldom and of the pension was most curiously arranged. For it was stipulated in the patent that in the event of the earl dying without male issue the peerages and the annuities should pass to the son of Mrs. Thomas Bolton of Wells, Norfolkshire, the eldest sister of the great admiral.

Now, the son of the parson earl predeceased his father, who on his demise left an only daughter. She, according to the Italian law of succession, inherited from her father the Neapolitan Dukedom of Bronte, and all the valuable Sicilian estates on the slopes of Mount Etna, bestowed by King Ferdinand and Queen Caroline of Naples upon the great admiral for his defense of their throne against the French.

She became, therefore, Duchess of Bronte in her own right, and married the Hon. Samuel Hood, grandson of that famous admiral, Viscount Hood, whose naval exploits included the defeat of the French fleet under the Comte de Grasse in 1782, his seizure of Toulon in 1793, and his capture of the island of Corsica.

The Hon. Samuel Hood was also a grandnephew of the first Viscount Hood's younger brother, Alexander Hood, who was created Viscount Bridport for his victory over the French fleet at L'Orient. As this first Lord Bridport left no children his honors passed, by special remainder, to his nephew, Samuel Hood, husband of the Duchess of Bronte; and thus the families of Nelson and of Hood became united.

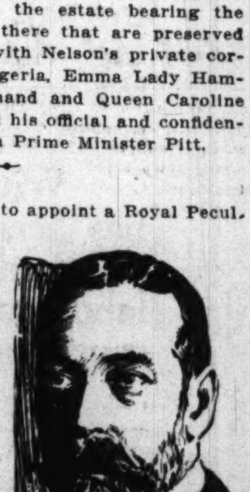
The eldest son of this union became third Lord Bridport through his father, and Duke of Bronte through his mother, joined the household of Queen Victoria in 1841, and save for a term of military service in the Crimea remained connected with the court, first as equerry and then as lord in waiting, until his death in 1904.



The present Viscount Bridport is his eldest son, like him a soldier by profession, and is married to a sister of the late Earl of Ilchester. His only surviving son, now judicially declared to be dead, a victim of the war, had a rather stormy career, and was obliged to leave the navy, in which he held a lieutenancy, in consequence of his bankruptcy. He married a few years ago a Miss Eileen Kendall, known on the stage as Miss "Dorothy Orme," cousin of that popular actress, "Denyse Orme," who is now a peeress of the realm as the wife of Lord Churston. The late Maurice Hood, who secured a commission in the naval reserve on the outbreak of the war, leaves a 4 year old boy of the name of Rowland by his marriage, who, if he lives, will succeed his grandfather as Viscount Bridport.

The viscount no longer possesses the Dukedom of Bronte. The latter, by virtue of the late Lord Bridport's will and by special arrangement with the Italian government, was bequeathed to the late peer's younger son, the Hon. Alexander Hood, treasurer of Queen Mary's household, her private secretary when she was Princess of Wales, and before that controller of the household of her parents, the late Duke and Duchess of Teck.

When not engaged in his duties at court he is to be found at his home in Sicily, at the grand old castle of Maniaces, the estate bearing the name of Bronte. It is there that are preserved the huge chests, filled with Nelson's private correspondence with his Egeria, Emma Lady Hamilton, with King Ferdinand and Queen Caroline of Naples, as well as all his official and confidential correspondence with Prime Minister Pitt.



King George is about to appoint a Royal Pecul. in London, an office 400 years old, which has just become vacant through the death of the Rev. Dr. Henry George Woods. The Royal Peculiars are ecclesiastics who are independent of the episcopal jurisdiction of the bishop in whose diocese their cure of souls is located, and who hold their authority direct from the sovereign, in his capacity as supreme head of the Church of England.

They are appointed by letters patent and do not require any institution or induction. The chief of the Royal Peculiars in London is the dean of Westminster abbey, and the others comprise the dean of Windsor, the chaplains of the chapels royal, of St. James' palace, and of the Savoy, and the master of the Temple.

The exemption from episcopal jurisdiction enjoyed by the master of the Temple dates back to long prior to the reformation, in fact, from the time when the Temple church belonged to the Knights Templars, who were themselves by a papal bull immune from all episcopal authority or interference.

The church is one of the oldest in England and was consecrated in 1185, being built on the plan of the Church of the Holy Sepulchre at Jerusalem. When the order of Knights Templars was suppressed in 1312, the church, which is circular in shape, was turned over by the crown, along with other property of the Knights Templars, to Knights Hospitallers of St. John of Jerusalem, who in the reign of Edward III. leased the adjoining buildings to certain professors of common law. This was the origin of the so-called Inner and Middle Temple, Inns of Court, which flourish to this day. By the time of the reformation the members of the legal fraternity had become a permanent institution at the Temple.

MILK FOR BABY.

DURING the hot season milk will not keep without ice. The city consumer in the north gets milk once a day. In the south there is a double daily delivery. Where the milk is hauled into the city by railroad train the milk is from 36 to 48 hours old when it reaches the consumer. This means that some of the milk consumed in northern cities is 96 hours old when it is consumed. Much of it is 72 hours old. In the south some of it is 48 hours old. Much of it is 24 hours old.

These facts mean just this: If a man has a good refrigerator in his home and is willing to pay for refrigeration from the cow to the consumer, he should feed his babies on milk from the cow, provided the mother cannot breast-feed them. Unless there is an ice box and ice in the home, and unless the milk has been kept cold from the cow to the consumer, the baby should not be fed on cows' milk. This is true in the summer time, whether the milk bought is certified, pasteurized, inspected, grade A, grade B, or any other variety.

Williams' study shows that 45 per cent of the homes in Rochester, N. Y., do not take ice. It is probable that the same proportions would hold in other American cities. In the country it would be higher still, but, then, the milk consumed by babies in the country would never be more than 8 hours old.

Now, put this down as basic: A man who will pay a double price for certified milk and not buy ice with which to keep it is idiotic. Add this as a corollary: The doctor or nurse who persuades people to buy certified milk or other high priced milk without first making provision for an ice supply is lacking in common sense.

The great majority of the babies are in homes where ice is not taken. What is the solution? The best solution by far is to give the baby breast milk until it is old enough to take gruels, soups, cereals, and fruit juices.

However, with many thousands of women it is a question of the next best solution. The next best solution is a milk food or prepared food made from milk, as contrasted with milk commonly called fresh milk. What is the advantage and the disadvantage of each of these?

CONDENSED MILK—Condensed milk is sometimes called sweetened condensed milk. One gallon of ordinary market milk is evaporated in a vacuum so as to make two pints and one-quarter of condensed milk. To the condensed product 40 per cent of cane sugar is added. Men engaged in the trade tell me that the milk at one stage of the process is sterile, but certainly the finished product is not. It is evaporated at low temperature in a partial [?] vacuum in order not to burn the sugar.

The finished product contains 9 to 11 per cent fat, 14 to 16 per cent milk sugar, 32 to 41 per cent cane sugar, 9 to 12 per cent protein, and 2 to 2.5 per cent ash. Sweetened condensed milk made from skimmed milk contains 2 per cent fat. The label on the can says:

"By adding one part of water to one part of the contents of this can a resulting milk product will be obtained which will not be below the legal standards for whole milk."

This statement is correct. A milk made by such dilution will contain: Fat, 5 per cent; sugars, 26 per cent; protein, 5 per cent, and ash, 1 per cent. Contrast this with the analysis of cow's milk, which is as follows:

Fat, 3.5 per cent; sugar, 4 to 4.5 per cent; protein, 3.8 to 4 per cent; ash, 7 per cent.

It will be seen that the condensed milk to which an equal part of water has been added is much richer than cow's milk, especially in sugar. If such a mixture be used instead of cow's milk and in the same proportions as cow's milk the baby will be very much overfed. If the dilutions be made as the directions on the can say, the mixture will be much too rich in sugar and much too weak in fats and protein.

Babies fed the first way will get indigestion and diarrhœa. Babies fed the second way will be fat and soft. Many of them will develop scurvy, some rickets, and many will be weak in the legs and grow poorly, at least so long as they are on condensed milk.

A 12 month old baby getting six teaspoonfuls of condensed milk in seven ounces of water at a feeding may get very fat, but it cannot thrive, because it does not get enough of the food elements needed for growth, even though it be fed every three hours night and day.

A feeding rule generally used now is to give one ounce and a half of milk in the twenty-four hours for each pound that the baby weighs and to add to this a tablespoonful of sugar and water enough to make five feedings.

When sweetened condensed milk is diluted with an equal quantity of water the product is about once and a half as rich in all food ingredients as whole milk, except for sugar, the proportion of which is much greater.

A better plan would be to give a fourteen pound baby one ounce and a half of condensed milk dissolved in seven to eight ounces of water as a feeding. Five such feedings in the twenty-four hours are enough. In addition there must be one feeding of breast milk or fresh cow's milk, properly diluted, each day. Orange juice must be given. Sometimes a neighborly woman will nurse the baby once a day; sometimes not. In some cases the baby will not take the breast.

What are the reasons underlying these suggestions? If there is no ice in the house baby cannot drink city so-called fresh cow's milk. Sweetened condensed milk will keep without ice until the can is used up. But it is a cooked milk, and children fed on it exclusively get scurvy. To combat that orange juice is given.

Babies will not grow unless their food contains enough proteid, enough fat, and a vitamine called lysin. In these sweetened condensed milk is deficient. One stomachful a day of breast milk or properly diluted cow's milk will supply enough of the growing principle. During the balance of the day diluted condensed milk may be used.

Suggested program for a baby six months old weighing fourteen pounds where the family cannot get ice and must feed the baby some form of baby food:

6 a. m.—Fresh bottled milk, just delivered, 4½ ounces; water, 2½ ounces, or a breast feeding where possible.

10 a. m., 2 p. m., 6 p. m., and 10 p. m.—Sweetened condensed milk, 8 teaspoonfuls in 7 ounces of boiled water each feeding.

A tablespoonful of orange juice at 12 o'clock. Water at 8 o'clock, 4 o'clock, and during the night is necessary.

EVAPORATED MILK—Evaporated milk is sometimes known as unsweetened condensed milk. It is milk which has been evaporated in a vacuum. The heating is done at a higher temperature than in the case of sweetened condensed milk. At the moment when the can is opened the milk is sterile. This is necessary, as evaporated milk does not have that excess of sugar, which in the case of sweetened condensed milk prevents bacteria from multiplying.

Analysis of evaporated milk shows:
Fat—9 to 12 per cent.
Milk sugar—13 to 15.5 per cent.
Proteins—9 to 12 per cent.
Ash—1.6 to 2.3 per cent.

The label on this milk states that when diluted with an equal quantity of water it gives a product above the legal requirements for milk. Evaporated milk, thus diluted, would compare with cow's milk as follows:

	Evaporated milk [1 to 2].	Cow's milk.
Fat	3 to 4	3.5 to 4
Milk sugar	4 1-3 to 5 2-3	4 to 4.5
Protein	3 to 3 1-3	3.8 to 4
Ash	.53 to .72	.7

Evaporated milk, one part to boiled water two parts, has nearly the composition of whole so-called fresh cow's milk. It is inferior to cow's milk in that it has been cooked and is therefore somewhat deficient in the anti-scurvy principle and in the growth principle, lysin.

Evaporated milk is sterile at the moment the can is opened. Fresh milk, when opened in the house, contains a few thousand or a few hundred thousand bacilli. Bacteria multiply more rapidly in fluid milk than in evaporated milk.

Evaporated milk, therefore, at the end of forty-eight hours after the can has been opened, meanwhile having been kept at room temperature, is in better condition than fluid milk kept at the same temperature and under the same conditions will be at the end of twenty-four hours. The disadvantage of evaporated milk is that it has been treated. Its use, therefore, leads to scurvy, rickets, and deficient growth.

A disadvantage, as compared with sweetened condensed milk, is that it does not keep so well after the can has been opened. From the standpoint of spoiling, sweetened condensed milk is fool-proof. Evaporated milk is not.

Therefore, under the very worst of home conditions sweetened condensed milk is to be preferred. Where the people are without ice, but know what should be done and are willing to try to do it, evaporated milk is the better.

As compared with fluid milk, evaporated milk keeps better and is never infected with tubercle, typhoid, or diphtheria bacilli, foot and mouth, septic sore throat, or scarlet fever organisms. Its disadvantage is that it induces scurvy, rickets, and poor growth.

A good plan for a baby 6 months old, weighing fourteen pounds, in a home where ice cannot be afforded, is as follows:

6 a. m.—A breast feeding, or, if that be not possible, a feeding of fluid milk delivered less than two hours before and fresh as shown by the date.
Mixture—
Milk—5 ounces.
Water—2 ounces.
Malt sugar—1 ounce.
8 a. m.—Tablespoonful of orange juice.
10 a. m.—Evaporated milk—1 2-3 ounce.
Water to make 7 ounces.
Malt sugar—Tablespoonful.
2 p. m.—Same as at 10 o'clock.
4 p. m.—Orange juice.
6 p. m.—Same as at 10 o'clock.
10 p. m.—Same as at 10 o'clock a. m.

CANKER AND DIET.

W. S. writes: "Thinking my experience in hunting for health may prove helpful to others similarly afflicted, I state that for the last twenty-five years) I am now in my seventy-eighth year) I have suffered much from acidity of the stomach, as shown by cankers in the mouth almost continuously. I could not eat sweets and a week rarely passed without an attack. In my younger days I suffered a great deal from this trouble, notwithstanding the care exercised in my diet. I had an exceptionally good appetite, but curbed it and ate very moderately or sparingly of good, wholesome food, in an effort to avoid my trouble, but to no purpose. I have many times consulted able physicians upon my affliction, and got only temporary relief. Some four weeks ago (I dine at noon) I ate for my dessert fifteen dates, with graham bread and butter. Almost immediately I got relief from my trouble and continued the use of the food. Since I have had but one canker spot, which quickly yielded to a touch of blue vitriol, my long time friend. Will you pardon me if I go a little further and tell my experience in deep breathing? Some eighteen or twenty years ago I took up this system: Lying upon my back on the floor and inhaling slowly until my lungs were filled, moving my arms parallel with the floor in a semi-circle until they met above my head; then slowly exhaling, while returning my arms to their original position. This was repeated six or seven times, and was followed after a few minutes' rest by lifting the arms as they lay at my side, inhaling as before, and carrying them back directly over my head till my fingers touched the floor beyond. This was twice repeated with a little rest between each act. The result has been that, notwithstanding a loss in all these years of some fifteen or twenty pounds, the girth of my chest, a little below the arms, increased two inches, my normal weight being 150 pounds and my height 5 feet 9 inches. My health has been almost uniformly good, as you may yourself imagine when I state that I get in a daily walk of from four to six miles as shown by my pedometer. As a child I was quite fragile. At the age of 11 I had a six weeks' siege of what was then called lung fever, but in reality was pleuro-pneumonia of a serious form. My father's physician said: 'Give the boy his rod and gun and let him have all the pleasure he can get out of them, as he cannot live beyond 20 years of age at the most.'"

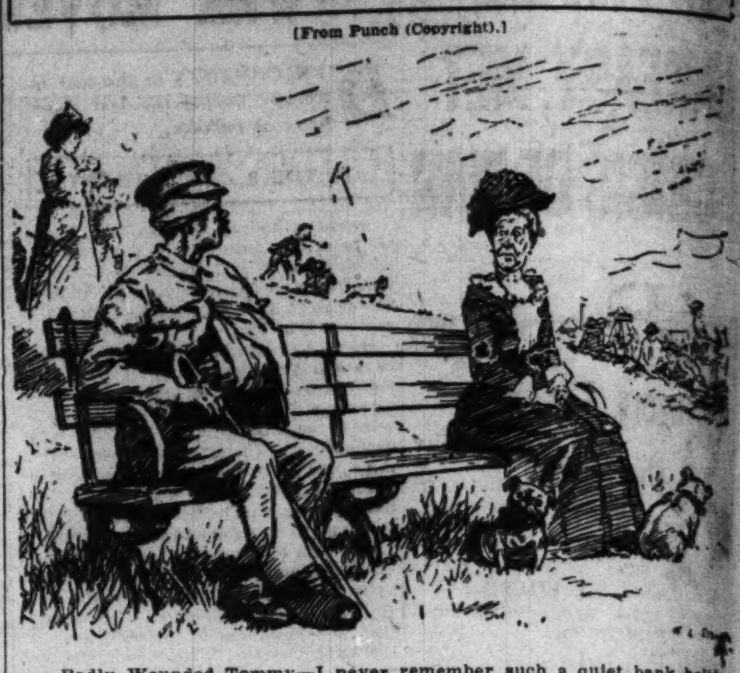
HORRORS OF WAR.

[From Punch (Copyright).]



Badly Wounded Tommy—I never remember such a quiet bank holiday, mum. Somehow nothing's brought the war home to me more.

TENT SPACE ON BEACH.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—[To the Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if it is possible for one to procure a permit to put up a tent at Manhattan beach between 77th and 78th streets. I am desirous of using it on Sunday only during the summer season.

C. WIT, 1423 West 70th street.

Replying to the attached inquiry, if the applicant desires space easterly of what is known as Lake Park avenue, the reply is that this portion of the beach has been acquired by the special park commission for bathing beach purposes and is held by the city in trust for all of the people of the city, and special privileges cannot be granted to individuals. If the applicant desires space westerly of what is known as Lake Park avenue, the reply is that this is still held in private ownership, and he should apply to the owner of the particular lot or tract upon which he desires to put up a tent. JAMES G. SKINNER,
Assistant Corporation Counsel.

DISPOSAL OF GARBAGE.

Chicago, Aug. 7.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The janitor in charge of several buildings has been bringing the garbage collected to the rear of a flat building adjoining, supposedly for the convenience of the collectors. It is very unpleasant, especially in the hot weather, to have the refuse of the neighboring buildings dumped on the premises adjoining, and I wondered whether the city required the janitor to do this work for the convenience of their collectors.

E. J. HITCHCOCK,
2040 West Monroe street.

The building referred to is at 3144 Jackson boulevard, is an eighteen flat building, and all garbage has been kept under one porch.

Arrangements have been made with the janitor by ward superintendent whereby garbage will be kept in the rear of each flat, and part of it will be removed from alley and part from Troy street. Service is given three times each week. WALTER G. LEININGER,
Superintendent of Streets.

NO CAUSE FOR COMPLAINT.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—[To the Friend of the People.]—The drain pipe from the roof of the building located at the northwest corner of Van Buren street and Western avenue terminates about twelve feet above the middle of the sidewalk and makes it necessary for a person to walk out into the street in rainy weather to avoid being drenched. Any help you can render in this matter will be appreciated.

H. E.

The department has investigated this and finds that the downspout is properly connected and is not the cause of any nuisance.

JOHN DILL ROBERTSON,
Commissioner of Health.

DEPENDS UPON CONDITIONS IN LEASE.

Chicago, Aug. 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—I signed a two year lease which has until next May to run for the apartment I am living in, and the landlord promised to do some wall papering. This he did, but in a poor way, the new paper being laid over the old paper, and as a result it has gradually peeled off. The sewer has also backed up, filling the basement with water, and there still exists an odor as a result. I notified him that the roof was leaking but he has failed to give it attention. Do you think that under the circumstances explained I can be held to my lease? P. J. E.

Unless the condition of the flat is so as to make it not only uncomfortable but untenantable you cannot break the lease without incurring liability therefor. However, if your lease imposes the duty of repairing upon the landlord and he refuses so to do you may order the repairing done, if absolutely necessary, and deduct the cost from the rent.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

CANNOT REDEEM PROPERTY.

Maywood, Ill., Aug. 20.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me how much time the law allows a person to redeem a piece of property [farm] in the state of New Jersey on which the mortgage has been foreclosed and the property sold at public sale.

CONSTANT READER.

The person's right to the property is lost absolutely by foreclosure and sale in New Jersey.
TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

MORTGAGE SUBJECT TO TAX.

Lostant, Ill., Aug. 13.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly state whether notes issued by a bank for money loaned on land, the mortgage itself covering the loan being made out in the name of the bank and held by the bank, is subject to taxation. If so, does the private party who loans the money pay the tax, or the bank that holds the mortgage?

INQUIRER.

The law says that the note should be scheduled. The mortgage held by the bank is subject to tax.

TRIBUNE LAW DEPARTMENT.

NO SUCH LAW.

Chicago, Aug. 10.—[To the Legal Friend of the People.]—Kindly inform me if the building law provides that all buildings must be at least one foot from the sidewalk on residence streets. C. T.

There is no such law, either on residence streets or otherwise. CHARLES BOSTROM, Commissioner of Buildings.

"LEAVING THE LAWYERS OUT."

Chicago, Aug. 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In your "Editorial of the Day" called "Leaving the Lawyers Out" the Engineering Record is quoted as saying: "Many another engineering problem would be well on the way toward solution were the opposing engineers left to agree upon the facts and adjust differences of opinion between themselves, instead of intrusting the negotiations to lawyers with little appreciation of the engineering features of the problem."

This advice ought to please the lawyers, for that plan, if followed, means endless business for them.

Contracts drawn by laymen are one of the greatest sources of litigation known to the law. There is always some dispute about them. Some important element is left out, or the meaning is not clear—a judge has to construe the instrument and decide what the parties were trying to get at—and finally damages are awarded to the aggrieved party, or they have to start all over again with a loss of both time and money. Eventually half a dozen lawyers are called in to straighten out a tangle that never would have existed if one good lawyer had drawn up a proper contract in the first place.

The people referred to in the editorial completed the preliminaries of their business in forty-five minutes without a lawyer. They may, before they get through with it, get into litigation that may take four years in coming to a conclusion.

STRIKE DUTY AND NATIONAL GUARD.

Rockford, Ill., Aug. 16.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In regard to your recent editorial, "A Military Policy," will you permit me to offer the following prediction? The building up of the national guard by volunteer enlistment can never be successfully accomplished so long as the young men, the large majority of whom must be enlisted from our shops, factories, and stores, know as they do now that sooner or later as national guardsmen they will be called upon for strike service against their fellow workingmen.

Speaking from experience, I served four years in the I. N. G., and I am satisfied that the employment of the national guard in labor troubles has done more to discourage enlistments than all other causes combined.

Even an appeal to patriotic sentiment is not sufficient to overcome the existing prejudice against such employment.

I have never belonged to a labor union, so am not prejudiced from that standpoint, but my observations lead me to believe that if the national guard would be successfully built up to an efficient standard that other means must be found to handle labor troubles so that in enlisting for military training the prospective soldier from the shop and factory will be assured that he will never be called on for strike duty. F. A. C.

VETERAN VOLUNTEER CORPS.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Referring to the subject of "preparedness for defense," I fail to see mention made of a strong body of efficient men who could be relied upon, namely, soldiers of the Civil war. These men average now about 72 years of age and many are fit for certain duties judging from comrades whom I know. Several divisions could be organized from this source, should the magnitude of the occasion require, of men strong and active, capable of many necessary duties usually performed by men detailed from the regular line and from the front.

While the old soldiers might not endure campaigning in the field such duties as patrol, guards at posts, in the quartermaster and commissary departments and manning forts could be performed by them. This would release the younger men from these duties and render the effective force in the field intact. These divisions might constitute a separate army corps, called, say, Veteran Volunteer Corps, and be distributed to the different military departments. Tentative enrollment could begin now to test the proposition. War is neither sensible nor humane, and I do not advocate it, but while it is resorted to by other powerful nations, our country should at once proceed to organize and equip an armed force far superior to that of any other two powers combined.

BIG CROPS IN IDAHO.

Buhl, Idaho, Aug. 14.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In THE TRIBUNE I noticed an article from Wauseon, O., giving the world's record on wheat raising of over fifty-eight bushels to the acre. John Gullich, near Buhl, raised 1,265 bushels of wheat on eleven acres—115 bushels to the acre. Another farmer has raised this year 14,080 pounds of white clover seed on eighteen acres, which will net him over $200 per acre. If any one wants to know more about this let him address Box 488, Buhl, Idaho. J. F. CONSTANT.

THE H. C. OF L.

Benton Harbor, Mich., Aug. 17.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—In re the high cost of living, why? When apples, cabbages, beets, beans, tomatoes, etc., are rotting on the ground in Michigan for lack of a market that will pay expense of harvest. At least returns from Chicago commission men so indicate. E. D. W

REIMS AGAIN

By Robert Herrick.

PARIS, July 21.—The sun was throwing golden cross lights over the cathedral of Reims when we came into the little silent square beneath the splendid western front. I had had many glimpses of its lofty presence before; the smoke stained walls, the springing buttresses, rise at every angle above the wreck of all lesser buildings in the city. As seen first from afar, now in the full nearer view, the surprising thing was the majesty of the windowless, roofless, defaced cathedral. Acres upon acres of other buildings here in Reims have crumbled utterly, but not even the German guns have succeeded in destroying the dignity of this ancient monument. It still stands, firm and mighty, dominating its ruined city, as if too old, too deeply rooted in the soil of France to be crushed by her enemies. After nearly a year of bombardment it still raises its mutilated face in dumb protest above the crumbled dwellings of its people, who for once it cannot protect from the barbarian.

Not that the Germans have spared the cathedral in their senseless bombardment of Reims! On the contrary, from the first day when their own wounded lay within its walls and were carried out of the burning building by the French, until this very morning, when a shell tore at the ground beneath the east buttresses, hitherto untouched, the Germans seem to have taken a peculiar, vicious delight in shelling the cathedral. They have damaged it beyond the possibility of complete repair, even should they miraculously at this late date be touched by shame for what they have done and refrain from further violence. The glorious glass of the great windows has been broken into a million fragments; many of the finely executed moldings and figures—irreplacable specimens of a forgotten art—have been crushed; large surfaces of wall pounded and marred with deep gashes. It is as if a huge, fat German hand had ground itself across a delicately molded face, smearing and smudging with vindictive energy its glorious beauty. No, Reims cathedral will bear the brutal scars forever, even if the vandal hand is stopped at this point. It can never again be what it was—the full, marvelous flowering of Gothic art, a precious heritage from dim centuries long past. Like a woman at the full tide of life who has been outraged and defiled, all the perfection of her complete being defaced in a moment of brutal violence, she will live on afterward with a certain grandeur of horror in her eyes, of tragic dignity that can never utterly be erased from her outraged person. So it must be with the cathedral of Reims—if henceforth it were to be spared from further violence.

Why the Germans have not completed the destruction of the cathedral I cannot say. Perhaps the guns they have at this point are not heavy enough to crumble such a magnificent mass of solid stone; they would have to bring up those special siege guns which they borrow from the Austrians when they have some specially "kolossal" deed to accomplish. These guns probably are not far off—before Verdun—and we know how admirably conscientious the German is when he sets himself to a task of destruction. No, I fear they have not yet finished with Reims! Meanwhile the almost daily smearing of the huge hand goes on, erasing now this, now another tender beauty from the helpless cathedral.

A French officer, speculating on the German intentions with that admirably dispassionate intelligence with which the French consider these barbarian manifestations of the German mind, remarked: "At present they seem to be engaged in ringing the cathedral with shell fire, as if to see how close they can come without hitting the cathedral itself. But of course from a distance of seven or eight miles they sometimes miss." The cloisters have been almost razed; the old Hotel du Lion, where years ago I spent an unforgettable evening opposite the cathedral, which was bathed in moonlight, has been riddled. There is no military reason, I repeat, for the bombardment of this quarter of Reims around the cathedral—it is deserted.

THE little figure of Jeanne d'Arc, astride her prancing horse, bravely waving her flag, still stands before the great portal. The base of the statue is covered with garlands of fresh flowers, touching evidence that Reims still holds stout souls with faith in the ultimate salvation of their city and their church. They lay their tributes of flowers at the feet of the virgin warrior who once protected their ancestors from a less barbarous enemy!

The cathedral has suffered most damage at the southwest corner of the great façade, where it evidently lies in range from a battery that sends its shots high up in the clerestory among the monumental figures of the old kings—what is left of them. Two of these grave images have been brought down from their lofty rank and placed within the lee of the east walls, while others still remain, their iron scepters twisted in their hands. Is it possible that the German kaiser in his ambition to become emperor of Europe seeks to humiliate France by this special destruction of the cathedral where her ancient kings were crowned? Has he given orders to level with the earth this monument so intimately associated with all her glories? One might believe William the Second childishly spiteful enough for such a deed were it not for the fact that his armies have destroyed so many other ancient monuments in Belgium and northern France, at Arras, at Ypres, in every town and village through which they passed last August. Beauty as compared with force has no appeal to the German. Of all, however, Reims is the most precious, the most famous, the closest to the French heart. Therefore it must bear the full fury of German spite and hate.

Why enumerate its wounds and outrages? For by today more of its unique beauty has most likely gone to that grave from which no German skill can ever resurrect it. There is little good in circumstantiating the degradation of the German when all the world is witness of the facts.

Within the great church is less spoiled, more beautiful, but even sadder. One walks over the stone floor crunching harshly the myriad fragments of colored glass which have fallen from the gorgeous windows, now sightless. The sun pierces a few remnants of purple panes in the long windows of the apse, coloring the dead stones. Once at this hour it was all ablaze with color, glowing softly like a jewel, radiating a mysterious splendor in nave and transept and aisle. A shell has blasted its way in one corner; another has rent the roof vault near the crossing of nave and transept. The lofty columns and arches are blackened by the smoke of the fire which caught in the straw on which the German wounded lay. (The French rescued these helpless enemies at the risk of their own lives, one likes to remember!) The high altar, yet untouched, is dressed and that part of the great church is still decently prepared for worship.

There is something peculiarly forlorn, something ghostly within the dim ruin of what was so great. I am glad to escape into the sunlight outside, although there the awful disfigurement is more evident to the eye. In the close beside the east wall a black robed priest stands and mutely points to the latest ruin, the shell of the morning. His face is white and sad, as if from trying to comprehend the cruel mystery of a world where the commands of his God have been flouted by the Christian peoples of Europe.

With him we enter the one room of the old cloisters still standing, a long, low vaulted room, once the hospital. It now serves as hospital for the cathedral itself, for here on benches and gathered in piles around the walls lie all the mutilated fragments of statue and molding that a pious search could rescue from the débris about the cathedral. And in this room already, while the German guns still rain down shells on Reims, sullenly tearing away at cathedral and city, an old man in a workman's apron is making plaster casts of the more complete fragments in order that a record of their individual grace may be preserved. I saw between his hands the fine, hard lines of a stone head wrapped in clay. I know of nothing more beautifully eloquent of the French spirit than this labor of preservation, looking forward to some reparation of the ruin her enemies have wrought to her sacred treasures. While the shells are falling, within range of gun fire this old man is tranquilly trying to save the beauty that has been murdered. If the laws of the spirit are still operative in this mad world of 1915 the French must conquer because of their unshakable faith.

THE day is waning; at this hour the road out of Reims is hardly safe. With a glance at the hoarded remains, thousands of tiny pieces of stone traceries, of carved saints, we step out into the silent square and for a last sad moment—perhaps for the last time in this life—gaze upon the soaring majesty of the mutilated cathedral. Nestling close to its side stand the two stone figures of ancient kings staring in wonder at this new, pitiless world. The last rays of the sun warm tenderly the yellow wounds in the face of the deep portal. We climb into the waiting motor car and slowly thread our way out of the city of Reims through the devastated streets that now seem commonplace in the light of the greater tragedy which we have witnessed.

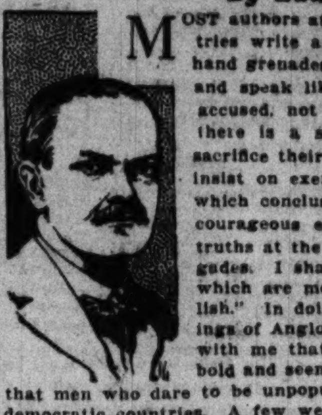
The inhabitants, who have emerged from the holes where they hide themselves, stare curiously at us, fleeting visitors from another world where there is no daily rain of whining shells, no daily toll of dead and wounded, no acres of hollow walls and crumbled stone, no grass grown streets. A small boy runs by with a basket of food on his arm and waves at us. At the entrance to the city a red motor fire engine with "pompiers" in uniform hurries past us to put out some fire started by the bombardment or to rescue victims of the falling walls. We dash into a long, straight road that runs uphill towards Epernay. As we round the mountain of Reims I look back for a last sight of the cathedral. The evening mist is already creeping over its scarred walls. Its two short towers still lift the great portal towards the darkening sky. May it yet be spared for the world to come!

I would that these words might have the least influence in swelling that cry which has gone up from every civilized land at the sacrilege to Reims! Even now something of its majesty and its glory might be saved if the German guns would cease their useless bombardment, if within the German nation there were left any respect for the ancient loves and decencies of man! But I know too well with what contempt Germans view such pleas for beauty, for old memories and traditions. They are but "sentimental weakness" in the words of the German "War Book," along with respect for the defenseless women and children. Those who glory in the sinking of the Lusitania will hardly refrain from the destruction of a cathedral. Reims unless saved by a miracle is doomed!

It is because neither beauty nor humanity, neither ancient tradition nor common pity, can touch the modern German, that this war will be fought to its bitter finish. There is not room in this world for the German ideal and the French ideal—one must die.

ENGLISH VOICES

By Edward Goldbeck.



MOST authors and public speakers in the belligerent countries write and speak today as if their sentences were hand grenades intended to crush the enemy. They write and speak like some district attorneys: to convict the accused, not to find the truth. But in every country there is a small minority of patriots who refuse to sacrifice their intellect on the altar of chauvinism, who insist on exerting their critical faculties no matter to which conclusion this exertion may lead them, and are courageous enough to tell their countrymen stringent truths at the risk of being reviled as traitors and renegades. I shall mention here a few English utterances which are more or less "pro-German" and "anti-English." In doing it I am not afraid of hurting the feelings of Anglo-American readers, because they will think with me that England honors herself in allowing such bold and seemingly noxious language to her citizens, and that men who dare to be unpopular always deserve praise—particularly in democratic countries. A few weeks ago I read a pamphlet by an English professor, M. Conybeare. He called Sir Edward Grey "a sinister liar." As I firmly believe that a statesman has the right to lie and that it sometimes is his duty, the indictment did not impress me with regard to Sir Edward, but I admitted to myself that so unlimited a freedom of speech is not granted in Germany.

BERNARD SHAW.

SHAW satirizes English "junkerism" with its foolish haughtiness and pernicious ignorance of continental ideas and values. He scourges English hypocrisy and confirms what Henry Labouchère asserted before him in his Truth: that England started the race in armaments and that it is insincere and ridiculous to oppose the British lamb to the German wolf. He laughs at the fiction of England's being a democracy, this very England where one man's will sufficed to entangle the nation in war and to pledge all its riches to the foreign allies. Shaw mostly makes interesting reading, but one must keep in mind two things while enjoying his anti-conventional audacities. Shaw is a wit and he takes so much pleasure in dialectic jugglery that he loses himself occasionally. A firework does not make you see clearly. He ought to pray every day: My God, give me simplicity!

Then he is a Socialist. He certainly was not made to be a pillar of a party, but probably he felt that he needed a foothold, and that without a little bit of "terra firma" he would evaporate into iridescent bubbles. Therefore his fight against "militarism." "Militarism must be crushed." All right, I can understand the program, although I do not approve it. But one should not forget that militarism is something spiritual, a complex of ideas, a conception of life, an ideal even, and that it is difficult to crush the spirit. If militarism was nothing but a large army, a big fleet, submarines, and poisonous gases, it would be relatively easy (and meritorious) to crush it. But as it means obedience to parents, reverence to your elders, subordination to your superiors, training for hardships, developing of courage, perseverance and patience, discipline, tradition, organization, and a thousand other things, this aim cannot be attained by force of arms. It can only be attained by the evolution of the human soul.

HOUSTON STEWART CHAMBERLAIN.

HOUSTON STEWART CHAMBERLAIN is an Englishman; his father was an English admiral. He has lived in Germany for the last thirty years and has written several books about German "kultur" ("Kant," "Wagner," "Foundations of the Nineteenth Century"). Shortly after the beginning of the war he drew up a terrible indictment of the English nation, which the reader will find in the July number of the North American Review. I can only quote a few short sentences here: "Among those fables which have caused me most annoyance I must reckon the so-called 'political liberty' of England. From the very beginning it has been nothing more than the liberty of a caste." "Today England has nothing to show of geniality, nor broad, good-natured humor, nor gayety—so far as the national life is concerned. All is haste, money, noise, pomp, vulgarity, ostentation, arrogance, envy." "There is no human type more brutal than the brutal Englishman, for brutality forms the very basis of his being."

Although we Germans feel proud that a man like Chamberlain has immersed himself in German myth, poetry, science, and music with such an enthusiasm as his books prove, we are bound to admit that this very enthusiasm has misled him often. He likes sweeping assertions, captivating generalities, and exclusive theories. His "Foundations of the Nineteenth Century" have demonstrated these tendencies sufficiently. We are cool blooded enough to see that his accusations against England overshoot the aim. Probably every Englishman would do good to think them over seriously, as they all contain a certain amount of truth, but we decline to swear "in verba magistri." This guide has too much temperament to be absolutely safe. We Germans have admired England for so many years, we have learned so much from her, we have wooed her so long (Bismarck said: "The English won't allow us to love them") that we would simply be ridiculous if we took Chamberlain's condemnation at its face value.

SIR HARRY JOHNSTON.

SOME months ago the London magazine, the Statesman, published a correspondence between two prominent Englishmen, Sir Harry Johnston and Mr. E. W. Morel. (It has been translated into German and published in Berlin by Julius Springer.) Sir Harry Johnston has been general consul in Uganda and earned high praise for his humane treatment of the negroes. Let us hear his ideas first.

Joseph Chamberlain's agitation for a Greater Britain which would be protected against foreign competition by a system of preferential duties, drove Germany on the path of colonial conquests. The fatherland saw the same tendency in Russia, Japan, Italy, Portugal, Belgium; they all tried to monopolize their colonial markets for themselves, and so Germany was deeply disquieted and stirred up. England tried to understand this ebullition and never allowed anti-German currents to influence her foreign policy. Only four points she considered as taboo and missed no occasion to emphasize them: Belgium and Luxemburg are inviolable; France must not be attacked; Germany has no interests in Morocco, and the problem of the Dardanelles and Constantinople must not be solved against Russia's interests. These four points are easily understood as national needs:

1. England had to defend Belgium, because Germany in possession of Belgium would be able to threaten England and to dominate the channel. The occupation of Luxemburg might be the prelude to an occupation of Belgium.

2. France is inviolable, as the Germans, if they occupied French territory, would come nearer to the channel and to Belgium.

3. If Germany would get a naval station on the western shore of Morocco she could endanger the English connection with South Africa.

4. Russia's export of wheat and petroleum is too important for England to allow Germany and Austria to imprison Russia in the Black sea. Therefore England has dropped the anti-Russian tradition of Palmerston, Disraeli, and Salisbury.

These restrictions were demanded by a sound foreign policy, but Sir Harry Johnston blames the hypocritical hiding behind treaties which England entirely disregarded in other parts of the world, for example, in Turkey.

Barring these four points, England has done much to foster German expansion. She has signed an agreement about the Bagdad railway which makes Germany the mistress of two-thirds of Asiatic Turkey. She has granted Germany equal rights in China and given her Samoa; she has allowed Germany to establish a cable station and a wireless station in Liberia; she has given Helgoland to Germany, and even the cession of Zanzibar was discussed. If Germany would have rendered to France the fortress of Metz and some part of Lorraine, she might have gotten the first option on the Belgian Congo and the greater part of the French Congo. All these arrangements were sketched when the war broke out. The firm Hohenzollern-Krupp had decided differently. In short, it is not true that Germany was forced into war, and it is not true that England excluded her from foreign markets and colonial territories.

J. RAMSAY MACDONALD, M. P.

MR. MACDONALD opposed the war in the house of commons as the leader of the Labor party. After the publication of the English white book he wrote in the Labor Leader: "From 1906 there was regular communication of ideas between French and English army and navy commanders. Plans were made for a combined action on sea and on land. According to these plans, the French navy left the northern shore unprotected. These plans were founded on the supposition that Belgium's neutrality would not be respected in a general war. Six years this exchange of ideas went on. Germany knew all these years that between England and France military conventions were existing and that Russia would conduct her operations in connection with the other countries."

He denies the assertion that England is fighting for suppressed nations or for Belgium's neutrality. "If France had invaded Germany through Belgium, who believes that we would have declared war against France?" And in a little book ("War and the Workers"), which I hope to discuss another time, he has tried to find a means for protecting the country against the arbitrary trespassing of a small diplomatic set. Some weeks ago I said in THE TRIBUNE: "After the war will be the time to illuminate the dark labyrinth of the diplomatic catacombs."

E. W. MOREL.

MR. E. W. MOREL is a distinguished author on colonial topics. He was secretary of the Congo Reform association and is now secretary of the Union of Democratic Control. Let us see what he thinks of Sir Harry's assertions. About Belgium he seems to agree with Sir Harry, at least he says that the war was unavoidable after the occupation of Belgium by the Germans. But about the concessions which England allegedly made to Germany he expresses himself as follows:

"We could, says Sir Harry Johnston, not allow Germany to settle down in Morocco. We could not allow her to occupy Tripoli. We granted her most graciously 'equal rights' in China. We permitted her, indeed, to have a cable station in Liberia! These countries do not belong to us, and in spite of it we pretend with unconscious arrogance to regulate Germany's connections with them. I only wonder that we never ask ourselves how England would look at such a benevolent condescension and actual blockade if the rôles were exchanged!"

About Morocco Mr. Morel says: "The German government has, as far as I know, never proclaimed the intention to take Morocco away from France. It resisted obstinately (and in spite of vehement attacks) the pressure of the German 'colonialists' to graft a policy of adventures on its consistent endeavor to keep the 'door open' in Morocco. Through twenty years the German government worked for the independence and integrity of Morocco and for the principle of the open door, because she rightly looked upon that country as an important market for mineral products and commerce in general." But the official England, says Mr. Morel, seemed to have made up her mind to oppose the expansion of Germany even at the risk of a war and that in favor of France, a country which in the last thirty years mainly by war acquired a territory as large as the United States.

CONCLUSIONS—These quotations may not prove that England is wrong and Germany is right, but this is not what I am aiming at. Anyhow, they seem to prove that we may look at these questions from different points of view without calling the antagonist a scoundrel or an idiot. Under "Voice of the People" I see almost every day one or two letters which strongly request the editors of this paper to choose between these two alternatives. As I am only a guest here, I suppose I may congratulate these gentlemen on their good humored leniency. A Frenchman has said that a public man must become accustomed to swallow a toad every morning for breakfast. If at least the toads were served in a "sauce aux fines herbes," but mostly they lack any culinary makeup. I think we should all of us stop war talk of this unsound sort.

The same obtains for the "atrocities." Common sense teaches us that war lures out the beast which is hidden in the civilized man and atrocities may have happened in every army. If we Germans refuse to believe that our warriors have been guilty of cruelty, we do not mean to say that we are above human weakness, but that the strict discipline of our armies would prevent such cases from being more than an exception.

Peace is the normal condition of humanity, and even this tremendous war is only an episode. We must not forget that and must prepare for peace in war time just as it is necessary to prepare for war in peace. We do this in trying to show that no nation is made up exclusively of angels or of demons, and that sooner or later conciliation and compromise will have to come. To talk of annihilating Germany, or England, or Russia, or France, or Italy is foolish and criminal. Peace is only possible between nations which estimate each other, and we cannot estimate a nation which we do not know. Knowledge will breed peace. In this spirit and not as a press agent for Germany I have worked out this little compilation of English opinions.

Taft on Federal Control of Quarantine.

(Every part of the country is interested in the quarantine station at the port of New York, for immigrants passing through it scatter to every state and almost every city and town. Quarantine work in most ports of the United States is in the hands of federal authorities, but in New York the state still controls. Recently there has been much discussion of turning this over to the government, as Boston did a short time ago. Speaking from his experience with federal health officers in the Philippines and other plague infected regions, ex-President Taft is an eager advocate of the federal plan. The following is a digest of a paper prepared by Mr. Taft for the New York Academy of Medicine and reproduced here by his personal permission. It is especially timely because of the heavy immigration expected at the close of the war, some of it no doubt from the countries through which typhus and cholera have swept.)

By William Howard Taft.

FOR many years I have been interested in the subject of preventive medicines. I have had official responsibilities with respect to its investigation and its work.

The Spanish war, though we may deplore war, did in some respects great good. It brought the American profession of medicine into active study of tropical diseases. It brought the army medical corps, the naval medical corps, and the public health service of the federal government into situations that stimulated their activity. And I venture to say that the work of all these corps since we went into Cuba in 1898 has reflected the highest credit on the American profession of medicine.

For in this time there has been greater progress made in the discovery and treatment of tropical diseases than in the hundred years before America had responsibility for health in the tropics. The discovery with reference to that little busybody the mosquito through Drs. Reed, Lazier, and Gorgas was worth all the money, certainly, that was expended in the Spanish war.

The truth is that the Cuban war was a war with disease. The international nuisance that Cuba had become was largely due to the yellow fever and to the dangerous proximity to that country from which ships came constantly to our shores.

The suggestion has been made that the United States government's health bureaus had not a large enough experience to be trusted with quarantine in New York. I want to run through with some of our experiences to see whether that is true.

We did away with the yellow fever mosquito in Cuba through our army medical corps. In Panama we tackled the malarial mosquito. In the Philippines we had plague, smallpox, beriberi, and cholera. We had there Dr. Richard Strong, now professor of tropical diseases at Harvard, who did so much in China; Dr. J. A. Perry and Dr. Victor G. Heiser of the public health service, who took charge of the entire health of the Philippines and conducted the quarantine at every port. And when one is a quarantine officer in the Philippines, in the neighborhood of China and the far orient, he has to be, if I may use the technical expression, "on the job."

We had smallpox and vaccinated 10,000,000 people in the Philippines. Some critic will remark that there were only 8,000,000 inhabitants in the Philippine islands. True, but some were vaccinated twice. We had 40,000 cases a year then; now there are only a few hundred. In some of the provinces there were 6,000 cases a year. After every one was vaccinated there were no cases at all.

Then beriberi. This disease, it is said, we do not understand in the federal government. Why, we were treating it when I was in the Philippines, and have been at it ever since. They think they have discovered now what the trouble is—polished rice. If those who make rice the chief part of their diet would eat rough or unhulled rice they would not get the disease. If this proves to be the cause there is certainly great hope that we can prevent great destruction of life from the disease.

We had cholera in the Philippines—even an epidemic of it. This was due chiefly to the difficulty of keeping people away from the river which was the water supply of the city. We stationed cavalry along the river banks to keep the people back. We introduced the cholera serum and Dr. Strong applied it. We put in a new water supply and sewerage system, pumping sewage into the sea, and at last made Manila as healthful a place as there is in the tropics.

We had plague out there. We learned something from Japan and instituted what they have long had in Japan—crusades against rats.

Then there is our federal experience with leprosy. When we went there, there was one leper hospital in Manila, another in Camerines, and the treatment of the lepers in the outlying districts was most cruel. We took a census of the lepers and found there were ten or fifteen thousand. Then they were gathered together and taken to a beautiful island and given houses and farms. Now they are as happy as people can be who have that disease.

Yellow fever: Maj. Gen. Gorgas, then Dr. Gorgas, was working away on the problem while I was visiting Panama. Gorgas worked, as you know, to good purpose. He made discoveries about the mosquito that likes swamps and lives in proximity to human beings. We burned down part of Panama in trying to fumigate it and had to pay damages, but they were worth it. We got out the fever.

Malaria: Seventy per cent of the natives have it. When I went down there first it seemed impossible that any progress could be made. But Gorgas got rid of the mosquito.

Hookworm: In Porto Rico, Dr. Ash discovered hookworm and with the public health service went through the business of reducing the amount of that disease.

And then typhoid: There were 120,000 men in the Spanish war of 1898, and 20,000 cases of typhoid with a mortality rate of 7 per cent. In 1911 we sent 18,000 men to the Texas border. Now, when I heard the statement that I'm going to make to you, I did not believe it myself but went over to the war department to learn the truth and the reason. Here is the statement:

Among those 18,000 men, only one case of typhoid occured. The army had been inoculated with anti-toxin. The one case was a teamster who had not been vaccinated.

What I am trying to establish by these statements is that there are really in the government service of this country persons who are equal to the task of taking care of the quarantine at New York harbor. I think I have established the fact that the federal government has a corps of medical men in its army, navy and public health service who, in point of experience, in point of number, in point of backing with funds and laboratories, is equal to any corps of the world for preventing disease.

The public health service conducts fifty quarantine stations in this country at all large ports excepting New York, now that the transfer of the Boston station has been accomplished. It has agents in every important and dangerous port of the world, who constantly report on health conditions and issue warnings.

The quarantine at New York, however, is intimately our affair. Its conduct is now practically of national concern. It grows out of and is part of foreign and interstate commerce. Now foreign and interstate commerce are matters that the states may, in some fields, attend to until congress acts. In others they may not sit at all and must abide congressional action or inaction. Such, for instance, as the fixing of interstate railroad rates.

But with respect to matters that have some local bearing, states may affect foreign and interstate commerce until congress itself takes charge, and then the state law has no operation. That is the case with quarantine. The state may institute a quarantine, but it cannot do so if congress says that it will take charge of that feature of foreign and interstate commerce, and it may exclude the state from maintaining such quarantine.

This is not simply a New York matter. New York is the biggest city we have and the quarantine station is one through which the greatest number of people pass. But they do not stay in New York. They go on to the rest of the country, and, therefore, the whole country is interested that this service should be conducted by a government which the country controls.

We are not criticizing New York's health department. It is an admirable department. The health law of New York is the best health law in the United States. But under the conditions with the system what it is, it cannot be so good, it cannot be so effective as it could if part of the national system.

FAILURE
DEATH

THE END of Drink or Drug Users

THE CHICAGO AMERICAN recently showed a ladder of seven steps, commencing with whisky and ending with Failure—Disease—Death, as shown above, in the "blackness of despair," and editorially says:

Whisky is usually the first step and gin usually the last. Then comes the blackness at the end of the ladder and the end of the man. Every name written on this ladder is the name of a poison.

THERE IS NO EXCUSE NOW for any Drink or Drug User reaching the "end of the ladder," because modern medical science has provided the Neal Treatment and placed its benefits "within the reach" of all.

The Neal Treatment acts as an antidote for and "drives" the poison out of the system—removes the CAUSE of and overcomes the diseased condition and soon restores NORMAL mental and physical conditions.

For literature that will prove interesting and instructive to all, relative to the great international work of the modern "Neal Way" for Drink and Drug Users, call or address the head Neal Institute, No. 811-T East 49th Street, Chicago, Oakland 439, or Springfield, Ill., or nearest one of our

FUTURE PRICES SLUMP BADLY

Export Trade Is Demoralized; Wheat Weak; Better Weather Predicted.

The buying demand for wheat was exceedingly slow yesterday, buyers not being much in evidence owing to the suspense in regard to political developments. Moreover, there was little demand for cash wheat, and the predictions were for fine weather over the entire country Sunday. Consequently bears were encouraged in selling and prices finished weak, net declines for the day being 1⅞ to 2⅜@2¼.

Cash prices here were steady for the contract grades and a little lower for the off grades. Omaha reported cash wheat 3@5c lower, and Kansas City prices were 1@2c off, and the demand southwest was reported slow. The coming week, with good weather receipts, is expected to show a good increase. Spring wheat reports continue favorable, and this in itself is exerting bearish influence.

Canadian Offers Increase.

Exporters say that Canadian wheat is being offered for forward shipment at much cheaper prices than American wheat, and all exporters said the amount of business yesterday was disappointingly small considering the break in prices for futures. The country offerings were reported light, but in a majority of cases advices were not particularly bearish except in a few sections, where there have been heavy rains recently.

The Liverpool market was steady. Broomhall's reports were a little bullish, indicating Europe would soon have to buy wheat on a liberal scale. Indian shipments are light, practically all the Argentine wheat is now being shipped to Brazil or Australia. Native wheat supplies are said to be coming forward rather slowly.

Hedging Sales Are Fair.

Hedging sales were liberal here at the start of the session yesterday. J. Rosenbaum was a good seller of September, and Updike also sold September freely. Knight-McDougal and Armour sold December wheat. In the last hour there was general selling. Buying was scattered. Owners of bids bought on the break and there was some covering by shorts.

Primary receipts for the week were 9,464,000 bu, against 9,844,000 bu a year ago. Local arrivals were 289 cars. Clearances for the day were 550,000 bu, compared to 1,522,000 bu a year ago. Northwest receipts were 314 cars; last year, 397 cars. Winnipeg had 36 cars; last year, 99 cars.

Corn Shows Big Decline.

Corn opened firm, but later sold off on the weakness in wheat. Prices were ¼@⅝c to ⅝@1c lower at the close. Cash prices were about 1½c lower, and there were sales of 80,000 bu. Country sales were light and receipts continue light. Local arrivals were 55 cars and primary arrivals were 339,000 bu for the day. For the week receipts were 2,942,00 bu, against 5,941,000 bu a year ago. Argentine corn was easy, arrivals being liberal, while the grading is good. Liverpool prices were unchanged to ½d lower. Weather conditions in the west were favorable, with heavy rains in the eastern part of the belt. In the southwest Texas is said to be offering new corn freely. Generally the crop in the southwest and south is excellent. Clearances were 2,000 bu.

September Oats Are Weak.

Oats were weak after a firm opening and prices were ⅜@½c to ½@⅝c lower. The wet weather in Illinois and the Ohio valley failed to induce much buying, as the weakness in wheat and corn checked the buying. There was fair buying by cash houses early, Armour leading. Predictions were for better weather conditions, and this had a bearish effect. Primary receipts were 1,487,000 bu, compared to 1,236,000 bu a year ago. For the week primary arrivals were 8,066,000 bu, compared to 8,784,000 bu a year ago. Clearances were 45,000 bu. Cash sales were 260,000 bu. Sample prices were ¼@½c lower.

Hog Products Close Steady.

Provisions prices were not much changed at the close and the general trade was without much feature. Offerings were fair and prices did not follow the advance of 5@10c at the yards. The cash trade is moderate. Receipts here were 5,000, with 30,000 for tomorrow. For the coming week receipts are expected to be 115,000. Western receipts for the week were 345,000, compared to 330,000 a year ago. Liverpool prices were 3d up for backs and lard, unchanged for hams, and 6d off for Cumberland sides.

Rye Values Are Firm.

Rye ruled firm, with sales of No. 2 at $1.06; No. 3, 95c@$1.00; No. 4, 93@94c, and sample grade, 90c. Receipts, 8 cars.

Barley was steady, malting selling at 60@63c. Feed was quoted at 51@56, and screenings 53@60c. Receipts, 12 cars.

Timothy seed closed firm, with September, $8.00 bid; October, $7.00 bid; year, $6.50 bid, and March, $6.75. Cash lots were quoted $5.50@6.75 nominally. Clover seed was unchanged, with cash lots $8.50@13.25 nominal.

Flaxseed at Duluth closed 1½@2¼c lower. Cash on track, $1.59¾; September, $1.59¼; October, $1.59⅜; November, $1.60; and December, $1.58. Receipts, none. Minneapolis was 1½c lower, with cash on track $1.62¼@1.64¼. Receipts were 4 cars. Winnipeg closed 1½c lower for October at $1.40. Receipts, none.

NEWS AND GOSSIP OF BOARD OF TRADE.

Sentiment in the grain trade was bearish last night. The fear of political complications was the dominating factor in the market, and longs were free sellers, most of them at least lightening their load. Coupled with the activities of German submarines is the fact that the export trade is still of discouragingly small proportions. The season is now so late that the Canadian competition will be strongly felt, with foreigners now having the practical assurance the yield in Canada will be heavy. A few weeks ago, if the shippers had been in a position to offer wheat freely abroad, a large amount could have been sold. Now the foreigners are disposed to wait. Exporters said yesterday the spring wheat offerings were likely to weaken the winter wheat markets materially.

Considering the break in prices for futures, the volume of cash business was disappointingly small. Sales here were only 140,000 bu, including 100,000 bu to exporters, and of this the bulk was for nearby shipment. Cash men reported premiums about steady compared to the futures, but larger receipts are expected the coming week. The weakness in spring wheat for forward shipment is said to be pronounced, and Canadian wheat is underselling our winter wheats. As a result the shipping situation is a good deal demoralized. Cash corn was 1@1½c lower, and oats were ½c down. Sales of corn were 80,000 bu and of oats 260,000 bu. Country sales were moderate.

The Illinois state report while admitting considerable damage to corn in lowlands, said the general condition was 24 per cent higher than a year ago. The oats crop indicated is 216,000,000 bu and the yield of wheat is high. The crop of wheat was placed at about 35,000,000 bu. Illinois state reports on wheat always disagree with the government on acreage. The federal report shows a much larger acreage than the state.

About the only serious effect of the recent storm, as affecting the grain trade, was the blowing down of corn in some sections. However, complaints were not at all general in that respect. Bennett had reports from Jacksonville saying oats and wheat in the shock had suffered serious loss.

The steamer Turret Chief has been chartered to carry a cargo of about 100,000 bu wheat direct to Liverpool. The vessel will load at South Chicago, lighten its load at Port Colborne, and take it on again at Montreal. The wheat was sold by Shaffer-Stream.

Two cars new Manitoba No. 1 northern were reported sold at Winnipeg to arrive for immediate shipment at 10c over October. Winnipeg reported light offerings from Saskatchewan.

New York said English houses had bought September wheat at Chicago yesterday. Generally the seaboard messages reflected an extremely moderate inquiry for wheat.

Estimated receipts: Wheat, 287 cars; corn, 53 cars; oats, 295 cars; rye, 8 cars; barley, 12 cars; hogs, 30,000 head for Monday and 115,000 head for all next week.

Berlin reports say the new crop year begins with a surplus of 700,000 tons of wheat and corn. The yield of rye this year in Germany was a little under normal.

Omaha reported cash wheat 3@5c lower. Kansas City wheat was 1@2c down, and there was not much demand.

Duluth wired that railroad officials said nothing like the present crops in the northwest had ever been seen before.

Some eastern grain statisticians figure Russia has all told about 500,000,000 bu wheat available.

Samuel Phillips has posted his board of trade membership for transfer.

Minneapolis wheat stocks increased 4,000 bu for one day.

COFFEE AND SUGAR.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The market for coffee futures was unsettled today, with prices working lower under near-month liquidation and some trade selling, accompanied by reports of lower firm offers from Brazil. The opening was steady at a decline of 3 points to an advance of 3 points, and the market held pretty well during the early trading, but offerings increased with December contracts selling off to 6.40, and the close was 7 to 10 points net lower. Sales, 10,500. August, 6.28c; September, 6.28c; October, 6.32c; November, 6.36c; December, 6.40c; January, 6.45c; February, 6.49c; March, 6.53c; April, 6.58c; May, 6.62c; June, 6.66c; July, 6.70c. Spot barely steady; Rio 7s, 7c; Santos 4s, 9½c. Cost and freight quotations were unchanged to 15 points lower, with reports that there were two offers of well described Santos 4s at 8½c, English credits. Rio exchange was 3-16d lower at 12 3-16d. Milreis prices were unchanged. Brazilian port receipts, 61,000; Jundiahy, 43,000. Santos cleared 93,000 bags for New York. Fine weather was reported in all districts of Sao Paulo, with temperatures ranging from 50 to 86 degrees. SUGAR—Futures: Sales, 700 tons; September, 3.60c; December, 3.20c; March, 3.08c; May, 3.10c.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—SUGAR—The following prices were quoted by wholesale dealers per 100 pounds: Cut loaf, H. & E., $7.30; powdered, standard $6.67; eastern granulated, $6.08; best granulated, $5.83; extra C, $5.80; canary, $5.50.

Advances of 5@10c were made in prices for hogs at Chicago yesterday, the better feeling due mainly to light supplies. Receipts were only 4,500. Strength was mainly in the lightweight hogs, as on previous days this week, and the packing grades were weak at the close. Bulk of sales were at $6.15@7.05, with best bringing $7.85.

For the week the lightweight hogs are steady to 5c higher, while the heavy kinds yesterday were 15@35c lower than on the previous Saturday and at one time during the week were as much as 40@50c lower. There was a big supply of the heavy hogs while the lightweight kinds, which were all that shippers wanted, were comparatively scarce. Good supplies of the latter are expected next week on account of the strong prices. The average price of hogs this week was $6.60, compared with $6.90 last week and $9.05 the corresponding week last year.

Hog purchases for the day: Armour & Co., 900; Swift & Co., 300; Sulzberger & Sons, 400; Morris & Co., 600; Anglo-American, 1,000; Roberts & Oake, 300; Western Packing company, 300; Miller & Hart 500; Independent Packing company, 300; Brennan Packing company, 500; butchers, 500; shippers, 1,000; total, 6,600; left over, 200.

CATTLE.

A decline of 10@25c is shown in steer prices at Chicago for the week, this weakness coming after a steady to shade better market on last Monday. Prime yearlings, which were very scarce, were an exception to this, ruling about steady with last week's close. Big steers, even those of prime grade, were plainly out of favor and sold relatively below their value. Local receipts were not as heavy as last week, but outside markets had liberal runs and the total materially exceeded that for the previous six days. It is evident that there is more cattle back in the country than generally anticipated and the fact that Chicago's liberal offerings meet with only a killer outlet means a good increase in beef consumption. With excellent pastures and an abundance of feed the country is not disposed to market its thin cattle indiscriminately, especially as the stocker and feeder kinds met with such a poor deal this week. Calves were in brisk demand and showed 25@40c advance for the week with a new high level for the season reached, $12.40. As a result of the bulge a generous supply is expected next week. Bulk of the cows and heifers were 15@25c above low levels in force a week ago, while bulls were 10@20c higher for the week.

Cattle at six western markets for the week, 137,000, against 132,000 the preceding week, 154,600 a year ago, and 172,000 two years ago. Total for 1915 to date, 3,708,000, against 3,644,000 the same period in 1914.

SHEEP.

Supplies of sheep and lambs at Chicago this week were lighter and gave the market an opportunity to recover from its severe weakness of last week. Yearling sheep were scarce all week, especially the native sorts, and this kind showed an advance of 10@15c for the period. Fat ewes were uneven, but the general market for sheep shows little change. Native lambs figure generally 10@15c higher for the week, but no material improvement is noted in the western stock. Latter were in much more liberal offering than the native lambs, which naturally met with the best action, particularly from the packers. Native lambs sold as high as $8.75, while no better could be secured for the range stuff.

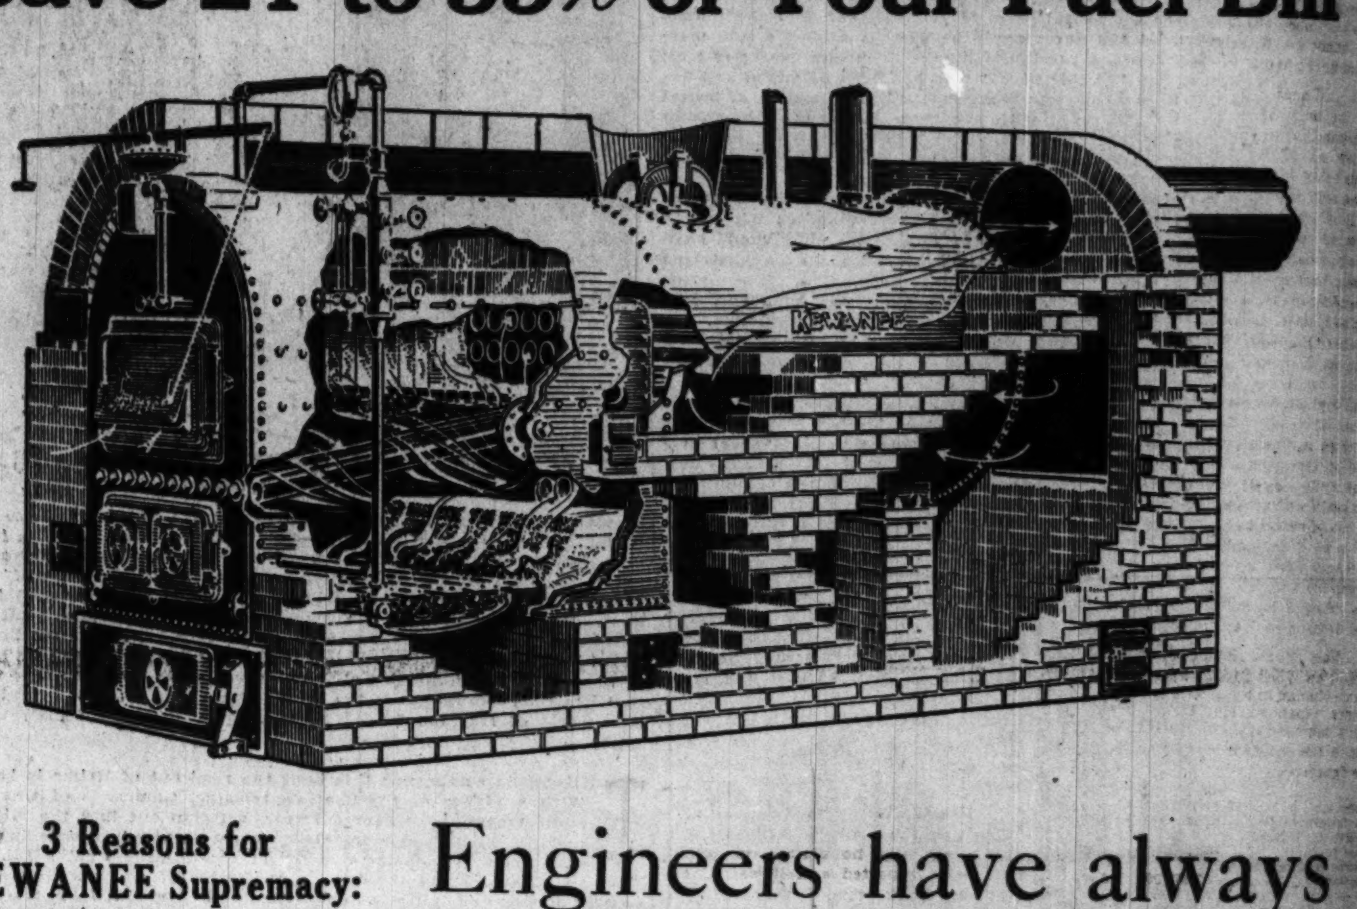
KEWANEE Smokeless Boilers
Save 21 to 35% of Your Fuel Bill



3 Reasons for KEWANEE Supremacy:

1 Fresh fuel is fed onto the upper water tube grates, the fire on the lower grates being maintained by the hot coals dropping onto it from above. For many years this type of construction has been recommended by the most prominent engineers for the smokeless and economical burning of soft coal.

2 The draft is down, which draws all of the heat-giving gases down through the fire on the upper grate, then down and over the hot coals on the lower grate. Any heat-giving gases not burned on the upper grate are completely burned below. This insures more heat with less coal, and smokeless combustion, because smoke is nothing but unburned fuel.

3 The temperature of the gases leaving the boiler is unusually low, proving that the heat generated in the firebox of the boiler is used for heating the water in the boiler and not wasted up the stack.

Engineers have always agreed that a heating boiler of 75% efficiency—a boiler using 75% of the heat in fuel—was as near perfect as is commercially possible.

Some recent tests of KEWANEE Smokeless Boilers; made by Lewis M. Ellison, a recognized boiler authority; prove that when burning soft coal, under conditions similar to those prevailing in most large buildings, their efficiency ranges from 73 to 81%. And it is a well-known fact that the ordinary heating boiler averages less than 60% efficiency.

This means a KEWANEE Smokeless Boiler gets, from the same amount of coal, 21 to 35% more heat than ordinary boilers. And savings as large as this are being made by them in buildings all over the country.

And this is how they do it:

The double-grate, down-draft construction of KEWANEE Smokeless Boilers prevents any of the heat-giving gases from getting up the stack unburned. It cuts coal costs because it uses all of the coal for making heat. None of the coal is wasted. And it eliminates smoke because smoke is nothing but unburned fuel.

KEWANEE Smokeless Boilers are not new nor untried. In thousands of the best buildings, in all parts of the country, they are cutting coal costs by burning cheap soft coal smokelessly.

We will gladly send you literature describing them

Volume of Chicago Bank Checks for Week Increases Over 8 Per Cent.

Chicago bank clearings for the week again showed an upturn. The increase over the corresponding week of last year was $21,021,618, or 8.02 per cent. Such a gain may indicate substantial improvement in business in Chicago territory. Generally the banks do not report improvement of consequence. The activity in checks can only result, however, from activity in business, and it may be that the special influence of war orders is affecting exchanges here. The weekly statement of clearings follows:

Date.	Clearings.	Balances.
Monday	$ 47,332,005.47	$ 3,596,581.73

Pending War Orders $400,000,000.

One New York agency that does a large export business figures that pending orders of this character exceed $400,000,000. One difficulty in placing the orders is found in the fact that many plants able to handle them are already filled up with war business. One concern is said to be figuring on a contract that will involve an outlay of more than $150,000,000. Delivery cannot be promised before the last half of next year.

Local Curb Active.

In the unlisted securities department American Chicle common declined to sales as low as 90, a drop of twenty-five points below last week. Several hundred shares sold in one lot at this price. Butler Bros. changed hands at 302, an advance of two points. The stock is in strong demand at 299. Emerson Brantingham preferred is somewhat stronger, sales being made as high as 46. The common sold at 16, an advance of six points. Creamery Package common is in firm demand at 80, small lots offered for sale at 82.

National Grocer common has been easy around 71 to 72. Consumers company preferred is offered for sale at 75, a decline of two points; the common is offered at 27. By-Products Coke corporation has been fairly active, advancing to 105 bid. Great Lakes Dredge and Dock was in good demand around 100. Inland Steel was quiet, stock being offered for sale at 260 and 250 bid. Oxweld Acetylene changed hands at 100 and was in good demand at that figure.

New York Bank Figures.

The New York bank statement showed a wide change in loans and deposits. The former expanded $31,937,000, while deposits increased about $50,000,000. The gain in the excess reserve was $5,351,960. The figures are:

Willys-Overland Earnings.

Insiders in Willys-Overland are said to be talking figures for 1916 so large as to appear fanciful.

The company closed its last fiscal year on June 30. Profits are expected to show a gain of nearly $3,000,000, or 55 per cent over the $5,231,274 earned during 1914. Such earnings would equal 35 per cent of the common stock. In the last two months profits are reported to have been at the rate of over 50 per cent on the common shares.

Arizona Mining Camps.

The Hercules Mining Company of Arizona announces the immediate opening of its property in the Ray district.

The United Verde Extension Mining company at Jerome has increased development on its property and added 400 men.

The high price of copper is responsible for the increased activity in the mining camps.

FINANCIAL NEWS NOTES.

Secretary McAdoo issued a statement announcing he would deposit funds in the federal reserve banks, as authorized by the federal reserve act, whenever the necessity arose and when it could be done with benefit to the public interest. No government money had yet been deposited in the reserve banks, Mr. McAdoo said, because none had been needed.

It is announced that Sir Edward Holden, chairman of the London County and Midland Bank of London, will come to New York to confer with bankers on a matter of English credit and exchange.

The United States mint has bought 500,000 ounces additional silver, half of the amount at 47⅝c an ounce and the balance at 48c an ounce.

The Tribune Investors' Guide

This department appears every day in THE TRIBUNE.

Answers to inquiries are based upon information which THE TRIBUNE believes reliable, fair, and unprejudiced, but beyond the exercise of care in securing such information THE TRIBUNE assumes no responsibility.

Inquiries must bear the signature and address of writer in order to receive attention. Answers thought to be of public interest will be published. If an answer is not of general interest it will be mailed provided stamp is inclosed for that purpose.

General Asphalt Company.

J. W. T.—All the stock of the Barber Asphalt Paving company is owned by the General Asphalt company, which also owns the Trinidad Lake Asphalt company and the New York and Bermudez company. The two latter are supply concerns and the first named is the operating company. The holding company has $9,861,000 common stock and $13,140,000 5 per cent cumulative preferred outstanding. Preferred dividends are paid regularly, but nothing on common stock. The preferred dividend was not all earned in 1914. There are also $2,000,000 of debentures and about $2,000,000 bonds of subsidiaries.

Standard Motor Construction.

C. C. C., Marshall, Ill.—The stock of the Standard Motor Construction company is almost purely speculative at present. The company was formed in 1900 with $1,800,000 capital stock, about three-fourths of which represented patents on engines and one-fourth tangible assets. It paid a 2 per cent dividend in 1910, the same in 1911, and none since. It put out a bond issue of $295,000 in 1907 and $53,833 of the bonds had been redeemed up to Jan. 1 last. Last month the Electric Boat company bought control and installed new directors. Electric Boat has been a spectacular "war stock."

Canadian Pacific.

J. F. J.—The preliminary report of the Canadian Pacific railway for the year ended June 30 last indicates that the 10 per cent dividend was fully earned in spite of the enormous decline in business. Gross earnings during the year fell off $30,949,614, or about 24 per cent. Net decreased $8,851,000, or about 21 per cent. The margin of earnings over the dividend was exceedingly narrow and the stock will fluctuate in market price as earnings vary.

Brief Answers.

C. T. C.—Marconi Wireless Telegraph Company of America stock is highly speculative. The amount of capital stock has been changed several times and at last accounts there was outstanding $9,402,070. A 2 per cent dividend was paid in 1913. Last year earnings applicable to dividends were equal to about 1½ per cent.

C. F. H.—The Highland Film corporation of Cincinnati has reputable backing, but no prediction can be made as to its future. Stocks of established, dividend paying film companies are considered highly speculative. New ones are still more so.

J. E. P., Richmond, Ind.—The American Chemical company of Toledo has furnished no information on which an opinion of the soundness of its bonds may be based.

Total sales of stocks, 550,000 shares.

Total sales of bonds (par value), $1,600,000.

New York, Aug. 21.—International affairs loomed large on the financial horizon today. Stocks were liquidated with feverish haste, in consequence of latest developments in the Arabic episode. Concern regarding this country's relations with Germany was heightened when it became known that the British government had made specific denial that the Arabic was under naval protection when attacked. Advices from Washington to the effect that our ambassador at Berlin probably would be directed to make representations to the German foreign office offered further cause for apprehension.

Stocks Prices Show Fall.

Opening prices, while generally lower, mainly affected the war shares, but the selling movement soon comprehended such leaders as United States Steel, Union Pacific, Canadian Pacific, Southern Pacific, and Reading. Transactions in Steel were even larger than in the early days of the week and at the height of the decline a break of ⅝ was recorded between sales.

Steel fell to 70⅝, a loss of 3½; Union Pacific, at 127⅞, broke 3, and Canadian, Southern Pacific and Reading yielded virtually 2 points each at 147⅝, 86⅝, and 145⅛, respectively.

Bethlehem Steel, although most inactive of the prominent war stocks, sustained a loss of 11 points at 274, with 4 points decline in the preferred at 141. General Motors fell 9½ to 200, New York Airbrake 6½ at 126½, and Pressed Steel Car 5¼ at 56.

Bonds Show Weakness.

Other issues of the same class, as well as Motors and minor equipments, fell away 3 to 5 points. Minimum prices were made in the final dealings, the few recoveries from that level being mostly fractional. Metal shares were extensively traded in, Anaconda falling 4⅛ to 67 and Tennessee Copper a point to 48.

Some of the week's financial undertakings were reflected in the bank statement, which showed an actual loan expansion of about $32,000,000, with a cash gain of almost $11,000,000, while reserves increased by $5,534,000.

Bonds were weak in sympathy with stock declines. Declines of ⅛ per cent in United States 2s, ½ per cent in Panama 3s, and 1 per cent in Panama 2s were shown by the quoted rates of the week.

Mercantile paper, 3½@3¾. Sterling, sixty day bills, 4.6150; demand, 4.6650; cables, 4.6725. Francs, demand, 5.86; cables, 5.84. Marks, demand, 81¼; cables, 81⅝. Lires, demand, 6.47; cables, 6.45. Rubles, demand, 35¼; cables, 35½. Bar silver, 47⅛. Mexican dollars, 37. Government bonds steady. Railroad bonds weak.

HEALEY DECRIES PETTY GRAFTING BY POLICEMEN

Attacks Free Meals, Free Cigars, and Other Favors at Amusement Gardens.

[BY A STAFF CORRESPONDENT.]

Winona Lake, Ind., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Chief of Police Healey characterized petty graft as "damnable" in an interview here today.

When asked concerning an investigation by the civil service commission and the police department of plain clothes men for small grafting he was quick in denouncing the evil of such grafting wherever it exists, but denied knowledge of such investigation at the present time.

"You have brought me the first information I have of any such investigation," he said. "It may be the civil service commission is making such an investigation with the intention of reporting to me later, but I know nothing of it."

How About Free Cigars?

The chief was then asked: "Do you know that the Bismarck and other summer gardens furnish free meals, cigars, and other favors to plain clothes men, presumably for the purpose of receiving protection in return?"

"The Bismarck is a high class place," he said in reply. "I don't know of anything going wrong there. I would expect, however, if any favors were granted it would be to uniformed men on the beat who might be induced to steer patrons in their direction."

High Grade Steaks.

On the general subject of petty grafting the chief was outspoken.

"Suppose," he said, "a policeman or a plain clothes man were in a saloon or resort and the manager should say, 'Come around at 12 tonight and we will have supper ready for you.' The suppose he gets out a high grade steak, as such persons can afford to do, and with it the cigars and drinks. I say it is impossible for men to receive such attention and not grant favors in return. The practice is damnable and must not be allowed.

"I have had one case where two policemen were suspended for being charged with accepting a five dollar bribe. The officers denied it, and there was the word of only one man against them. His testimony seemed reliable, but it was two against one. This illustrates one of the difficulties I am up against in eliminating petty graft."

No Politics in Plans.

The chief reiterated in positive language that he was not working politics or discriminating against any class on the police force.

"The only orders I received from Mayor Thompson," he said, "were to drive the crooks out of Chicago and to eliminate politics from the police department.

"When I attempted to read to Mayor Thompson the names of the 140 men I was slating for investigation, he stopped me, saying he did not even want to know their names.

"The first officer I promoted was an Irishman, who was a Democrat in politics and a Roman Catholic in religion. I promoted him on merit.

"I never inquire as to a man's politics or religion and would prefer not to know what they are. Sometimes the information comes to me accidentally, but I do not let it influence me.

Force Free from Politics.

"I have only one ambition and that is to build up an efficient police force free from politics. I think the majority of the people of Chicago prefer that kind of a force. If I find they don't, I will quit the job and give some one else a chance to try."

The chief said he desired to correct one statement in yesterday's interview.

"I want to commend as a whole the interview with me published in yesterday's TRIBUNE, but would like to correct one statement which may appear unfair to certain policemen referred to as having had 'records.'

"I did not mean the policemen themselves had criminal records, but I referred to their records in prosecuting criminals."

DETECTIVE PAL GETS GANG.

New York Officer Lives with Band of Alleged Burglars and Finally Causes Arrest of Members.

New York, Aug. 21.—Letting his beard grow and posing as a fugitive from Canada, Detective Finan of central office joined an alleged band of burglars three weeks ago. Today the members were all under arrest, and the police believe they have broken up a gang that has stolen the last two months. Finan was a pal with the gang, lived with them, and his every move was shadowed by a brother detective, who at one time arrested Finan for loitering the same as the others.

Auto Sideswipes Patrol Wagon.

A loaded patrol wagon from the Stanton avenue police station was sideswept by an automobile driven by O. C. Igney, 22 Quincy street, at Michigan avenue and Thirty-third street yesterday. Detective Sergeant John Fitzpatrick and Patrolman Joseph Platek were thrown from their seats and cut and bruised.

APPLY REFORM TO INDIVIDUAL

Speaker at Winona Says Too Many Workers Err in Methods.

MUST BUILD WITH CARE

BY THE REV. W. B. NORTON.

Winona Lake, Ind., Aug 21.—[Special.]—Reforms and reformers which ignore the regeneration of the individual were scored and ridiculed by the Rev. Matt S. Hughes, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of Pasadena, Cal., in a sermon today at the Winona Bible conference.

"Every now and then," Dr. Hughes said, "that hairless and toothless story about the man who asked for bread of a church deacon and was refused bread with the promise that the deacon would pray for him, is told by some one.

"My experience is I can raise money enough to start an entire bakery with bread easier than I can get twenty men willing to get down on their prayer bones. It is time for this kind of foolish talk to stop.

"The old recipe for cooking a rabbit was begun with the statement, first catch the rabbit. If you want to get right institutions or laws, first get your man.

System Depends on Men.

"The United States postal system is so good the Shah of Persia thought he would introduce it into his country, but it had to be abandoned, because there were so many liars and thieves in the governmental employ the system could not be worked.

"If some one had the power by pressing a button at 12 o'clock tonight to adjust affairs of every individual in the nation so that each one was given his and her full rights of property and position, at 1 o'clock men would be out in their nightgowns trying to take advantage of their fellows.

"The trouble with tinhorn reformers and cart tail orators is they don't see the difference between men and things.

"If we put bricks in a wall they will stay there, but if we bring 500 persons together in a church we cannot tell whether they will produce a strong working church or a big church scandal."

Wants All California Dry.

Dr. Hughes was cheered when he announced himself as the chairman of the California state campaign federation which is seeking to make California dry.

"I tell you this," he said, "so you will know I am in favor of political reforms, as well as individual regeneration. The permanence of political reforms in this country is characteristic of our day."

Quality First

A Touring Car with a Racer's Heart—for $1350

The Chalmers Six-40 seven passenger touring car is not a racer.

Yet within the limits of road car service the great valve-in-head overhead camshaft motor will do all for you that it did for DePalma and Resta when they won the Indianapolis and Chicago 500-mile races.

The same eager power, the same "trigger-quick" get-away, the same iron-hearted endurance, are yours applied to touring car demands.

OTHER manufacturers are announcing multiple cylinder and other new motor types to be available some time in the future.

Greatest Proved Motor

But the Chalmers Motor Company is NOW selling daily more than 100 of these cars equipped with the greatest proved type of motor in the world.

This powerful valve-in-head overhead camshaft motor is the power plant all Europe had begun to use for stock cars before the war came on. It is identical with the type that averaged the unheard of speeds of 90, 98 and 102 miles an hour at Indianapolis and Chicago.

Easiest Riding Car in the World

Its unstinted wheelbase (124 inches) permits the "Six-40" to swing over the bumps with the easy motion of a boat.

The springs are wonderful. They are of special construction and the main leaves are vanadium steel.

The rear springs are 57 inches long—the longest on any car at the price, and the longest and most comfortable on any car at any price, weight considered.

Comfortable As a Rocking Chair

There is the comfort of your favorite rocking chair in the Six-40.

The body is big and roomy with plenty of leg-room for all. It is a real seven passenger body. The U-doors are unusually wide and swing back out of the way. The upholstering is deep and luxurious.

Made in Chalmers Shops

The Six-40 is built in Chalmers shops. It is not "assembled."

It is beyond the limits of human ingenuity to "assemble" Chalmers balance and quality into a motor car.

Quality is built into it in Chalmers shops.

Beautiful Coach Finish

The Chalmers Six-40 is a beautiful car. Its lines are charming.

Chalmers bodies are neither sprayed, dipped nor baked. Twenty-one operations are required to bring them up to Chalmers Quality standards.

The body is carefully prepared for the finish by the process known as sand-blasting. It is then painted in the good old fashioned way that created the wonderful coach beauty of other days.

New Service to Owners

Every Chalmers dealer now gives to every buyer of a Chalmers car a Service Coupon Book, each coupon redeemable for a definite amount of service at any Chalmers dealer.

The only comparisons ever made with Chalmers cars are made with higher priced cars — either foreign or American. And this is especially true of the Chalmers Six-40 at $1350 —the lowest price at which Chalmers Quality has ever been sold.

The Chalmers Club

Every Chalmers owner is invited to join the Chalmers Club. Every member receives regularly without charge "The Chalmers Clubman," and a membership card commending the owner to the courtesies of Chalmers representatives everywhere.

BUFFEDS BEAT WHALES TWICE; HAMMER BALL

Pound Hendrix and Black in Opener, 9-3; Brennan in Second, 5-2.

BY J. J. ALCOCK.

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Harry Lord's wreckers knocked all the pennant talk out of the Whales by taking both halves of today's double header. Miscues by the Whales followed by solid smashes from Buffed bats gave the Lords the first end, 9 to 3. Home runs by Dalton and Chase were leading factors in the 5 to 2 defeat of the Tinkers in the afterpiece.

Dalton's homer netted one run and Chase's was good for two, so the Lords would have won without the assistance of two runs presented them by Chicago errors. Ten hits for seventeen bases were gathered by Buffalo's nine right handed batters off Ad Brennan's southpaw curves.

Hugh Bedient was solved for eleven blows, but it required an error to give the Whales their only two runs in the eighth. When runners were within scoring distance the Tinkers always lacked the deciding hit that would have meant some runs. Brennan distinguished himself by poling two hard singles and beating out a bunt.

Crowd of 6,000 Sees Games.

Greater Buffalo day was expected to pack the park for the double header, but the weather man wrecked the hopes of the Fed officials. It rained all night and most of the morning, and the first game was started in a drizzle. Despite adverse conditions there were over 6,000 fans on hand.

Infield errors behind Hendrix threw away the opener. In the fourth the Lords got four runs when Hauser made a punk shot to first which should have retired the side. Boots by Hauser and Westerzil helped the enemy to four more scores in the fifth and took the life out of the whales.

Fred Anderson held the Tinkers to one hit for six innings. With an eight run lead he eased up and six blows netted three Chicago tallies at the finish.

Buffeds Helped by Error.

Neither side worked a man to second base in the opener until a bum throw by Hauser started Buffalo to four runs after two were out in the fourth. Chase tripled to right and scored when Hauser heaved badly on Louden's bounder. Engle singled and Roach doubled to right, scoring Louden and Engle. Blair's single drove Roach home, then Anderson popped for the third out.

Two more errors by the Whales resulted in another quartet of tallies for the Blues in the fifth. With one out Hauser fumbled Lord's roller. Westerzil made a three base wild heave on Dalton's tap and Lord scored, Chase singled Dalton across, then when Hauser ran to cover second Louden singled through short for a perfect hit and run play. Black took Hendrix's place and Engle doubled to center, sending around Chase and Louden. Black retired the side without further damage.

Whales Score in Seventh.

Up to the seventh only one hit was secured off Anderson, but the Whales bunched four in the lucky frame for two runs. Zeider doubled and scored when Flack singled. Westerzil also hit safely and Mann doubled to left, driving in Flack. Beck's infield out ended the spurt.

Chase singled and scored on Louden's double in the eighth. Zeider took the throw in and trapped Louden off third by bluffing to heave home. Singles by Flack and Fisher and an infield out gave the Whales a consolation run in the ninth.

An error by Roach paved the way for a break in Chicago's string of ciphers. His fumble saved Zwilling at the start of the eighth. Flack and Fischer died, but Westerzil singled and Mann's triple scored Tex behind Zwilling. Beck rolled out.

Story of Second Contest.

Buffalo got a two run jump to start the twilight fray, and one of the counts was a gift. Dalton hit a homer over the left field fence with one gone. Tinker fumbled Louden's roller after Chase flied and the runner reached second when Beck muffed a heave from Brennan. Engle's single scored Louden.

Two singles got the Whales nothing in the second. Brennan and Zeider singled to start the third, but still no runs resulted.

Another homer, this one by Hal Chase, netted another pair of runs for the Lords in the fifth. Dalton doubled with two deceased and Chase lifted one of Brennan's slow curves into the left bleachers for the circuit and two runs.

Caruso Beck donated Buffalo's fifth run in the next chapter. Roach singled and Brennan caught him off first, but Beck threw to left field and Roxy hiked to third. Downey's single sent home Roach, but Brennan fanned Allen and Bedient.

CABARET AND DIME BALL FOR BROWNIE DAY TODAY.

Cabaret numbers and the introduction of 10 cent baseball in Chicago have been added to the Federal league program at Weeghman park today as supporting features for Mordecai Brown day. Chicago fans will be given another chance to celebrate the three fingered idol of former days. The hurler has been working for weeks with the design to appear at his best. A band will be stationed in the stands to add to the liveliness of other features on the diversified program. Presentation of gifts will be made to Brown and Arnold Hauser, who joined the Whales on the trip just finished.

In the Wake of the News

By RING W. LARDNER

Bill to Steve.

[Copyright: 1915: By Ring W. Lardner.]

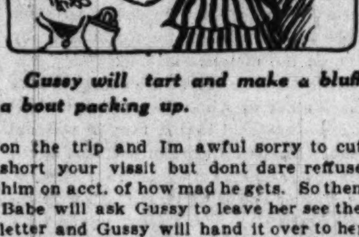
PHILA., Aug. 21. Steve. Well Steve I jes got threw writeing 1 letter only not to you of coarse but the letter I jest got threw writeing was to Gussy and it was some letter and I will tell you what was in it only 1st. I better tell you how I come to write it.

I guess you know that we been a way from home sence the middle of last wk. in St. Louis and Pittsburgh and Brooklyn and when we got here they was a letter waiting at the hotel for me with my name on it so I seen from the hand writeing it was from Gussy and I knowed they must be some thing the matter or she wouldent waist no time writeing her husband a letter but would send me a postal card like usul. so I oppened up the letter and sure enough it started out a bout I would half to help her out of trubble. She says she was so sick of seen this here Babe a round the house that she couldent stand it no longer and she had hinted a round and this in that but Babe dident show no sines of geting ready to go home. And of coarse with she there vissiting Gussy cant get to go out nowheres with her girl frends in the evening because there all sore on Babe on acct. of how she trys to flirt and make goggly eyes at every man a round weather its on the st. car or where is it. And she keeps asking Gussy all the wile to call up some man or some other man and have them up to the house and Gussy dont like to do it on acct. she dont want to addmit that this here old flivver is a frend of hern. and bessides the grosery bills has ran up turrble big sence she been there and Gussys been trying ever sence she come to fine out some thing she couldent eat but they aint nothing shes against provide it she can bite in to it and I guess if Gussy served the phonegraft records porched on toast this old bird would wash them down some ways.

She trys to flirt and make goggly eyes at every man a round.

And she aint been in the kichen to help Gussy with the dishs and cooking sence she come and if she droped some of her hare on the floor at night she would go a round part bald the next day if Gussy dident neal down and pick it up for her. And if Gussys got some thing pretty to ware she has to get up beffore Babe gets up and put in on the 1st. thing in the morning with all her work to do or else Babe would handle it a wile and then say my I would love to borry this for today and put it on her self with out giveing Gussy no chanct to say I yes or no. So all to gather Gussy cant stand her a round the house no more but shes to pollite to come right out and can her and if it was me that was doing it I would say look here Babe the A. M. papers out side the front door and would she please go get it because I wasent drest and the minut she got out the side the door I would lock it on her.

But is I say Gussys to pollite to pull the ruff stuff so shes ast me for help and heres the scheme and Gussy got it up in her mind but couldent pull it with out me unlest I helped her. I wrote Gussy a letter and I says in it that I was so lone some for her that I couldn't wait till the trip was over to see her and please for she to take the 1st. train and join me ether here or in Boston and sine my name to the letter. So I sent the letter and when Gussy gets a hold of it she will say my I've got to hurry and pack up and join my husband on the trip and Im awful sorry to cut short your vissit but dont dare reffuse him on acct. of how mad he gets. So then Babe will ask Gussy to leave her see the letter and Gussy will hand it over to her and leave her read it for her self and then Gussy will start and make a bluff a bout packing up and if Babe dont show no sines of leaveing her self Gussy will tell her shes got to make a certun train and Babe will half to pack up her self and beat it and if Babe goes down to the deepo with Gussy Gussy will probily get on to some train and get off the other side and duck home. Some scheame hey Steve and some letter I wrote and I says in it if Gussy dident take the 1st. train I would be threw with her for life and I per tended like I thot Babe must of went home all ready a long wile a go. I guess that will do the busness hey Steve.



Gussy will tart and make a bluff a bout packing up.

Well Steve Bresnahan dont act like he was ever going to stick me in the game and I guess may be its because I aint quarl some and busting some of the boys in the jaw all the wile but I guess if I busted them they would know it hey Steve. Respy. BILL.

WHAT SHOULD A FATHER DO?

FOR several years Ring W. Lardner, who produces the "Wake of the News" column for "The Tribune," has been writing of the bright sayings and doings of his eldest son in verses which appear each Monday morning.

Occasionally Brother Jim breaks into the verse, but the firstborn has a decided advantage to date.

A new condition has arisen in the Lardner family.

Will the eldest son still remain the subject matter of the verse, with an occasional mention of Brother Jim, or will——?

The members of this department are wondering quite as much as any interested reader who will be the subject of the Lardner verses tmorrow morning.

As a problem of conduct, what should a father do?

IOWA TITLE TO W. T. HAYES; BEATS LINDAUER EASILY.

Des Moines, Ia., Aug. 21.—Walter T. Hayes of Chicago won the Iowa state tennis championship today by defeating a fellow townsman, Al Lindauer, in their finals match, 6—1, 6—1, 6—0.

It was an easy victory for Hayes, who outplayed his opponent at every turn, his base line shots catching Lindauer out of position for returns time after time. The match was so one sided that few of the games went to deuce.

Miss Margaret McKee of Des Moines won the women's title by defeating Mrs. D. B. Foster of Kansas City, last year's champion, 6—3, 9—7, in a hard fought finals match.

As a result of the semi-final play in the doubles, Jack Cannon of Kansas City and Al Lindauer of Chicago will meet Walter T. Hayes of Chicago and Bart Bonbrake of Des Moines in the finals tomorrow afternoon.

Fred Bradley, former Iowa champion, will play Charles Lynde of Des Moines in the consolation finals tomorrow.

M'QUILLEN GOES TO PHILS.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—Pitcher George McQuillen was today purchased by the Phillies from the Pirates for the waiver price of $1,500. He will join the Phillies immediately. This is the second time that McQuillen has worn the uniform of the Quakers.

PUNK PLAYING COSTS BRUINS PAIR OF GAMES

Phillies Take First, 7-5; Then Rub It In with a 3 to 2 Score.

BY JAMES CRUSINBERRY.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—It was awful baseball played by the Chicago Cubs today, and, as a result, they tossed away both games of a double header to the Phillies, losing the first game, 7 to 5, and the second, 3 to 2.

With a bit of care in their defensive play in the first the Chicagoans would have won with runs to spare, and with any kind of a punch to their offense in the second combat they would have had so many runs that the three counted by the enemy wouldn't have been half enough to cause a scare.

Luck was with the Phillies in both games, but along with it they were full of fire and enthusiasm and had their heads up every minute of the time. It was quite easy to see that Pat Moran's boys were after the pennant, and it looked as if the Cubs were wishing it were time for the city series in Chicago.

Young Carl did some great hurling in the second game, holding the Phils to six hits. The Cubs made ten off Aidemare, who opposed him. Bert Humphries and Pete Standridge opposed Alexander in the opener, Humphries going only one inning, when his mates kicked the Phils into a four run lead.

20,000 Defy Weather Man.

Although rain fell in a light drizzle for an hour before noon, and the weather continued threatening in the early afternoon, there was a park jammed full of fans by the time three innings of the first game had been played. That means there were at least 20,000 persons on hand.

Much of the noise was made in the first inning, when the Cubs were kicking four runs in for the home team. Phelan started the messy playing by booting Byrne's bounder. Bancroft doubled, Byrne taking third, from where he scored on Paskert's sacrifice fly. Bancroft ran to third on Williams' foolish peg to the plate. Cravath slapped to Saier, who heaved over Archer's head, trying to nail Bancroft. Cravath took second on the mistake and scored on Luderus' single. Whitted tapped to Humphries, who shot wild to second. Luderus made third, and Whitted was safe at first. Niehoff bounced to Fisher, aand Luderus was out at the plate. Then Killifer singled, sending Whitted home. Alexander ended the spasm with a roller to Saier.

Standridge to the Rescue.

Standridge replaced Humphries after the first and helped the Cubs get some runs. His single, followed by hits by Fisher and Schulte, produced one in the third, and in the next inning Standridge's two bagger, mixed with Archer's single and errors by Bancroft and Killifer, netted two runs for Chicago.

Standridge held the Phillies until the seventh, when Cravath led off with a homer into the left bleacher. Singles by Whitted and Killifer, with an error by Fisher, gave the Phillies another in the same round.

In the eighth Bancroft singled, took second on Schulte's fumble, and scored on Cravath's single.

Murray's single, Good's triple, and Fisher's single produced two for the Cubs in the ninth after one was out, but the game was ended when Schulte hit into a double play

Mates Fall Down on Adams.

Adams began in great style for the Cubs in the second game, but as usual his mates failed to get runs for him. For four innings not a Quaker reached first base, but in the fifth, after one was out, Luderus made second when Saier booted his roller. Whitted followed this mistake with the first hit on the Philadelphian side, a double to left center, sending Luderus home. Adams got the side out before further damage was done.

In the second, third, fourth, fifth, and sixth it seemed as if the Cubs couldn't help but score, but on each occasion luck favored the Phillies and left the Cubs stranded on bases. In the second they had the bases filled with one out, when Archer tried to dodge a wild pitch and hit a low fly to Bancroft. Williams, who was on second, was doubled before he could get back.

Hard Luck Climax.

Good was on first with one out in the fifth and Fisher hit into a double play. The climax of hard luck came in the sixth, when Schulte walked, Heine Zim doubled and Saier walked, filling the bases with none out. In this pinch Williams popped to Bancroft, Phelan popped to Whitted just back of shortstop and Archer wound up with a bounce two feet in front of the plate, when Burns picked up the ball and leisurely stepped on the plate for a force play. In the seventh after two were out Fisher doubled, but Schulte ended that one with a roller to Byrne.

The Phillies did some business in the last of the seventh, when Whitted led off with another double. Niehoff followed with a single to left and took second, when Schulte let the ball get through him. Whitted scored on the play. Burns rolled out, advancing Niehoff to third, where he stood, while Demaree and Byrne fanned.

Cubs Tie Score.

The Cubs finally rallied in the eighth and tied the score on two blows. Zim began with a double and moved to third on Saier's out. Williams then lifted over the right wall for a homer, driving Zim in ahead of him. Archer got a single, after Phelan rolled out, but Adams ended the rally with a grounder to Luderus.

The score wasn't tied long, for in the same inning, with one out, Paskert doubled and took third on Cravath's out. Luderus then tripled to left center, Paskert scoring, and the round ended when Whitted fanned.

TEEING OFF FOR THE LAST HOLE.

Notes of the Cubs.

Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Tomorrow is a day of rest, and Monday will bring along another double header.

In the second game the Cubs made only four assists, Heine Zim getting three and Fisher one.

Al Demaree probably never pitched a luckier game in his life than he did today. He looked bad until a lot of fellows got on the bases; then he looked like the king of them all.

Charley Pechous, the "Tribune" amateur, guided by his guardian, took in the sights at Independence hall this morning, and is planning a trip to Atlantic City for tomorrow.

President Thomas sat in the balcony and looked on today until the middle of the second game, when he could stand it no longer; so he moved to a cool place across the street.

Schulte could have caught the ball when Luderus tripled in the ninth of the second game. It was a long, high fly to left center, and Williams legged it from a position in right center, with the wind carrying the ball away.

Sox Sydelights.

New York again today—twice.

Joe Jackson was cheered heartily by the fans who were on hand for the opening of the battle and was the recipient of a bunch of big red roses the first time at bat.

The Yankees have another game, postponed on account of the Eastland disaster, to play off at Comiskey park, and it will be doubled up today. Play will start at 1:30 o'clock.

A small, black canine critter broke away from his chaperone and invaded the diamond during the first combat. It insisted on chumming with Boone, perhaps under the impression he was a descendant of Daniel. Umpire Chill succeeded in snaring the dog and carried him off the arena in his arms.

The game was delayed twenty minutes while the big tarpaulin raincoat was taken off the playing field after the rain ceased. The raincoat paid for itself yesterday. Without it there would have been no ball game, and it would have been impossible to play off all of New York's games here.

Pipp chased a foul fly to the grandstand in the sixth of the first game and was unable to stop his momentum in time to keep from bumping his face against the concrete. The shock knocked Pipp down but he was up in half a minute examining the stand to see if it was hurt.

WILLIAMS WINS NET MATCH FROM M. E. M'LOUGHLIN

Newport, R. I., Aug. 21.—Tennis history repeated itself today in the victory of R. Norris Williams II. of Philadelphia over Maurice E. McLoughlin of San Francisco in the final contest for the casino on the same court on which Williams won from McLoughlin the title of national champion a year ago. The score was 5-7, 6-4, 6-3, 6-3.

As McLoughlin defeated Williams at Longwood three weeks ago in a four-set match, the honors of the season between leading tennis stars of the country are now even. Both are entered in the national championship tournament which begins at New York on Aug. 30.

Summary of Match.

The score of the match by points follows:

FIRST SET.

Williams	3 0 4 2 5 0 4 0 4 1 0 2 1—35—5
McLoughlin	5 4 1 4 3 4 1 4 2 8 4 0 0—44—7

SECOND SET.

Williams	4 1 4 4 6 6 2 3 4 4—37—6
McLoughlin	1 4 2 1 7 4 4 5 0 1—29—4

THIRD SET.

Williams	4 1 4 5 1 6 4 3 4—32—6
McLoughlin	2 4 0 3 4 4 1 5 2—25—3

FOURTH SET.

Williams	5 4 0 4 1 4 2 5 4—29—6
McLoughlin	3 0 4 1 4 0 4 3 0—19—3

Griffin and Johnston Win.

Clarence J. Griffin and William M. Johnston, the Pacific coast doubles champions, carried off the honors in the doubles. In the final matches which brought the tournament to a close the westerners defeated R. Norris Williams II. and Watson M. Washburn, the eastern champions, after four spirited sets, at 6-3, 6-4, 3-6, 6-2.

The rallies were splendidly fought, but the eastern pair failed to put the punch into their shots which the Californians displayed.

TITLE TO BYFORD IN BADGER MEET

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—The Wisconsin state tennis tournament is ending in a blaze of glory for Chicago competitors, for Heath Byford today annexed the state men's title, Charles E. Spencer took the consolation cup, and three Chicago women are all who remain in the women's singles.

Byford defeated Reginald Hamilton, Milwaukee, 6—3, 6—2, 6—8, 7—5. In the doubles, Byford and Hamilton beat Maxon and Weller, Milwaukee, 6—2, 6—1, 7—5. In the consolation, Spencer defeated Gibbs, Milwaukee, 5—7, 10—12, 6—3, 6—4, 7—5. In the singles, Carrie Neely, Chicago, went to the semi-finals where she meets Miss Steever, Chicago, who defeated Martha Charles, Evanston, 4—6, 6—4, 7—5. Mrs. W. S. Miller, Chicago, went to the finals by defeating Katherine Waldo, Chicago, 7—5, 6—2.

In the mixed doubles, Hamilton and Miss Charles, who also is Wellesley champion, appear to have the cups practically won. Their only serious match was that of Friday, when they defeated Miss Faulker, Chicago, and Thornton Green, Milwaukee, and their celebration of this victory put Hamilton in police court this morning, charged with speeding his automobile. He and Miss Charles were out for a late afternoon drive, when a motor officer stopped them and sent Hamilton to court. Hamilton explained that he did not think he was driving too fast, and said he was out for a drive celebrating a victory and the court let him off with a $10 fine instead of the usual $25.

TWO WHITE SOX SENT TO INDIANS

BY SAM WELLER.

Bob Roth and Ed Klepfer are two of the three White Sox players who will go to Cleveland in exchange for Joe Jackson, and a part of Charles A. Comiskey's bank roll. The third member of the Rowland team is to be released to the Indians later to complete the deal, but his identity has not been officially disclosed.

It is guessed that Tom Daly will be the other man in the transaction, but announcement of that fact will await the recovery of Walter Mayer, the disabled catcher. The release of Daly at this time would leave the White Sox almost helpless in case of accident to Schalk.

Business Manager Blackwood of the Cleveland club accompanied Secretary Grabiner of the White Sox and Outfielder Joe Jackson to Chicago Friday night and completed the big deal at the White Sox office yesterday morning. He met Roth and Klepfer and signed both of them to 1916 contracts with Cleveland before noon. Both sides to the transaction declined to state the exact amount of cash involved in the purchase of Joe Jackson, but admitted it was between $15,000 and $25,000 in addition to three Sox players.

Roth came to Chicago from Kansas City and was played in the outfield by Manager Rowland this spring until a slump in batting compelled changing the team. Klepfer is a right handed pitcher obtained from Venice in connection with the release of Doc White to that club. Klepfer has pitched only one complete game for the Sox; that was in Cleveland and he was on the winning side. Roth and Klepfer left for Cleveland last night.

SOX SIGN SPEEDY HURLER.

Moline, Ill., Aug. 21.—Horace (Hod) Eller, righthanded pitcher of the Moline Three Eyes team, today was sold to the Chicago White Sox, to report at the end of the Three Eyes season. Eller's best asset is speed.

WHITE SOX WIN IN ELEVENTH, 1-0 LOSE OTHER, 3-2

Squeeze Play Lands the Opener, Error Cost Second; Jackson in Lineup.

BY I. E. SANBORN.

The White Sox celebrated Joe Jackson day by breaking even with New York yesterday in a light hitting contest, which lasted twenty rounds. The Rowlands won the first game, but it took them eleven innings to do it by the stingy score of 1 to 0. It took them only nine innings to lose the second game. Score, 3 to 2.

Jim Scott and Ray Caldwell hooked up in the first scrap and pitched each other to a standstill, with support that was both steady and brilliant. So evenly matched were the slabmen that they might have gone on until dark but for a perfectly executed squeeze play by Eddie Murphy and Eddie Collins, which scored the only run of the game, before anybody was out in the home half of the eleventh.

Pull Skillful Squeeze.

Murphy's presence on third at this crisis was something of an accident. He started with a pass and went to second when J. Collins threw his bat at a wide ball and singled to right. So skillfully did the two former Mackmen pull the squeeze play that Murphy practically stole home and E. Collins' bunt was so good that nobody tried for it.

Scott held the Yankees to five hits and issued only one pass, showing a marked improvement over his recent slab work. Cicotte attempted to work his convalescent knuckle in the second game, with Fisher as an opponent. Cicotte might have got by with the same kind of support Scott was given, but lacked it. He was compelled to retire in the seventh inning after three runs had been scored off him, two of them due to a slip by Blackburne in the sixth.

$15,000 Star Doesn't Shine.

Joe Jackson, the former Cleveland star, made his first appearance in a White Sox uniform and was given a hearty welcome. He had not time to get sufficiently well acquainted with his new environment to shine brightly. He made one doubtful hit and drew one pass in eight trips to the plate.

Pipp made the first crack in an airtight combat by opening the second with a single. He was forced out on Cook's bunt and nothing resulted from that attack. Two Yankees were out in the third when High and Peck slammed singles, High going to third. Scott blocked Maisel's bump and retired the side.

The Sox did not get a man to first until one was down in the third. Schalk singled to right, but was doubled up with Scott. Murphy gave the Rowlands a bully chance by opening the fourth with a single. J. Collins put him on second with a sacrifice, but he perished there. E. Collins struck out. Jackson was passed and Felsch was nipped at first by a pretty play by Boone. Nunamaker walked with one gone in the fifth, but was forced by Caldwell, and High lined out to Weaver.

Collins Squeezes Murphy Home.

Caldwell opened the eighth with a single through E. Collins. High and Peck popped out and Caldwell was pinched stealing. A boot by Maisel gave Blackburne a life and the Sox a chance in their eighth. Lena got to third while Caldwell was tossing out Schalk and Scott. Murphy was passed intentionally, bringing up J. Collins, who flied the side out.

Jackson caromed a hit off Boone's chest with one gone in the home ninth, but Felsch hit to short for a double play and they went into extra innings. Weaver led in the Sox tenth with a single and was sacrificed ahead by Blackburne. Schalk drew a pass, but Weaver tried to steal third on the fourth ball and was out by yards. Schalk stole second, but Scott whiffed. Murphy started the home eleventh with his second walk. J. Collins fouled two bunts, then threw his bat at a pitch-out in a hit and run play and scratched a single to right, driving Murphy to third. Eddie Collins squeezed Murphy home with a bunt so perfect that nobody tried to throw him out.

Yanks Nap; Schalk Scores.

Cicotte and Fisher continued the airtight pitching in the second game until the White Sox broke through with one run in the third inning. It would have been more than one if Blackburne had not taken a nap at second. He opened with a scratch single. Schalk drew a pass. On the first ball pitched to Cicotte Alexander picked Blackburne off second. Murphy followed with a single over first base, and Schalk went all the way home on it because the Yankees were slow in chasing the hit. They pinched Eddie stalling. A pass to Peck with none out in the fourth gave New York a chance to tie, but he got no farther than third base on three Yankee demises.

Cicotte Reached in Sixth.

Cicotte shut the Yankees out until the sixth, holding on to the one run lead the Sox gave him. Blackburne paved the way to trouble in the sixth by fumbling High's slow roller. Peck grounded out, Maisel smashed a double through left center, scoring High. Pipp singled to center, driving Maisel home, and taking second on the return throw. Cook flied to Murphy and Pipp made third. Hartsell was hit and started a double steal, but Pipp was nailed at the pan. The Sox tied the count in their half on Schalk's double and J. Collins' single. Peck helped things along by fumbling E. Collins' bounder, but Fisher tossed out Jackson.

New York regained the lead in the seventh and compelled a change of hurlers. Boone singled. Alexander sacrificed and Fisher struck out. High belted a double to left, scoring Boone. Benz replaced Cicotte and retired the side. Benz gave his stick to Leibold, who opened the eighth with a single and went to second on Murphy's suicide, but the two Collinses failed to score him.

PAIR OF TALLIES IN 13TH HELPS IN CARD VICTORY

Double, Two Singles, Sacrifice, and Error Beat Giants by Score of 5 to 4.

New York, Aug. 21.—St. Louis defeated New York in a thirteen inning game, 5 to 4. Dolan opened the thirteenth with a double, but was thrown out at third on Miller's attempted sacrifice. Snyder then hit his fifth single. In trying to get Miller at third, Robertson threw wild, Miller scoring and Snyder taking third. Sallee singled and Snyder scored the winning run. New York scored one in its half. The visitors knocked Marquard off the slab in the second inning, after which Stroud and Sallee fought a pitchers' battle. Score:

RECRUIT TAMES PIRATES; TWO TO BOSTON, 3-1, 2-0.

Boston, Mass., Aug. 21.—Boston returned to third place in the National league today by winning two pitching duels from Pittsburgh, 3-1 and 2-0. In the second Arthur Nehf, a recruit pitcher obtained by Boston from Terre Haute, had the better of Mamaux, the Pirate star. Nehf brought in Boston's only tallies with a single in the sixth. Costello was put off the field in this game after an argument with Evers. Bases on balls proved the undoing of Kantlehner in the first contest. He allowed Boston only two hits, but one of these was coupled with five passes in the second inning and resulted in Boston's three runs. Scores:

REDS SPLIT WITH DODGERS.

Brooklyn, N. Y., Aug. 21.—Cincinnati and Brooklyn divided today's double header, the Reds winning the first, 4 to 1, and the Superbas the second, 1 to 0. Coombs was wild during the seven innings he pitched in the first game, but he was effective with men on bases, fourteen being left in that period. Three times the Reds had the bases full and were blanked. Dell and Schneider had a great battle in the second game, the former going the route for a shutout. Scores:

FIVE CITY LEAGUE GAMES.

Five games are on the schedule in the City league for today, with every one of the ten teams showing new faces in their lineups. The managers of the teams are grabbing up all the available minor league players who are returning to their homes in Chicago, so as to be as strong as possible when their schedules start for the elimination of the Sweitzer cup games. Following are the City league games for today:

Romeos and Magnets at De Paul field.
Italian Promoters' club and Tigers at Forty-seventh avenue and Lake street.
Logan Boulevards and White Giants at Twenty-second and Rockwell streets.
Rogers Parks and Murleys at Kedzie and Elston avenues.
Ideals and Normals at Sixty-first street and Racine avenue.

SEMIPRO GAMES TODAY.

American Giants and Cubans at Schorling's park.
Dellweeds and South Chicagos at One Hundred and Sixth and Indianapolis.
Kramer Colts and Griffin A. A. at Twenty-fifth and South Park.
SS. Peter and Paul and Gilbrode's Colts at Thirty-eighth and Paulina.
Athletics and Chicago Modern Woodmen at Kimball and Wilson.
Hess Stars and Brauns at Forty-eighth and Fourteenth.
Banner Stars and Blums at Lincoln and Lawrence.
Riley Colts and Western Steels at Hegewisch.
Trouters at Highland Park.
Peerless A. C. at Desplaines.
American Giants and Gertenrich Stars at Polonia park [a. m.].

CREGIER DEFEATS CIRCLE LODGE, 5-2

D. C. Cregier lodge nine won the championship in the western division of the Craftsmen's league by defeating the Circle lodge team, 5 to 2, yesterday, at Iowa and Western.

Daes and Haeger hooked up in a great pitchers' battle. The former held Circle to four hits and was invincible in the pinches. Haeger pitched fine ball, but his support was poor in emergencies.

The Bartell trio—Will, Joe, and Bert—featured for Cregier, Will and Joe handling thirteen chances cleanly, while Bert won the game in the sixth inning with a long home run, the longest poled on the grounds this season. A one handed catch by Peterson also was a feature.

The Cregier team will meet North Shore, winner of the northern division, next Saturday, at the Federal league park. The winner of this game will play the winner of the Boulevard-Washington Park battle on Sept. 4 at the Cubs park.

UNIVERSITY WHIPS TONTI.

Only one game was played in the Knights of Columbus league yesterday, the University council defeating the Tonti council at Loyola avenue and Sheridan road, 14 to 1. The losers used two twirlers trying to stop the heavy hitting of the University team and both fared alike, allowing a total of fifteen hits between them. Score:

SLOW RING, PLEA OF FRED GILMORE

Fred Gilmore, son of Harry Gilmore, the veteran boxing instructor, who was knocked out in the fifth round of a scheduled ten session contest in St. Paul by Mike O'Dowd Friday night, returned to Chicago yesterday, accompanied by his manager, Doc Krone. The local welterweight had but one excuse to offer. He asserted the ring was padded too heavily and that the thickness of the mat slowed him up considerably. He said he saw O'Dowd's haymaker start in the fifth round, and because of the heavy mat he was unable to get out of harm's way.

Up to the final wallop, Gilmore said, he had had all the best of the milling. The local fighter did not bear a mark of the encounter, and, despite his defeat, he intends to stick to the game.

Harry James, the local promoter, yesterday announced the card for his all-star show to be held at his suburban club near Chicago Heights on Labor day afternoon. In one of the main bouts Joe Sherman and Jimmy Murphy will meet over the ten round distance at 135 pounds. Rabbit Hedlin will tackle Terry Durkin at 133 pounds. Johnny Ritchie and Artie Armstrong of the west side will clash in a preliminary at 116 pounds.

Jack White, brother of Charley White, has signed up for two matches and may meet Rabbit Hedlin of Logan square in a private bout next month. On Sept. 25 Jack will meet Freddie Enck in Aurora over the fifteen round distance, and five days later he will tackle Jack Perry in Columbus, O.

Packey McFarland, who is matched to meet Mike Gibbons of St. Paul before the Brighton motordrome of New York on Sept. 11, boxed twelve rounds yesterday at the Collins A. C. gymnasium on the south side. Packey exchanged punches with Joe Welling, Tom Burke, Willie Schaeffer and Lee McMahon. McFarland says he will have little trouble to make the weight of 147 pounds.

Tommy Gary, the Chicago Heights lightweight, left last night for El Paso, where he is matched to box ten rounds with Bobby Waugh on Thursday.

Negotiations are pending for a ten round bout to be held on Labor day between Andre Anderson, the local heavyweight, and Carl Morris. If promoters in Muskogee, Okla., offer suitable inducements, Anderson will sign.

Spike Kelly, the tough local welterweight, wants to meet Mike O'Dowd over any distance for a side bet.

SINGLE ATTACK UPSETS BROWNS; RED SOX VICTORS

Two Errors with Bunched Hits Net Three Tallies and 4 to 1 Victory.

St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 21.—Two errors by Agnew, combined with bunched hits in the fourth inning, gave Boston a victory over St. Louis in the first game of the series, 4 to 1. Two singles, a sacrifice, and Shotton's steal home in the first inning saved St. Louis from a shutout. Jacobson, recently acquired from Detroit, played his first game with the locals today. Score:

CUYLER BESTS S. P. I., 11-2.

In the first of a series of games to decide the championship of the Cook County Sunday School league, in which eighty-five teams participated, the Cuyler Methodists, champions of Oak Park, defeated the S. P. I. of the Maywood Methodists, champions of Maywood, 11 to 2, at Maywood. McEvoy, pitching for Maywood, passed nine men, which proved costly, as they were followed by hits that brought in most of the visitors' runs. Score:

Napper Tandys and Wiederrechts at Iowa street and Western avenue.
Athletics and Savoys at Kimball and Wilson avenues [a. m.].

ECLIPSE-FULLER GO PUT OFF

The heavy rain of Friday and the showers of yesterday put a damper on the majority of the semi-pro and amateur baseball games that were scheduled for yesterday. The clash between the Roseland Eclipse and the Fuller Bros., which was billed at Tiger park, has been postponed until next Saturday.

Edgewood Drops from League.

The Edgewood Council team has withdrawn from the New North American league on account of poor attendance and frequent nonappearance of players. Today's games in the league are: I Will at Vernon; Douglas at Lincoln; Liberty at La Salle, and Morgan Park at McKinley. The race for the pennant is narrowed down to the I Will, La Salle, McKinley, and Morgan Park councils.

Marion, Ind.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Two men out, a man on third; the batter hits to the infield. The batter is retired at first, but the man on third crosses the plate before the batter is retired. Does the run count? L. S.

No.

Jewell, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] First and third bases are unoccupied. Base runner on second base. A balk is called. Is the runner on second entitled to advance without liability of being put out? [2] Is there such a thing as the pitcher making a balk to second base? [3] Is the batsman ever entitled to a base when a balk is called?

[1] Yes. [2] Yes, if the pitcher throws to second without stepping in that direction. [3] No.

Ottumwa, Ia.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—There is one out. A is on third and B on second. C hits a ground ball to shortstop, who throws home to get A, but A stops between home and third and B goes to third. Catcher steps on home and throws to third, claiming A is out when B touches third, but when catcher throws to third A scores and umpire calls him out. Is he right? S. E. S.

No. A was not out and his run counted.

G. B. Novak, Chicago: Cheney pitched two one hit games last season against Cincinnati and Boston.

G. McKenna, Chicago: Walter Johnson is an American, born in Pennsylvania.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] The runner on third starts for home, and, while advancing on foul territory, is hit by the ball direct from the bat. The third baseman is prevented from fielding said batted ball on account of the runner's interference. Umpire declared base runner out, basing his decision on that part of rule 56, section which reads, "or in any way obstruct a fielder in attempting to field a batted ball." Was the umpire's ruling correct? [2] If third baseman had made no attempt to field said batted ball umpire would have ruled it a "foul hit," in accordance with rule 45, and, no doubt, the scorer would have charged the third baseman with an error. Umpire right or wrong? M. K. L.

[1] Decision would depend on the nature of the batted ball. If a line drive, the third baseman would have so small a chance to catch the ball that there would be no interference calling for penalization. If, however, it was a foul fly, the claim for interference would be just. [2] Right.

Logansport, Ind.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—A is on second, B on third. C hits the ball to the infield. B gets caught between third and home and A runs up and stands on third. If the third baseman touches A standing on the base before B is out or safe at home, is A out? L. D. KENDALL.

No.

Sorrento, Fla.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—[1] Batter is hit by pitched ball. Is it necessary for him personally to touch first base, or can the manager call another player to take first for him? [2] Batter knocks a foul tip with runner on second, who goes to third as the ball is hit. Catcher recovers ball and throws to second and base umpire calls runner out, claiming batter did not get out of the box. Umpire in chief orders runner back to second as he ball was not in play, according to rule 36, and he had not called play. H. P. JACKEL.

[1] Batsman must go to first unless, of course, he is physically incapable of doing so after being hit. [2] Apparently the batsman did not knock a "foul tip" as stated, for a foul tip always is caught by the catcher, otherwise it is not a foul tip [rule 46]. If it was a foul not caught, the umpire in chief was right. He is sole judge of when the ball is in play after a foul that is not caught. It is not possible to furnish copy of the issue desired.

Smith, Milwaukee, Wis.: You will have to write to J. H. Farrell, Secretary National association, Auburn, N. Y. It is impossible for The Tribune to keep a card index of all the minor league teams, but Secretary Farrell is said to.

Chicago.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Can a pitcher, after pitching an inning or two, be put in any other position and then be brought back to the pitcher's box? E. C. A.

No; because there is no "pitcher's box," but a pitcher can return to the slab as often as the manager wishes, provided he remains in the game.

Logansport, Ind.—[Editor of The Tribune.]—Man on first, no one out. Batter bunts to the pitcher, who has plenty of time to throw the batter out at first, but tries to force the man at second and all hands are safe. No error. Does the batter get a sacrifice or a hit? R. G. MICHELL.

Only a sacrifice and no time at bat.

CHARLEY PIERCEY VICTOR IN TWO MILE CYCLE MARK.

Charley Piercey of Australia won the third race for the two mile western professional championship last night at the Riverview velodrome by defeating some of the fastest riders in the world. Piercey covered the distance in 3:58.

Eddie Madden of Newark defeated Gordon Walker of Australia in the one-half mile professional match race in straight heats. Madden's time in the first brush was 1:45 and 2:20 in the second. Ernest Kockler of the Riverview C. C. won the miss and out race for amateurs in easy fashion, and Olaf Lodal of the Danish American A. C., who had a handicap of seventy yards, won the one-half mile handicap for amateurs.

In the ten mile motor paced professional event, Eddie Root of Boston won from Norman Anderson of Denmark. The American wheeled the distance in 13:31. Summaries:

Two mile western professional championship—Won by Charley Piercey, Australia; Lloyd Thomas, San Francisco, second; Martin Ryan, Newark, third; Gordon Walker, Australia, fourth. Time, 3:58.

Ten mile motor paced professional—Won by Eddie Root, Boston; Norman Anderson, Denmark, second. Time, 13:31.

NEWFEDS TRIM STOGIES BY INSIDE BASEBALL, 4-2.

Newark, N. J., Aug. 21.—Inside baseball and Knetzer's airtight pitching gave Pittsburgh a 4 to 2 victory. A double steal and a successful squeeze play were responsible for the two tallies that were Pittsburgh's margin of victory. Scheer's timely hit and Roush's daring base running gave Newark its two runs. Score:

TIGERS DROP HURLER STEEN.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 21.—Pitcher Bill Steen, former Clevelander, was today notified by President Navin of the Tigers that he would be given his unconditional release at the expiration of ten days. Steen was purchased from Somers a few weeks ago for a sum said to be less than the waiver price, but he failed to deliver. The acquisition of Bill James from St. Louis and the improved showing of other Tiger pitchers influenced Navin to release Steen.

SAXON ROADSTER $395
Costs less to run than horse and buggy

The only car under $400 with these modern features

Modern high speed motor —provides flexibility, quietness and power to go anywhere.
Honeycomb radiator —assures perfect cooling; finest type of radiator made.
Sliding gear transmission —used on all high priced automobiles.
Timken axles —we know of no other axles so good.
Graceful, roomy, streamline body —distinctive, stylish, classy.
Dry plate clutch —$2,000 cars use the same type.
Vanadium steel cantilever springs —easiest riding type of spring suspension.

Saxon is the only car under $400 that is in the latest automobile fashion—classy in appearance, modern in design, yet you have to pay much higher prices to duplicate its features in any other automobile.

Saxon is absolutely modern and up-to-the-minute—yet it contains no experimental features. There is nothing freakish about it. Saxon is a proved car. It has been tried in the hands of 30,000 users, in engineers tests, in public contests. Everywhere it has made good.

And don't overlook the Saxon virtue of economy. Saxon costs least to run of any car yet produced. It averages 30 miles per gallon of gasoline; 75 to 100 miles per pint of oil. Half a cent a mile is the Saxon average for car operation—one-fourth of a cent per passenger. Tires last 3,500 to 5,000 miles. A new tire costs the minimum—only about $7.95.

Buy an automobile that is stylish and modern just the same as you would buy a suit of clothes, a gown that's stylish. There is only ONE car in the world under $400 with these most desirable qualities. The car is the Saxon Roadster—$395. (Electric starting and lighting—$50 extra.) Come see it today.

O. K. BY VARDON ON GOLF LINKS FOR BIG EVENT

British Star Gives Approval to Detroit Course Created by Colt.

BY J. G. DAVIS.

With the seal of approval of Harry Vardon, six times winner of the British open championship, the course of the Detroit Country club, over which the national amateur championship is to be played Aug. 30 to Sept. 5, may be said to be "hall marked."

Possibly the fact that the course is, in the main, a creation of H. S. Colt, the noted English architect, may have influenced Vardon's opinion, as his criticism of most of our courses is they are too easy. On the other hand, the famous English player extolled several other courses with which Mr. Colt had nothing to do, so it is fair to assume his opinion was given without bias.

Vardon, Mayfield Booster.

Vardon's high praise for the Mayfield Country club of Cleveland undoubtedly had something to do with the placing of the western amateur event there this year, and it seems equally true that his O. K. on the Detroit course had some influence in getting the national amateur tournament there.

As a matter of fact, the officials of the Country club would have preferred to have waited two years more, feeling sure that by that time their comparatively new course would be at concert pitch.

Possessed of a wonderful wealth of rich soil, which many clubs find it impossible to get, the Country club has been able to produce a fine, fair green, and with the amount of work being done it will be in great shape, provided the hitherto omnipresent rain lets up.

Gently Rolling Course.

Coming from hills and valleys at Mayfield the Country club course looked flat. It is gently rolling, considerably less than the Midlothian Country club. The course as it will be played over during the championship week will be approximately 6,615 yards in length, with a par of 37 out and 36 in.

Mr. Colt's ideas were incorporated with others of Donald Ross, and a few home made improvements by the grounds committee completed the bill.

Long grass confronts the player from nearly all of the tees and on each side of longer holes there are large, irregular shaped mounds to catch erratic shots. These average ten feet high.

Greens Well Trapped.

One is struck by the generous size of the well trapped greens, and it is evident the intention of the architects is to give the player a fair margin for his pitch, but to punish him if he errs. Most of the greens are rolling and a number of them are banked on the far side. This may prevent a slightly overplayed shot from going over the bank, but it leaves a down hill putt. This arrangement encourages a pitch, and unless the writer misses his guess the coming battle will be one of pitching and putting. The turf is ideal for iron play and the possibility of having to pitch from a baked surface is practically nil.

Summed up, the course calls all the way for placed shots and the length of the holes makes the pitches for the green call for both force and accuracy.

Fourth Crosses Ditch.

This essentially is true of the first three holes, which measure 422, 447, and 458 yards respectively. The fourth hole crosses a ditch, the green being smaller than the other three and remarkably well trapped. The ditch again is crossed from the fifth tee, this being a dog's leg hole 404 yards in length. The green is raised six feet and an overplayed shot will run into a small canal.

The seventh hole is played over the canal and a hooked shot will run in. There is a lot of room in front, but trouble all around the back of the green. The long eighth hole, 515 yards, is straightaway. Traps on the left and right catch poor tee shots and a large trap bunker catches a topped second. Hole 9, 401 yards, requires a well placed drive a little to the left to leave a clear shot for the green.

Bunker at Tenth.

A bunker on the tenth fairway requires a carry of 175 yards over the center. The pitch is to a sloping green guarded by a trap.

The eleventh hole has been lengthened 535 yards and rates as the stiffest of the long holes. The course will have to be exceptionally fast for a player to get over the canal on his second. Generally it takes a drive, an iron, and a pitch to reach the sloping and well trapped green.

Hole 12 is a dog's leg, the drive being over the canal. Hole 13, 380 yards, has a trap 165 yards from the tee, and the majority of players go to the right of it. Another undulating green awaits the pitch. Hole 14, 216 yards, is a stiff iron shot to a green guarded by mounds at each corner and a bank at the rear.

Long Shot Needed at No. 15.

Hole 15, 364 yards. A diagonal bunker calls for a good long shot, but leaves a mashie pitch. Play to the right of the bunker leaves a more dangerous pitch over traps.

Hole 16, 532 yards, has an irregular fairway guarded by mounds and calls for two straight shots, which leave a fairly easy shot to the green.

The seventeenth hole is 415 yards. Mounds of the Colt variety catch a hook from the tee and small traps stop a topped second.

The home hole, 185 yards, is on a terrace green with a sand trap at the foot of the terrace. Traps are placed around the sides and back. The undulating green adds zest to a close finish.

Dope on the Holes.

The distances of the holes are as follows:

Out—422, 447, 458, 341, 164, 404, 144, 515, 401. Total, 3,316.

In—307, 535, 365, 380, 216, 364, 532, 415, 185. Total, 3,299.

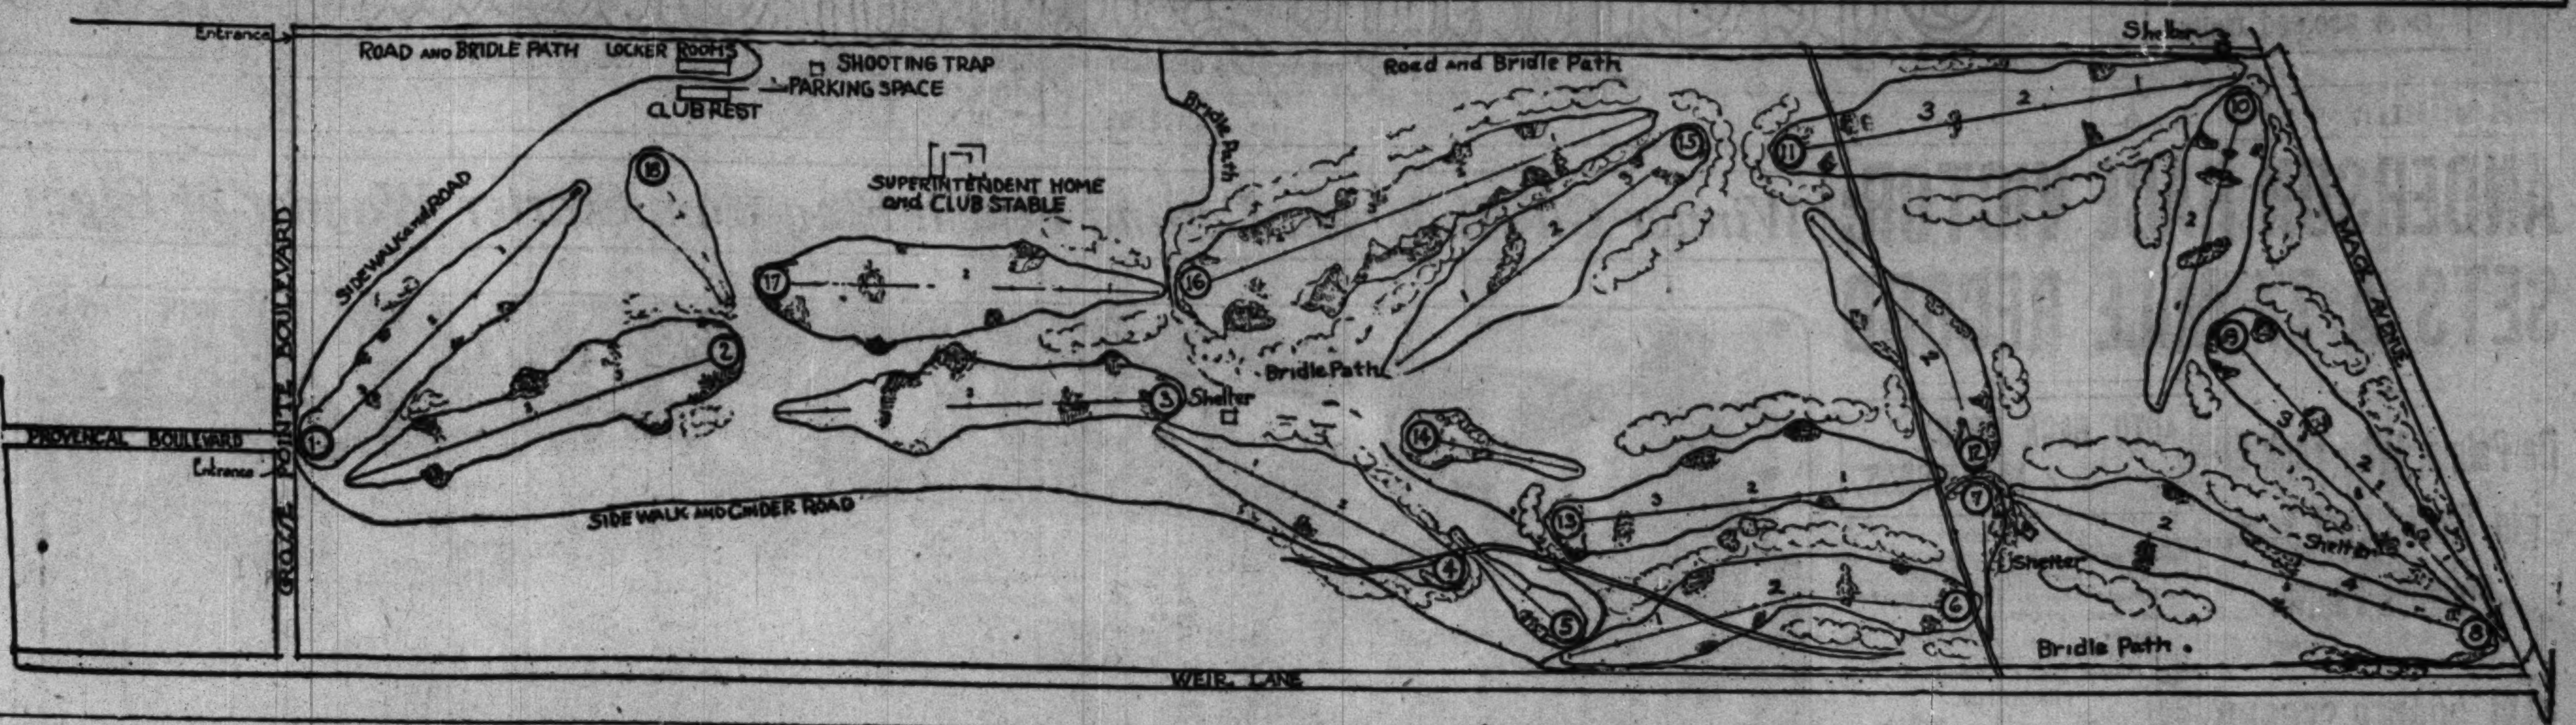
Course of the Country Club of Detroit Over which National Amateur Tourney Will Be Played



SCIENCE FACTOR IN GREAT LINKS

Donaghey Tells of Some Problems Met in Building of Courses.

BY FREDERICK DONAGHEY.

Many of the golf clubs throughout the land which seek and fail to get one or another of the four chief annual tourneys, may find the reason where they least suspect it to reside—in the fact that their courses are not, in the classic phrase, "tests of golf." That Ray or Vardon, Travers or Evans, Ouimet or Travis fails, after repeated trials, to play a course marked at [say] 75 par in less than 78 or 80, is not by any means proof that the course is a fair test. It is, more than likely, proof that the way around has been made highly hazardous without regard for a properly played game.

Courses there are with every hole of the eighteen so short in yards as barely to get within its par markings—a string of fifty for instance, ranging from 426 yards to 450—and yet far more difficult in the playing than others carrying 200 to 500 more yards for the same par. The Chicago district contains two or three of the former kind that are not, despite the boasts of their members, good courses in the sense of being tests of good golf. This in some cases has striking illustration when the course is measured by the bogey man, who allows from eight to fifteen strokes more than provided by the fixed measurement of par.

Course Building as a Science.

The great new courses of the country are not the result of haphazard work, and the old courses, also, which are now regarded as great, are so because defects have been remedied according to the modern standards. Course building is now, in a sense, a science. It is no longer a job for head gardener working under the direction of a so-called "professional," whose sole talent consists in his ability to play a first class game or to correct the faults in the game of the amateurs. The story of the revision of numerous Chicago courses in the last few years is, in most cases, the story of a growing regard for the scientific aspects of golf.

To boast that "'Chick' has never yet made our links in better than three over par" is not to prove that the links is a test of good golf, but, rather, that it is a defiance of good golf. My point is that, if Evans cannot do it, nobody else can. This is not necessarily to say that he is the best golfer in the world, or in the country, or in the Chicago district—although I always expect him to win, whenever or wherever entered.

"Among Those Present——"

A near-by city, populous and wealthy and resourceful and enterprising and energetic and proud, has since May 1 been in quite a ferment because its attention was called to the fact that it has not been keeping up with golf. Its citizenry, untrained in the use of clubs, had never supposed golf to be important. True, an unconditioned field within the city limits was laid out some years ago as what purported to be a nine hole course, but nobody ever got excited over it, and it has been used chiefly by middle aged men seeking a bit of easy exercise after 5 o'clock p. m.

Once aroused to the fact that golf is an essential concomitant of true culture and of civic righteousness, the hustlers of the city got together, held rallies, obtained options on four or five sites, and in other ways showed a lot of speed. I was among those present when one site was examined. Others in the group were two realty experts, a surveyor, a man who knew all about soils, another who knew all about forestry, and a man whose business it is to build golf courses.

All Helpfully Contributive.

Every man of them contributed something useful to the inspection of and report on the site, although none save the course builder could discern in the wild, sandy, high rolling, water bordered, marsh inclosing a tract of 175 acres anything that could ever by any possibility be made into a golf links.

The man who knew about soils expressed fear that a stretch of low ground would "sour"; and the man who knew about realty took the group to a bank near the water's edge, and pointed out an immense pit of lime. The course builder indicated a stretch where the landscape would be beautified by the transference of some stately trees from another part of the tract. The forester said the trees would bear transplanting if the earth of the shadeless stretch were of certain strata of certain moulds. His doubts were resolved, in turn, by the soils expert.

Quite in the Modern Way.

All of which was just in the way in which these things are done nowadays. It was startling to find this thoroughness and caution in a community which, until two or three months ago, was content with its nine hole make-believe course; but the thoroughness and caution represented the spirit of the course builder. The inspection over, the others asked him if it were possible for him to make a golf links on the tract.

"Possible for me to do it?" he echoed. "Why, gentlemen, God has done most of the work for you! He makes the great courses: I attend to technical details only."

Revision of courses is no longer left to the sole decision of the greens committee by clubs of the first class. Expert links-makers are called in, often from great distances, for consultation over even the slightest changes. Thus it was the belief of the greens committee of the Country Club of Detroit that certain new traps and bunkers could be added before this year's national amateur without violating Colt's original plan; but not a sod was cut nor a spadeful of earth displaced until Colt's associate, Donald Ross, had been called into consultation and his ideas obtained.

This Detroit links is great because its members know, among other things, that the business of the grasshopper is to hop.

West secured a small slam.

There was no particular development in the play until the seventh trick. After that west could count south for an original holding of two in each of the red suits, four clubs, and five spades. This left but one spade for north, which must be an honor, else south would have bid two spades. West, therefore, forced north in the lead at trick eight, compelling that player to again lead up to the diamond tenace, and the forced discard of south at trick ten gave west a small slam.

It did not matter whether south discarded a spade or a club at that stage of the game.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—When opponents in auction bridge are bidding on clubs [6] and on lilies [9] and each has bid 3, must club bidder give 5 clubs to overbid 3 lilies? J. L. S.

Ans.—No; four clubs is sufficient.

Laporte, Ind.—[To the Editor.]—A bids two spades, B bids two hearts unpenalized, C bids another spade. What is the bid? This came up in club and we want to know what the bid was. A. J. M.

Ans.—"Another spade" after two spades had been named must mean three spades, despite the fact that two would have been sufficient. The intention of the player must be considered, and "C" evidently failed to notice that the bid of "B" was insufficient.

Chicago.—[To the Editor.]—Kindly inform me how the bid closes in auction bridge. Also has a bid of three clubs the preference over a two spade bid when the two spades are bid before three clubs? A. H.

Ans.—The bidding closes when three players pass in succession. A bid of three clubs has preference over a bid of two spades.

Geneva, Ill.—[To the Editor.]—Dealer bids one royal; second player passes; third player holds a king, queen, ten, and three small hearts; ten and one small spade; queen and three small clubs and small diamond, passes. Should he have bid two hearts? H. P. W.

Ans.—No.

Skokie.

T. C. King won the ball sweepstakes at Skokie, with a card of 96—23—73. Dr. Lee K. Stewart, who had low gross, finished second, with 80—4—76. Players who never had felt the thrill of flashing first past the wire contested for the "Never Won" trophy. C. S. Bartholf went out of this class yesterday with 103—26—77. P. Soule had a vision with 104—25—79.

North Shore.

J. F. Stone won the putting cup at North Shore, taking 31 putts on his round. W. R. Watson took the L. J. Bowman trophy with a card of 87—18—69. Results in the semi-final qualifying round for the Don M. Gallie cup were: W. R. Angell, 92—19—73; H. A. Gould, 97—23—74; W. I. Woodward, 100—26—74.

Events Postponed.

Wet grounds caused postponement of events at Calumet, Elmhurst, and Windsor. Midlothian events were postponed to permit the women players to practice.

Results of Play on the Local Golf Courses.

JAY K. LAMB, who won the Jackson Park club cup in the city championship, added the Ridge Country club title to his collection yesterday by defeating C. A. Nash, 2 and 1, in the thirty-six hole final. Lamb had 43-41-84 for the first two rounds, being 2 up; his opponent got 47 and 41. Nash, with a 43 on the third round, got on even terms at the twenty-seventh hole, Lamb having 44. Lamb took the first and sixth holes on the final round and the others were halved. Results in the other flight finals were:

First flight—D. R. King defeated C. Peters, 2 and 1.

Second flight—E. A. Olliver defeated J. H. Green, 3 and 2.

Third flight—L. W. Senneff defeated J. A. Singler, 6 and 4.

J. C. Olmstead had low gross for the day with 38—41—79.

G. W. Critchell, 84—8—76, and L. W. Senneff, 93—17—76, tied for low net.

Park Ridge.

Dr. A. J. Bucheit won the Saturday cup at Park Ridge, finishing 2 up. Results in the first round for the club championship, were:

E. C. Cleveland defeated S. H. Barrows, 6 and 5.
W. W. Smythe Jr. defeated S. Yount, 1 up.

Edgewater.

C. M. Rogers and W. E. Rowe yesterday won the eighteen hole pair event at Edgewater when their card of 178—31—147 gave them low net. Low gross honors went to G. M. McConnell and A. Waite with 176—15—161.

Riverside.

With net scores of 77, G. A. Hancock and J. H. Perry tied in the eighteen hole handicap competition at Riverside. The former had a gross of 92 and was aided by a handicap of 15, while Perry had a total of 93, minus 16. Hancock also won the postponed "Pilgrim's Progress" cup contest, which was decided early in the week, with a card of 94—20—74.

Chicago.

Members of the Chicago Golf club competed for the usual Saturday cup, which was won by N. K. Hutchinson, who registered a card of 96—28—68. F. G. Adamson finished second and had a card of 94—24—70.

La Grange.

As a result of the semi-final round for the President's trophy at La Grange C. M. Denise will oppose B. N. Anderson in the deciding struggle next week. Denise defeated C. S. Whipple by 4 and 2, while Anderson eliminated A. R. Johnston, 3 and 2.

Onwentsia.

W. C. Winter Jr. won the par event at Onwentsia with a card of 85 minus 5, which left him 2 down to par figures. N. W. Williams finished second, 3 down, while Paul Gardner, who had low gross, 81, tied with Wayne Taylor and J. Belden, 4 down.

Beverly.

Low net in the handicap at Beverly lodged in the possession of Ira J. Mix Jr., 93—25—68. J. T. Henry and J. A. Mudd Jr. tied for low gross with 80. M. A. Donohue Jr. took the physicians' trophy by his victory over A. H. Haigh, whom he defeated by 3 and 2.

Flossmoor.

M. R. Kimball won the eighteen hole match against bogey at Flossmoor, finishing 1 up. A. B. Cody was next, 1 down. C. O. Goss won the ball sweepstakes, 98—19—79, P. Willis being second, 92—12—80. Play for the Warren McArthur trophy narrowed down to the final. W. W. Low, who last week swept the board, developed appendicitis and was forced to drop. As a result, a threesome final will decide the ownership of the cup next week. G. T. Seely finished 3 down, while G. W. Mosher and Marquis Eaton tied at 7 down.

Glen Oak.

Charles L. West, former president, defeated G. Hill, 2 up, in the semi-finals for the veterans' cup at Glen Oak, Gus Zuttermeister defeating G. H. Hill, 7 and 6, in the other match. The feature of the second round for the director's cup was the defeat of John Byrne, the former baseball player, by G. Edwards at the nineteenth hole. "Midiron" Murphy won an extra hole match from C. E. Swanson outdoors. Directors' cup scores:

G. Edwards defeated J. Byrne, 1 up, 19 holes.
E. Morrill defeated Dr. J. F. Nichol, 3 and 2.
G. Zuttermeister defeated H. B. Green, 4 and 2.
E. Cobb won from E. S. Fogarty by default.

ELLIOTT EVANS and D. W. Ellyson went into the finals for the club championship at Evanston, the former defeating K. Carpenter, 2 up, and the latter winning from O. H. Rockhold, 3 and 2. Other flights resulted as follows:

Second flight—T. N. Johnson won from E. Van Petten by default; H. S. Camp won from F. W. Lenfesty, 1 up.

Third flight—G. I. Bell defeated R. A. Scott, 8 and 7; E. D. Howard and W. H. Meyst, postponed.

Wheaton.

Play at Wheaton yesterday consisted of the qualifying round for the President's cup, as well as a class handicap event. In the former E. D. Salson tied for the lead with a card of 85—10—75, which also gave him the Class A prize. A. W. Sherer, with 99—24—75, who tied with Salmon in the elimination round, took Class C honors. J. Peabody, who shot 99—12—77, was the victor in Class B, and was also tied for third low net with S. H. Lyons, C. J. Fletcher, and P. E. Bessire. Lyons had low gross, 81.

Westmoreland.

J. M. Boggs, who played a triple tie for low net honors with C. W. Pank and J. W. McCurdy in the ball sweepstakes at Westmoreland, found solace in the fact that his minimum handicap of seven strokes gave him possession of the gutta perchas. In the class handicap event Carroll Shaffer, with 89—11—78 was the winner in the first division, while J. E. McMechan took class B honors, having a card of 95—15—80. In class C, H. W. Armstrong was the winner with 106—21—85.

Indian Hill.

R. C. Butler had low net score in the handicap for the Indian Hill goolet at Indian Hill with a card of 94—16—78. C. Linde was second with 97—18—79.

Hinsdale.

Hinsdale members competed in a best hole event, picking the nine best holes out of eighteen. S. T. Collins Jr. won with a total of 36, E. F. Brewster being second with 30. Results in the second round for the Visitors' cup were:

E. F. Brewster defeated S. T. Collins Jr., 2 and 1; D. G. Heinly and A. C. Cleaves, postponed; E. S. Morse won from J. A. Erickson by default; N. G. Simon and E. P. Snohr, postponed.

In the last round for the Blount age limit cup, C. F. Braffette defeated J. E. Smith, 1 up.

SEMI-FINAL matches in the club championship at Glen View left Kenneth H. Burns to oppose Rollin W. Keyes in the final next week. Burns defeated E. M. Barnhart by 4 and 3, while Keyes had an easier time in disposing of George F. Henneberry, 7 and 6. Keyes took further honors by winning the class A handicap event with a card of 79—4—75.

H. B. Riley defeated D. A. Noyes by 2 up, while E. H. Ball Jr. eliminated J. S. Bartle by 5 and 4 in the second round for the Old Hickory cup. The winners will meet next week in the final.

With net scores of 76 S. F. Miller and F. P. Horan tied for first honors in the class B handicap competition. B. F. Adams won in class C with 102—25—77.

Evanston.

Elliott Evans and D. W. Ellyson went into the finals for the club championship at Evanston, the former defeating K. Carpenter, 2 up, and the latter winning from O. H. Rockhold, 3 and 2. Other flights resulted as follows:

Second flight—T. N. Johnson won from E. Van Petten by default; H. S. Camp won from F. W. Lenfesty, 1 up.

Third flight—G. I. Bell defeated R. A. Scott, 8 and 7; E. D. Howard and W. H. Meyst, postponed.

South Shore.

By defeating M. M. Vincent, 3 and 2, in the final, Charles E. Willard, former secretary of the Western Golf association, took a chattel mortgage on the Ancient and Honorables trophy at South Shore. Willard finished the first nine holes 2 up and played consistent golf on the return trip. Dr. Frank Brawley increased his lead to 21 up on bogey at the end of the first fifty-four holes of the seventy-two hole competition for the President's cup.

Ravenswood.

Two matches in the first match rounds for the Ravenswood and Members cups were played at Ravenswood. In the former competition C. H. Challen defeated C. R. McCabe, 2 and 1, while W. S. Gates won from H. B. Field by default. G. H. Trautman defeated J. A. Thompson, 2 and 1, in the Members' cup flight, and W. T. Campbell won by default from H. G. Estabrook.

ALL-WEATHER TREAD
ALL-WEATHER TREAD

An Extra Tread
Makes the Goodyear All-Weather
a Double-Thick Anti-Skid

Costs $1,000,000

This is for men who think "Tires are tires" and who fail to get the best for that reason.

Most anti-skids, if you cut them, would show only a regular tread made rough.

The Goodyear All-Weather shows an extra tread, about as thick as the regular, vulcanized on top.

That one difference, on our output of All-Weathers, costs us $1,000,000 this year.

It's Worth Getting

Thus the Goodyear All-Weather is a double-thick tread. And the extra thickness is rubber toughened by a secret process.

This insures grips which are deep and tough. They last for thousands of miles and keep sharp. When they do wear off there's the regular tread beneath.

Is that not better than thin, soft treads with shallow, round-edged grips?

Get These Extras

There are other extras in Goodyear tires. Five of them are exclusive Goodyear features. Others lie in extra size, extra rubber or extra strength over the usual tire.

These extras, on this year's output, cost us $1,635,000. That's outside the All-Weather tread. This year's additions, in extra size and rubber alone, will cost us $500,000.

We are giving these extras to make Goodyear tires more popular than ever. They have long been the largest-selling tires in the world.

We pay for the extras by making multiplied output cut down other costs.

On the average, tires with these extras are bound to outlast tires without them. And the difference is sometimes enormous.

Get this super-tire next time you buy and compare it with the tires you know.

ANDERSON RACE VICTOR; SETS A 77 MILE RECORD

De Palma, Who Took Elgin Trophy Last Year, Finishes Fourth.

EARL COOPER SECOND.

BY RALPH WALDO EMERSON.

Elgin, Ill., Aug. 21.—Three American automobiles today outclassed the best cars of the foreign makers in a smashing race which established a new high record for the Elgin road course.

The Elgin national trophy and $2,000 in cash were won by Gilbert Anderson, who drove his American made Stutz 301 miles 4,440 feet in 3:54:25.87, an average speed of 77.25 miles per hour, eclipsing the record made by his teammate, Earl Cooper, who won the C. A. C. trophy yesterday over the same course at 74.9 miles per hour.

Cooper Wins Second Place.

Cooper today in another Stutz took the second place, which was held by Anderson yesterday, but smashed his own record of yesterday by making an average of 78.25 miles per hour.

Eddie O'Donnell in a Duesenberg, also an American made car, took third money, with an average of 75.76 miles per hour.

Ralph DePalma in his famous German Mercedes finished in fourth place, driving his final lap at the furious pace of 80.27 miles per hour, in 6 minutes and 17 seconds.

De Palma won the trophy in 1912 and in 1914, his high record last year being an average speed of 73.5 miles per hour for the 301 miles 4,440 feet comprised in the thirty-six laps of eight miles 2,030 feet each.

Today's race was remarkable from a spectacular viewpoint in that it furnished the rarity of the four leading speed monarchs furnishing a 300 mile competitive grind within a single five minute interval.

Records Smashed Throughout.

During the entire progress of the race records for the Elgin course crashed successively like a falling row of bricks.

Anderson started his smashing of yesterday's lap records by circling the course in 6 minutes and 24 seconds in the eleventh lap, and again in the twelfth lap. He bettered it by two seconds in a spin in 6 minutes and 19 seconds in the seventeenth, his fastest lap, and followed it up by whizzing past the grandstand at speeds only slightly less to the finish of the race.

DePalma's consolation lay in the fact that he wound up by doing the fastest once around.

American Cars Victors.

The delight of the spectators over the triumph for American drivers, American material, and American workmanship over the best motor products of Germany and France—Oldfield's French Delage was far behind—was unbounded. In the enthusiasm the fans cheered Cooper, Anderson, and O'Donnell over and over again and all but tore the grand stand to pieces by pounding the floor with chairs while the band played "Dixie" and "The Star Spangled Banner."

Buzane's De Dietrich, a French car, smashed a crank shaft in the first lap and was hopelessly out of the race.

The only other accident of moment during the race occurred when "Bill" Chandler's Duesenberg caught fire on the [illegible] and furnished a few seconds of [illegible]ment until the fire was out and [illegible] was back in the race.

Burt, in the third Stutz, was forced out of the running in his fourteenth lap by a stuck valve.

The great thing to remember in the minds of motor followers is the fact that the two days' race meet vindicated on a big scale the superiority of American manufacturers, American materials, and American workmen over the foreigners in making automobiles.

Sun Comes Out Late.

Old Sol, eternal patron of races, smiled wanly through heavy clouds late in the forenoon, [illegible] as it began to look as though rain would make the race more of the nature of a marine than a track event. The attendance, however, was as good as on the first day's race, when similarly unfavorable weather conditions made big gaps in the grand stand. It was estimated [illegible],000 persons were distributed around the track.

Just as the bombs to clear the track were fired, it was announced that Tom Alley had been forced to withdraw on account of a broken rocker arm in his Ogren.

Patrick's Mercer was unable to start on account of the broken connecting rod which kept him out of the first day's race. [illegible] and his Anderson special failed to show up. Bragg and his Stutz also were absent.

"Made in America" Crowd.

It was a "Made in America" crowd, emboldened by the previous day's success to root valiantly for the American cars and to hope that the Stutz or some other car of American make would again take the money and the honors.

The Stutz driven by Anderson today was a new car—its first appearance in any race.

De Palma proved he was formidable by passing Jones, his starting mate, in the first lap, making the eight miles plus in 6:47.

"All ready," roared Announcer James Durkin through his megaphone. "Cooper leads De Palma for lap No. 1. Time, 6 minutes and 44 seconds."

"Three seconds ahead of De Palma in the first lap," chorused the "made in America" rooters as Cooper's white car shot past, beating De Palma's German made machine, distinguished by its yellow coat of paint.

O'Donnell in his Duesenberg clipped the first lap in 6:57, while Anderson in his new Stutz did it in only two seconds more, or 6:59. None of the other contestants did better than seven minutes, Robillard in his Losier being the slowest for the lap in 8:29.

"Cooper's running away with it," was the bleacher verdict at the end of the second lap, when Cooper led the field with an elapsed time of 13 minutes and 12 seconds, with Anderson second in 13:25 and De Palma third in 13:27 for the sixteen miles, 4,060 feet.

Buzane in his De Dietrich went to the roadside with a broken crankshaft in his first lap.

In the third lap Cooper duplicated yesterday's fastest time when he tied Anderson for a single circuit in 6:26—78.2 miles per hour.

Anderson was hugging Cooper in the same lap, his time being 6:37, and De Palma third, in 6:38, for the lap. O'Donnell did it in 6:44. Burt, in the third Stutz, made the lap in 6:46.

At the end of the third lap Cooper led De Palma by sixty-seven seconds with Anderson only seven seconds behind De Palma. O'Donnell was in fourth place, twelve seconds behind Anderson.

Bud Jones Slowest.

The slowest man for the three laps, 25 miles 810 feet, was Bud Jones, 5 minutes and 8 seconds behind Cooper. All eleven cars which had remained in the race after the first lap were roaring by the grandstand without stops at the pit.

The condition of general health was maintained throughout the fourth lap, with Cooper leading Anderson by 36 seconds. Anderson had passed De Palma in this lap and was in second place, with De Palma a single second behind him.

In the fifth lap Oldfield went to the pit for a new rear left tire.

At the end of the fifth Cooper had increased his lead over Anderson to 1 minute and 14 seconds. Anderson led De Palma by 12 seconds and De Palma was 12 seconds ahead of O'Donnell.

The sixth lap closed with Cooper leading Anderson by only 29 seconds. De Palma only 27 seconds behind Anderson, and O'Donnell [illegible] seconds behind De Palma.

For the 50 miles 1,620 feet of the first six laps Cooper's average per hour was 76.823; Anderson's, 76.0[illegible]3; De Palma's, 75.24; O'Donnell's, 74.344; Chandler's, 73.655; Oldfield's, 71.205; Henning's, 70.854, and Henderson's, [illegible].79.

Cooper led Anderson in the seventh lap by 26 seconds, with De Palma 43 seconds behind Anderson; O'Donnell fourth, 26 seconds behind De Palma. In the eighth lap Cooper's lead over Anderson was reduced to 22 seconds. De Palma was 1 minute and 18 seconds behind Anderson.

Fast Lap by Anderson.

O'Donnell was 7 seconds behind De Palma. Anderson made the lap in 6:27, duplicating his time for the preceding lap. Cooper held a lead of 22 seconds over Anderson at the end of the eighth lap. De Palma was third with a lead of 27 seconds over O'Donnell.

Anderson continued to crawl up on Cooper in the ninth lap, ending it only 21 seconds behind the leader. De Palma was 36 seconds behind Anderson and O'Donnell 39 seconds behind De Palma.

The tenth lap was marked by the exodus of Robillard's Lozier after it had thrown a tire on the track.

It was disqualified on account of dangerous rims. Cooper led Anderson by a bare 20 seconds. De Palma was 58 seconds behind Anderson and O'Donnell was 38 seconds behind De Palma. In the parlance of the fans, it was getting to be some race. They yelled and beat with their heels on the benches.

Things began to happen in the eleventh lap. Anderson beat yesterday's best lap record by two seconds by going the circuit in 6:24—78.61 miles an hour. This feat reduced Cooper's lead over Anderson to only 12 seconds. De Palma was third, 1:14 behind Anderson. O'Donnell was 49 seconds behind De Palma and coming fast.

Anderson Leads at 100 Miles.

Anderson repeated his performance of the eleventh lap by making his twelfth in the same time, 6:24, and by the spurt gaining a lead of 2 seconds over Cooper for the first twelve laps of the race. De Palma still hung in third place, but was losing ground. He was 1:24 behind Cooper.

Anderson increased his lead over Cooper to twelve seconds in the thirteenth lap. De Palma was one minute and thirty-four seconds behind Cooper and trailed by O'Donnell in twenty-seven seconds. Anderson made this lap in the brisk time of 6:26, a lap time which appeared to be becoming a habit with him.

Anderson led Cooper by six seconds in the fourteenth lap. De Palma was two minutes behind Cooper and O'Donnell was eleven seconds behind De Palma, crowding him for third place.

Anderson's lead over Cooper was thirteen seconds in the fifteenth lap. O'Donnell was twelve seconds behind De Palma, who was still in third place, two minutes and seventeen seconds behind Cooper. Anderson made a lap in 6:22, smashing his own best previous lap record by two seconds.

In the sixteenth lap Anderson sped two minutes and forty-three seconds ahead of Cooper. De Palma was five seconds ahead of O'Donnell.

At the end of the seventeenth lap O'Donnell had captured third place from De Palma by a lead of five seconds. Anderson in first place led Cooper by almost a minute.

Anderson Goes Lap in 6:19.

It was in the seventeenth lap that Anderson made his record breaking lap in 6:19—79.86 miles per hour.

Anderson continued to lead Cooper in the eighteenth lap. O'Donnell increased his lead over De Palma to 12 seconds.

Anderson's average speed for the 150 miles 4,860 feet was 77.514 miles per hour, and Cooper's 77.039.

Henderson's Duesenberg went out of the race in the nineteenth lap with a broken timing gear. Anderson led Cooper by forty-seconds. O'Donnell was in third place, two minutes behind Cooper, De Palma third.

Relative positions remained about the same for the leaders from the twentieth to the thirty-fourth laps inclusive.

STUTZ DOUBLE WIN AMERICAN TRIUMPH

BY REED L. PARKER.

ELGIN, Ill., Aug. 21.—Stutz's double victory sets a new record for American racing. In no previous contest, either speedway or road, has a domestic manufacturer had the honor of finishing two major races, winner of both first and second places. This dual victory gives the Stutz team undisputed hold on the world's road racing championship, and Cooper, winner in the C. A. C. trophy race yesterday and second place today, gets the road racing title for the second time, having secured the honor for the first time in 1913.

Stutz outgeneraled every team manager in the race. He had drivers who could get the speed from their mounts. It is pretty generally believed that Cooper could have given Anderson a harder fight had he wished. De Palma, as is his custom, planned his race before the start. He expected seventy-five miles an hour would win, and drove to that limit until thirty laps had been reeled off at greater speed by Anderson, Cooper, and O'Donnell.

Then he cut loose with all his speed, but his spurt developed too late. He had no excuse to offer and accepted his defeat stoically.

The big surprise of the race was furnished by O'Donnell, who finished third. Like De Palma, he planned to average seventy-five miles an hour. Earlier than the Italian, O'Donnell saw this would be too slow. He opened up on his twenty-fifth lap and managed to overhaul the Italian by reckless disregard for his own safety.

Fred W. Jencks, manager of the Elgin Road Racing association, said tonight the races would be continued. The crowd was large, considering the weather, and enough money was taken in to pay expenses.

FULLER PARK WINS MEET.

Athletes representing Fuller park defeated Armour square in a dual track meet yesterday on the former's field [illegible] to 30. Morton Mills of the winning team was the individual star. He secured fifteen points by winning the 50, 100, and 220 yard dashes.

NET FANS' EYES ON M'LOUGHLIN IN U. S. TOURNEY

BY JEWETT E. RICKER, JR.
[Vice President Western Lawn Tennis Assn.]

The recent defeat of Maurice E. McLoughlin by Karl Behr in the finals of the Seabright, N. J., tournament has raised the question throughout the country as to whether McLoughlin can "come back" and win the national singles championship which will begin at Forest Hills, N. Y., a week from tomorrow.

To my mind the question is not "Can McLoughlin come back?" so much as "Will McLoughlin come back?" Certainly any man who could have beaten the great Brookes and Wilding only last summer and could go through both last season and this with only two defeats scored against him can come back. In fact, it is not even a question of "coming back" at all, for the reason that McLoughlin has stood for three years—and still stands—as the leader of American tennis players.

Not Yet on Edge.

McLoughlin's defeat by Behr—coming though it did in straight sets—probably is not due to any particular falling off in McLoughlin's game, but more particularly to the fact that he had not yet reached that fine edge which he must always reach before he begins to play his unbeatable match tennis. Add to this fact that Behr undoubtedly was in an inspired mood—a habit with him at least once every season—and you have the reasons for McLoughlin's defeat.

Though the entry list in the national tournament is not yet known, it seems fairly certain that the following players are most likely to fight it out for premier honors: McLoughlin, Williams, Behr, [illegible], William M. Johnston, George M. Church, Washburn, Wallace F. Johnson, Griffin, and Dawson.

With this as the field, and included in the list are all the leading players of America, with the exception of Murray, Strachan, and Fottrell, it still seems certain that the real fight for the championship will lie between McLoughlin and Williams, and that when these men meet the title will be virtually decided. Behr, in his present form, should prove the strongest opponent of these two, but Williams has beaten Behr repeatedly in their meetings of the last two years, and should do so again. McLoughlin also has been uniformly successful against the nervous New Yorker.

For three years McLoughlin and Williams have, for the most part, stood considerably above their nearest rivals in this country, and their meetings have been fraught with interest.

First Meeting in 1912.

Their first meeting occurred in 1912 in the New York state tournament, and resulted in a long five set match, which McLoughlin won, 6-2, 6-2, 5-7, 4-6, 6-4. It was in this year that Williams, just returning to America after a life spent abroad, first flashed into prominence in this country, though his fame had preceded him back to his native land. His record up to his meeting with McLoughlin had been remarkably successful, except for a five set defeat at the hands of Behr at Longwood, for which he has since secured ample revenge.

Again in 1912 Williams played McLoughlin the closest kind of a five set match, this meeting occurring in the semi-finals of the national championship at Newport, which McLoughlin subsequently won. The score in this match was 6-4, 5-7, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, in the Californian's favor.

In the following year McLoughlin and Williams invaded England, in their successful quest of the Davis cup, and, though they met often in practice matches, their first tournament clash occurred in the English championships, McLoughlin winning the first two sets, 6-4 and 6-4, and Williams the third at 6-3, at which point the Harvard man defaulted out of courtesy to McLoughlin. In the finals of the national championship the two men again faced each other, McLoughlin winning on this occasion in four sets, 6-4, 5-7, 6-3, 6-1.

Last year, at Longwood, McLoughlin and Williams met in the semi-finals, the victory this time going to the former in straight sets, 6-3, 6-3, 6-4. Then, in the national championship at Newport, came the great surprise of the 1914 season, when Williams lowered the colors of the great Californian for the first time, winning in straight sets, 6-3, 8-6, 10-8, and thereby taking the title, which he now holds. McLoughlin, however, on his season's record was ranked No. 1 and Williams No. 2 in the national rating.

Few Real Changes in Football Rules.

FEW radical changes have been made in the football rules for the 1915 season by the committee which met in New York last winter. The alterations are included in Spalding's guide, which is out. The book contains a complete record of the games played last year, the schedule of games for this season, and the names of the captains, coaches, and managers of the various elevens. Following is the complete list of changes:

1. Interferers will no longer be permitted to knock down the secondary defense after the whistle blows, nor will the defense either be permitted to run into a man after the whistle blows.
2. The presence of a field judge has been made obligatory, and the watch has been taken away from the head linesman and given to the field judge, so as to make it possible for the linesman to be more observant of all matters coming within his province, like the above and "beating" the starting signal.
3. No longer will throwing the ball out of bounds be substituted by teams for a kick, for a forward pass going out of bounds on the fly, whether it touches a man or not, is now ruled as an incompleted forward pass.
4. The flocking of substitutes in the last period has been stopped, and no resubstitution will be allowed except at the beginning of a period.
5. The protection of the fullback has been somewhat altered. The rule has been divided into two parts—running into the fullback and "roughing" the fullback. Running into the fullback is penalized fifteen yards, but "roughing" the fullback is penalized fifteen yards and disqualification as well.
6. The committee recommended that the players be numbered.
7. At the same time they passed a vote deprecating the putting in of substitutes for the purpose of conveying information.
8. The penalty for unsportsmanlike conduct was changed to fifteen yards, but the power was placed in the hands of the official to disqualify for flagrant conduct.
9. In snapping the ball back the center may not hold it after he has made the motion; he must actually let the ball go. This prevents a play that has been practiced, consisting of the center holding the ball after he has apparently snapped it and some one coming around behind the line and taking the ball out of his hands.
10. The peculiar method of blocking and interfering, which has been increasing, wherein men throw their legs up in the air, has been ruled out, for throwing the legs and striking with the lower leg a man above the knee will be penalized fifteen yards. The rules already provide that striking a man in the same way below the knee is tripping.
11. Another provision was made that unless the captain requests a shorter distance, the referee will always bring the ball out from the side line fifteen yards.
12. If a second eligible man touches a forward pass after it has been first touched by an eligible player, it is simply an incompleted forward pass, with the loss of a down.
13. Several corrective changes were made in the rules, but not altering the method of play.

TWO CHICAGO SHOTS WIN RIFLE HONORS AS 100,000 LOOK ON Winners Feature Events.

Grand American handicap—Louis B. Clarke, Chicago.

Preliminary handicap—R. H. Morse, Chicago.

Consolation handicap—H. Hammersmith, Milwaukee.

BY WALTER H. ECKERSALL.

The greatest event in the history of trap shooting.

This was the consensus of opinion of shooters of fifty years' experience who either competed in or witnessed the sixteenth annual Grand American handicap tournament held last week in Grant park. From the number of entries and performances, the event will go down in history as the most successful ever held in the trap shooting world.

The tournament was a huge success in every way. During the five days of the event, it is estimated, fully 100,000 persons saw the best marksmen in the world perform. As a result of staging the event in Chicago hundreds of local men and women have become so infatuated with the game that they intend to take it up, and some of them may be seen in next year's tournament, which may be held at the same place.

Million Targets Thrown.

During the tourney 1,015 shooters took part in the different events. It also was estimated by Elmer Shaner, secretary of the Interstate association, under whose auspices the event took place that 1,000,000 shells were exploded and as many targets thrown. Shaner also said that approximately $18,000 was awarded in prizes, while the money spent for trophies reached about $3,000.

The total expenditure of staging the tournament cost the Chicago Association of Trap Shooters and the Interstate association $8,000. This amount includes the payment of help, renting of tents, chairs, and the installation of telephone and telegraph service. The traps were donated by manufacturers and some of the targets were furnished gratis.

Clarke's Victory a Surprise.

The victory of Louis B. Clarke of Chicago in the Grand American handicap not only was a welcome surprise to himself but to his many admiring friends. The local banker was never considered a shot of the first water. He has been shooting over the traps a little over a year, although he has had considerable experience shooting live game in the swamps around Tolleston, Ill.

Whether the Grand American will be held in Chicago next year is a matter of conjecture. The subject will be brought before the board of directors of the interstate association at their annual meeting in New York in December. Another topic of interest also will be broached, and that will be the advisability of holding events for women in connection with the Grand American. Local women shots are keen for such a contest, and their request undoubtedly will be given consideration.

BOXING MEN WOULD MAKE RING BATTLES FREE OF CRITICISM

Cleveland, O., Aug. 21.—[Special.]—Fistic promoters from many cities are in session here, formulating rules to govern the future of the boxing game in the United States and perfecting an organization which probably will be international in its scope in promoting the best interests of the ring sport.

It was the first meeting of its kind ever assembled, and from the interest shown by those present and the tone of letters and telegrams received, it is believed that before the sessions end tomorrow the fight game will be put on a basis where it will have as much system as have the other branches of sport.

Ask Revision of Weights.

Among the most prominent suggestions made was one for a revision of the present scale of weights; the raising of the bantamweight limit from 116 to 117 pounds, of the featherweight from 122 to 125 pounds, the lightweight from 133 to 135 pounds, the welterweight from 145 to 147 pounds, and the middleweight from 158 to 160 pounds.

Lord Lonsdale, leading figure in the ring game in England, in a letter to Tom Andrews, leading spirit in the convention, asserted that the English authorities would reduce their featherweight limit from 126 to 125 pounds, making the weights in the United States and England the same.

Other prominent suggestions, which probably will be embodied in the rules, will provide:

That champions must defend their titles at stated intervals.

That promoters or boxers or managers of boxers who violate contracts shall be blacklisted.

That referees shall in some manner have their qualifications acted upon by the national body and shall in some measure be responsible to the national organization.

That penalties be imposed for failure of boxers to deliver according to specifications.

Many Promoters Present.

Those present at the meeting included Tom Andrews, Harry Stout, W. Mitchell, and W. H. Lignger of Milwaukee; Dr. J. W. Bevan and Mark Shaughnessy of Minneapolis; Tommy Sullivan of St. Louis; Mike Collins of Hudson, Wis.; Gen. Gene Melady of Omaha; Charles Murray of Buffalo; Sam Harris of Baltimore; Joe Chip of New Castle, Pa.; Matt Hinkel, George Schneider, and Jimmy Dunn of Cleveland.

Myo Murray, Boston; Horace Lerch, Buffalo; Jack McGuigan and Harry Edwards, Philadelphia; Jimmy Johnston, New York, and promoters in Denver, Cincinnati, and other cities in letters stated that they, too, wished to become allied with the movement and would be governed by the actions of the organization.

The first bouts to be staged under these rules will be pulled off at Minneapolis on Sept. 2, it was agreed today, when Phil Brock will meet Milburn Saylor at [illegible] pounds, and Matt Brock will mix with Billy De Foe, both for ten rounds.

The organization was completed under the name of the American Boxing Association of the United States. Officers elected are: President, Matt J. Hinkel, Cleveland; secretary and treasurer, Gene Melady, Omaha; vice president, Harry Edwards, Philadelphia.

DRAWING CARD BRINGS THE COIN; CHAMPION FAILS

McFarland and Gibbons Command Big Purses, but Kid Williams Is Idle.

BY RAY C. PEARSON.

For more than a year promoters throughout the country, among them James Gibson and Jimmy Johnston of New York, Tom Andrews of Milwaukee, and others, dangled alluring bait before the eyes of Packey McFarland—this being attractive financial inducements—with the hope of bringing about a McFarland-Mike Gibbons match, but only recently did these efforts result in success. Incidentally it wasn't any of the aforesaid promoters who grabbed off the attraction. When William Marshall, who will stage the contest at the Brighton Beach motordrome on Sept. 11, offered the two fighters an amount aggregating $32,500 Packey modestly agreed to battle Michael.

To be such an attraction that he can command this amount of kale and particularly in financially strenuous war times certainly is nearly enough to swell the cranium of any pugilistic son, but for a boy who never has had the honor of holding a championship to be "hounded" as Packey McFarland has been by the gents who pull off the mills is surely evidence a-plenty that a high class performer, even if he isn't a titleholder, can pull in the coin if he happens to be a drawing card.

Packey Big Drawing Card.

McFarland has gleaned far more of the stuff that makes the mare go from his ability to draw the fans of pugilism through the pay gate than a huge number of other boxers, and some of them champions, too, have been able to grab off in a dozen years of swapping punches. Modestly he admits that he has cleaned up something like a quarter of a million dollars from his work in the ring. With some of this coin he has dabbled in the real estate game and added to his fortune. Another little chunk of money amounting to $50,000 he invested in a brewery at Joliet, Ill., of which he is at the present time a director. This brewery investment Packey terms a "gold mine."

Like McFarland's case is that of Gibbons. Mike never was any more of a spendthrift than Packey, and he is another of the type that can be termed a high class drawing card. That's why Promoter Marshall was forced to go higher than any one else would go to match the two boys.

It certainly is sweet business to be able to command such coin.

Champion Can't Make Coin.

There is another case, however, that is brought to mind, and it is the direct opposite to the one mentioned. Today there is a champion and one of the greatest that ever drew on a padded mitt, but he isn't pulling down any money. In fact, he seldom fights, and when he does it is against a dub, and naturally the financial returns aren't big enough to make a swell in the bank roll.

This boy is Kid Williams of Baltimore, who proudly boasts that he is bantamweight champion of the world. From the Maryland town there comes a wail from Williams and his manager, Sammy Harris, and it is because they can't grab off any big matches. It is great to be a champion, but poor little Williams is finding out that all his dreams before he met and defeated Johnny Coulon of Chicago for the title aren't coming true by many parasangs.

When Johnny Coulon was an active fighting gent he made a lot of hay while the sun shone. As a champion he was a success, not alone accepting all the glory that goes to a titleholder but at the same time cleaning up a snug sum of money. A few days ago Johnny told the writer that he had earned $65,000 from fighting. Of course that doesn't compare with the amount that Packey and Gibbons made, but when full consideration is given to the fact that bantamweight champions never command as much as the bigger boys it is easy to be figured that Johnny made good in great shape.

Awakening for Williams.

It was only natural that when Kid Williams came along he should be imbued with the idea that all he had to do was to defeat Coulon to get the big money. He accomplished the first object, but has failed dismally in absorbing the coin. What an awakening it has been for the little kid in Baltimore!

Perhaps were one to get a frank expression from Williams on how joyful he feels over being a champion he would say that the title isn't worth what some people might think. The Kid, like any other champion, fought hard for it, and now that he has it he wants to realize on it not from a glory but from a financial standpoint.

A letter received by the writer from Sammy Harris a couple of days ago conveys the information in plain terms that Williams doesn't think the game of being champion is what it is cracked up to be.

"Williams and I have been chasing everybody that can make 116 pounds, but we can't get any action," laments Harris. "I heard that Frankie Burns of New Jersey was talking of battling Williams, and according to the report was so cocky that he wanted to wager $5,000 on the side that he would beat the Kid. We went after him, but got no action, which seems convincing evidence that he doesn't want Williams' game.

Ertle Only Talks.

"From St. Paul there came a report that Johnny Ertle, the newest of the bantamweights, wanted to tackle the champion. There was more talk of a $5,000 side bet for this match, but when I went after Ertle I didn't even get an answer for my trouble."

Williams certainly is in a bad spot, and to see his bigger pugilistic brothers, Packey and Mike, pick up the big stuff isn't going to make him feel any happier.

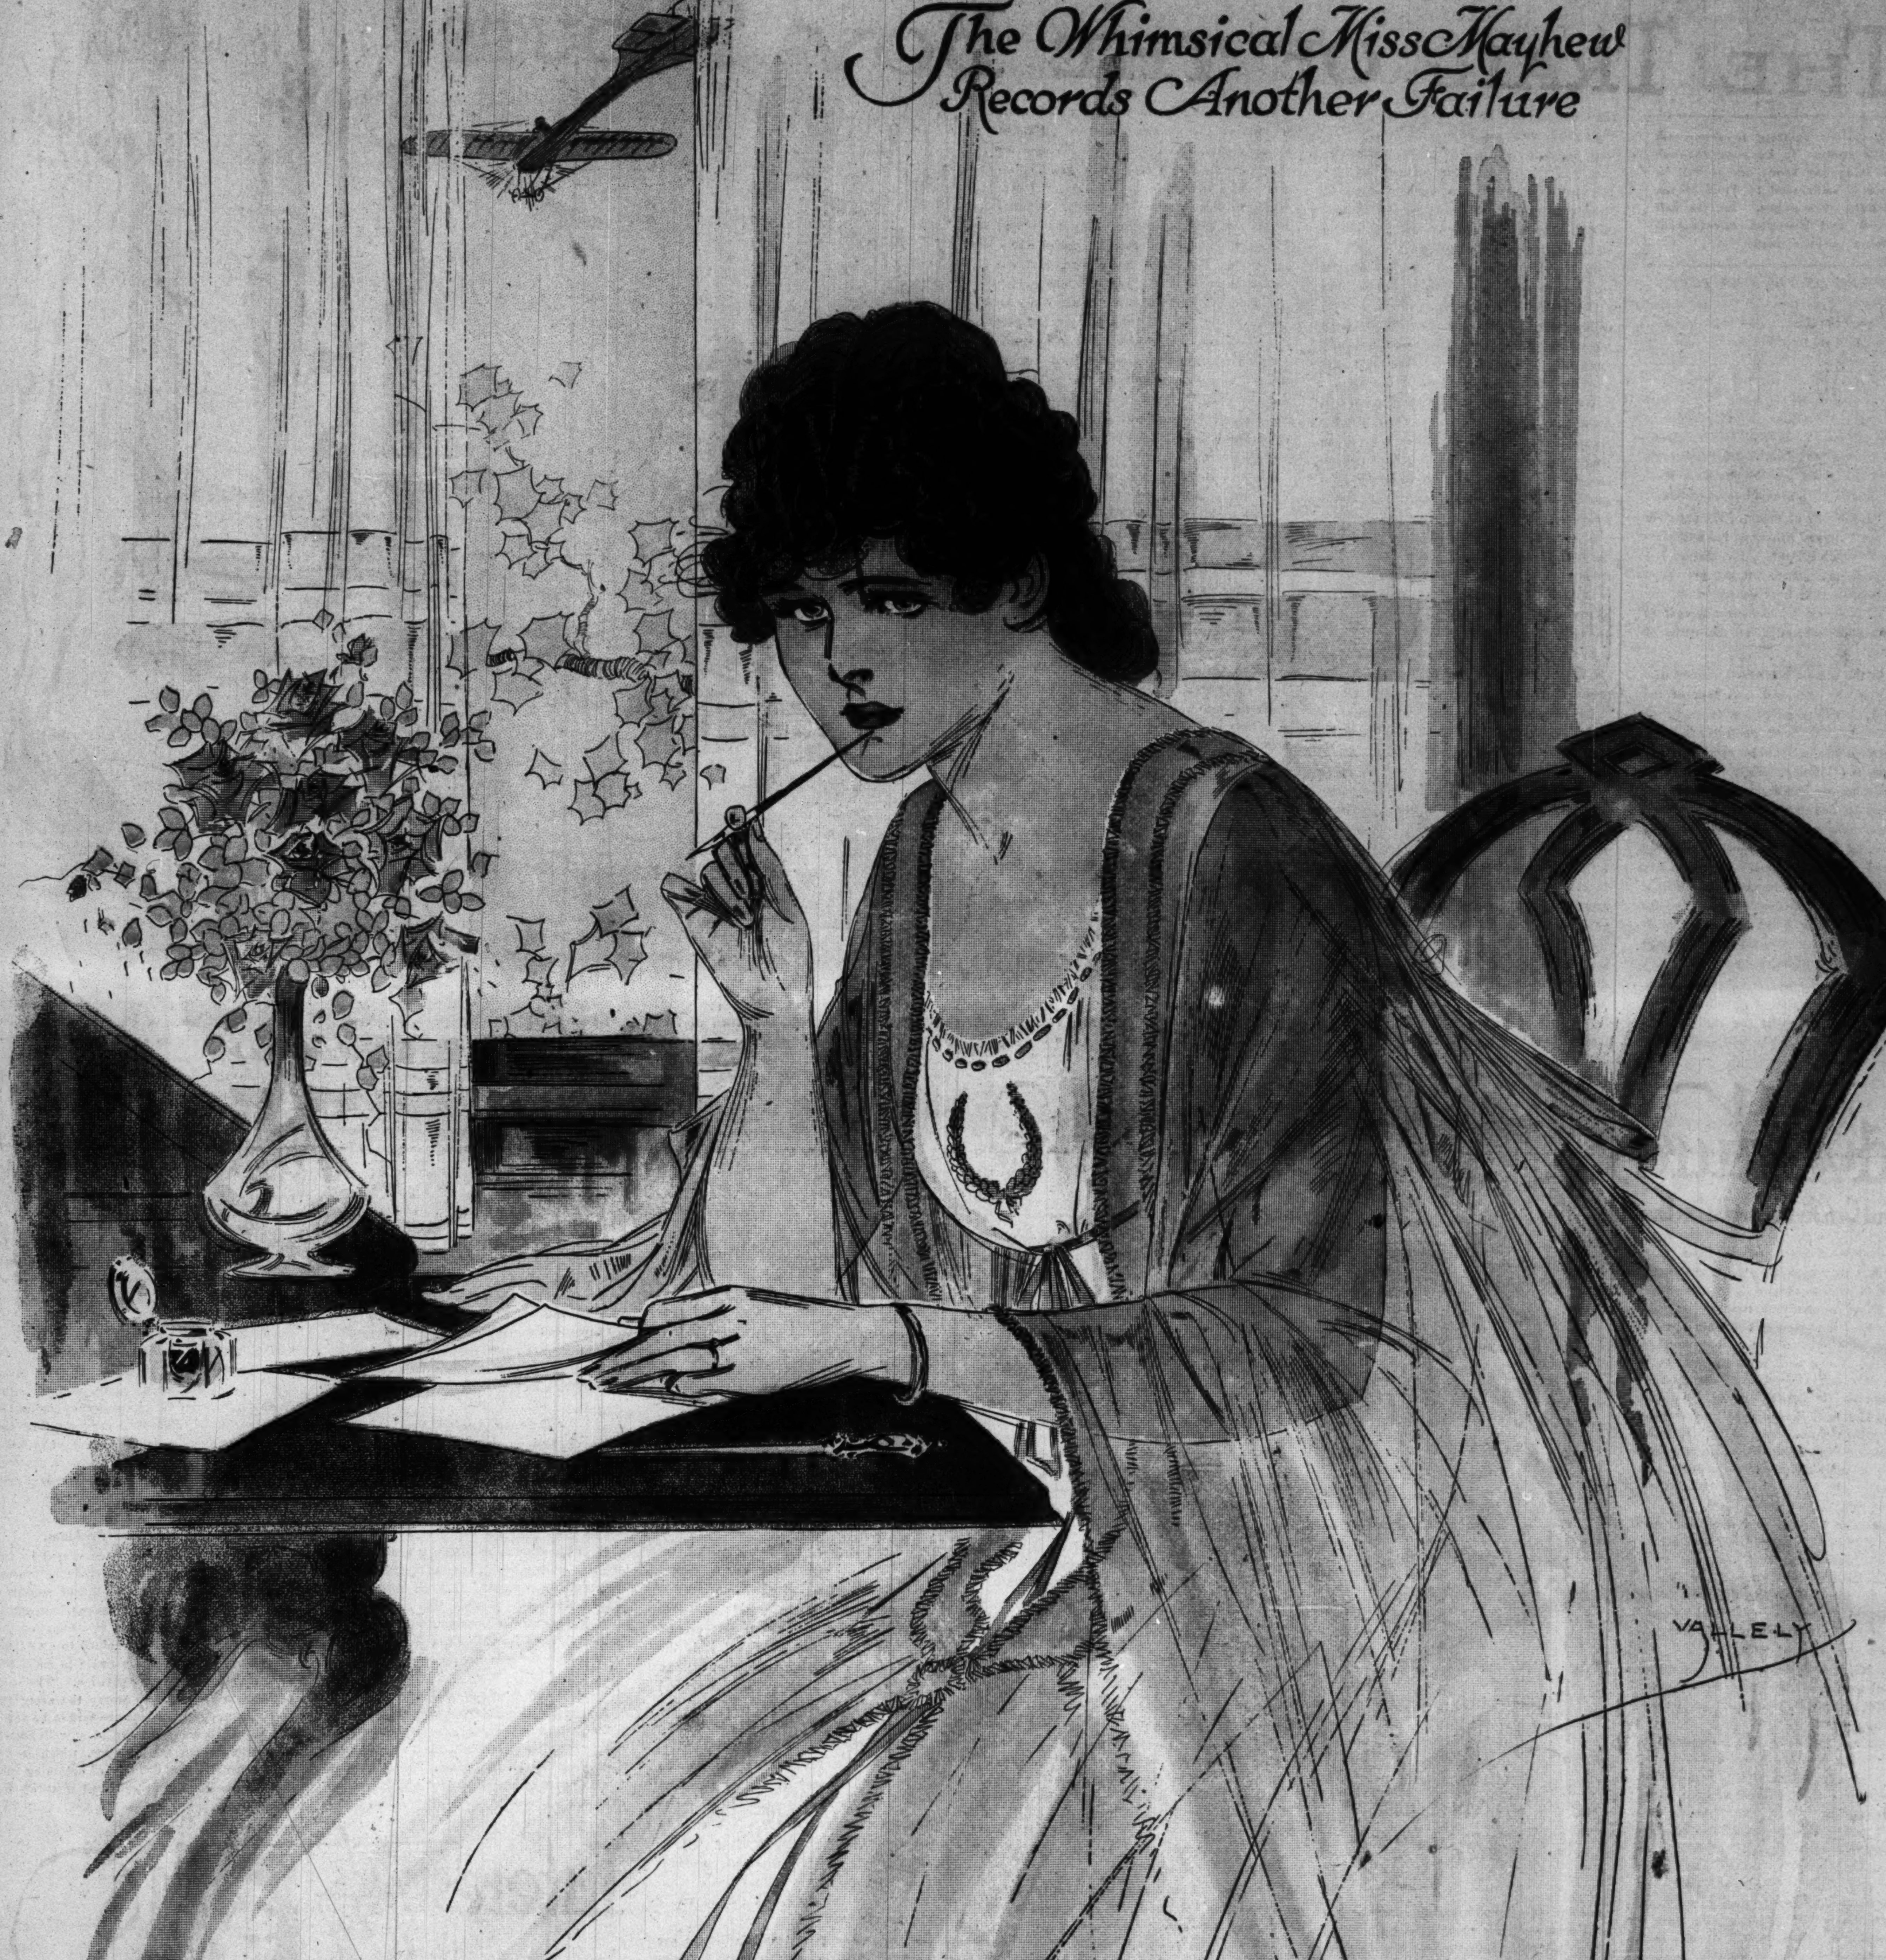
The Whimsical Miss Mayhew Records Another Failure



This is the seventh of a series of stories concerning the love experiments of the whimsical Miss Mayhew.

JERRY CLIMMIT, the young Harvard man who had suddenly become such a figure in the military aviation world, became just as suddenly a figure in the world of the whimsical Miss Mayhew. Miss Mayhew could not have told herself how it was that when she was with him she forgot about every other man she had ever known, not even excepting Channing, her fiancé. There were times in the earlier stages of her acquaintance with Climmit when she felt that she was disloyal to Channing, but as the friendship grew this feeling was swept aside as all such feelings are before stronger emotions.

It never occurred to Miss Mayhew, when talking to Climmit, to consider anybody but themselves. Of course she knew that if she would drop Channing for Climmit the former would be deeply hurt. Still, there was not a great chance of this contingency arising, inasmuch as Climmit had never proposed.

Miss Mayhew wondered what she would say if he did. Often she had thought of his qualities, and so far she had found none missing: he was tender, faithful, true, courteous, brave, generous, thoughtful—and successful.

On this afternoon they were in Marcia's garden, which was a splash of vivid color against the somber green of the lawn. They had been talking since luncheon, and as nightfall was approaching a slight melancholy crept into the atmosphere. Instinctively Miss Mayhew knew that the lithe, slender young man before her was about to propose, for his face had become suddenly sober and he drew closer.

"Marcia," he said tenderly as he laid one brown hand on her own small white one, "you must have guessed long before this that my liking for you is more than that of a friend—that I love you—honestly and as sincerely as any man could love a woman. Perhaps it may seem abrupt, because I have known you so short a time; but, Marcia, I knew from the first what the end would be. I love you, and I want you to marry me——"

The whimsical Miss Mayhew did not remove her hand from his. Instead, she gave it a warm pressure that was involuntary, instinctive. Her pulse was throbbing. She felt like crying.

"You—you mustn't," she whispered. "There's Channing." Climmit paused a moment.

"You need only say," he went on slowly, "that Channing is the one you prefer, and I shall withdraw. You may think that because you are engaged to Channing that I have acted dishonorably in telling you what I have. But I feel no dishonor in my love for you. I am proud. I only wish you to know that whatever may happen I shall love you."

"O, Jerry," she cried. "What——"

"Don't you love me? Say that you do care for me?"

Miss Mayhew felt herself yielding. She longed to take his face in her hands, to kiss him and tell him that he was very dear to her, but the thought of Channing stabbed into her brain.

"I do—do—do care," she answered. In an instant the aviator's arms were about her.

"Then you will marry me!" he cried joyfully.

"I don't know, I don't know," she kept reiterating. "Please let me go, let me think. O, what am I saying——"

Breaking from his caresses, she fled over the lawn and through the hedge toward the house. Tall, slender, and erect in his aviation suit, Climmit stood and watched her for a moment. In his eyes was the light of exultant happiness, of youth, of daring. He could have cried aloud his delight, for in his mind Miss Mayhew had answered as he had hoped she would answer.

It seemed that he must find something on which to throw the spirit of his happiness. Wheeling suddenly, he crossed to the tennis court and leaped into the black monoplane that was moored there. The next moment there was the staccato roar of an engine, a rush of air, the frightened cries of birds, and the plane was aloft—aloft with victorious youth at the wheel.

Troubled, excited, happy and yet unhappy, the whimsical Miss Mayhew paused at the door of her father's house. Her ear caught the drum of the engine. She turned suddenly and watched the course of the machine.

Up, up, up it sailed, higher and higher, until it seemed a mote in the afternoon sunshine, a dancing will-o'-the-wisp in the illimitable blue of the higher skies. Her hands clenched; she shuddered. What if something should go wrong! She paled—her heart pounded against her hand.

The machine was at the pinnacle of its ascent now. Spellbound, she watched it. Suddenly it swerved downward, plunged a thousand feet, turned over and over, swerved, swooped, and kept on plunging.

"O—O—O!" It was a low cry of fear from Miss Mayhew's lips. She closed her eyes to shut out the awful sight that she expected to see. An instant later she looked up.

The plane was righted. It was sailing in a level line. Then, just as before, it resumed its crazy plunging, dove like a gull to the surface of the sea, and then rose over the shore line and went winging away toward its hangar.

Then Miss Mayhew knew—knew that mad youth was at the wheel; that every terrible risk that Climmit had taken, every death fraught hazard, was the result of his happiness and his daring nature.

She pictured to herself her own state of mind if she allowed herself to love and marry a man to whom death meant so little, whose every movement in the upper air was as dangerous as could be. She saw the hours of torture that she would undergo if she were his wife and must watch his feats in the sky; she felt the moments of anguish that would be hers when he started with one of those mad plunges toward earth; she experienced the reaction—the reaction that would leave her wracked and trembling—after he had safely come through one of those frightful somersaults.

Could she be happy with such a man? Did she love Jerry Climmit enough to marry him and suffer continually through his daring? Would he give up flying for her, she wondered. Then she answered herself. Of course he could not, because his flying was his work, his future, his everything.

It was then that the whimsical Miss Mayhew knew that she must end this affair abruptly. And that night, with many tears, she wrote to Climmit the brief but kindly note that accomplished her aim.

And then she wrote another note the very writing of which somehow cheered her. It was to Channing, and it said: "Come home."

Next Sunday will be published Miss Mayhew's decision—the last of this series.

SCOUTING ON THE OWL FORK.

WHEN a certain w. k. newspaper humorist and writer bubbles over with the natural and honest enthusiasm of the joys of a fishing trip he covers the identity of his favorite stream by writing of it under the veiling name of "the Delectable river." Evidently it is his purpose to protect this cherished stream from the invasions of other fishermen—to hold its pools and rapids and trout haunted depths as his own sacred secret.

Now, I think just as much of my pet river as does my humorist friend in his adoration of "the Delectable river." But nature has taken certain precautions for the protection of my river, so that it is unlikely that any amount of publicity would deliver it over to the vandals or subject it to the curse of popularity.

So with the utmost boldness I confide that my river is the little old Owl fork of the Red river, which rambles off through the Ozark mountains of north central Arkansas. Its mysteries are only to be attained by a wearisome rail journey, mostly over lines to which sleeping car and dining car service are unknown. Its delectable reaches are through an inhospitable country inhabited by sad, hookworm infested natives who have no food to sell and who wouldn't sell it if they had it. A jaybird would have to carry his lunch if he started across these mountains; and as for the land, there are acres and acres of it where it is so poor a strong man would have a hard time even raising his voice on it.

With the conditions of access as they are, I take it for granted that nobody will fish my river unless he earns the right by the price of getting there. You will have a hard time finding this river in the atlas and a worse time finding it on the landscape. The only assistance I can offer is the suggestion that you hit for the heart of southwestern Missouri's mining district, eat your last civilized meal at the only town in the district, and then go to the edge of town and jump off in the direction of the river.

In company with a pal who has been a real boy scout a good many years, without really belonging to the organization, I went on a scouting trip down the Owl fork through the Ozarks a few weeks ago and got enough "roughing it" to satisfy even the most avid searcher after the joys of life in the open.

We dropped the canoe, dunnage laden and fitted with a bicycle wheeled truck for the portages, into the still backwater in a certain long reach of the river close to the log shack hamlet where Squire Rumley dispenses local justice and some simple, extremely staple groceries.

A few strokes of the paddle put us into the bend and out of sight of the village. The mountains, big enough to be impressive, not so big as to be appalling—just good natured, picturesque, friendly big hills—rose sharply on either side.

From there on it meant stick to the river for about 200 miles of tumbling rapids and meandering interludes of rock walled water.

By midafternoon we had done plenty of traveling for the day, with about eight miles of the river and half a dozen portages behind us. The sunset comes early 'way down in the river bed at the basement of the mountains and it behooves one to choose a campsite and get set early. A camp supper over, we were speculating on the advisability of trying out a newfangled luminous bass bait in the gloaming hours when happy chance brought us an interesting and mildly thrilling experience in night fishing.

From down in the dark in a cañon-like stream bed below we saw a flaming light, flickering distantly, coming right up the river in midstream. Charlie, my companion, allowed with an air of alarm that it probably was "a dog star gone mad."

We had not long to wait to arrive at a solution of the apparent mystery of a fire in midstream. As the light drew closer we made out the figure of a lanky youth, altogether innocent of clothes—altogether, I said—wading upstream with a pine knot torch in his left hand and a long staff or pole in his right. He carried the pole poised like a javelin, in a hopeful, aggressive, and expectant sort of way. He was about fifty yards downstream from the camp when he leaned forward swiftly and plunged the pole into the water. Then there was a fine aquatic riot. The mountain boy whooped out to unseen companions downstream: "I dun gaffed a whale." There were many evidences he was correct. The water was rippled into a slather of boiling foam all about him. He hurled the torch from him to the near-by bank and devoted his attention to holding on to the pole with both hands.

With an abandon which bespoke no second thought we kicked the now empty canoe and shot down alongside to be in at the finish, whatever it was all about.

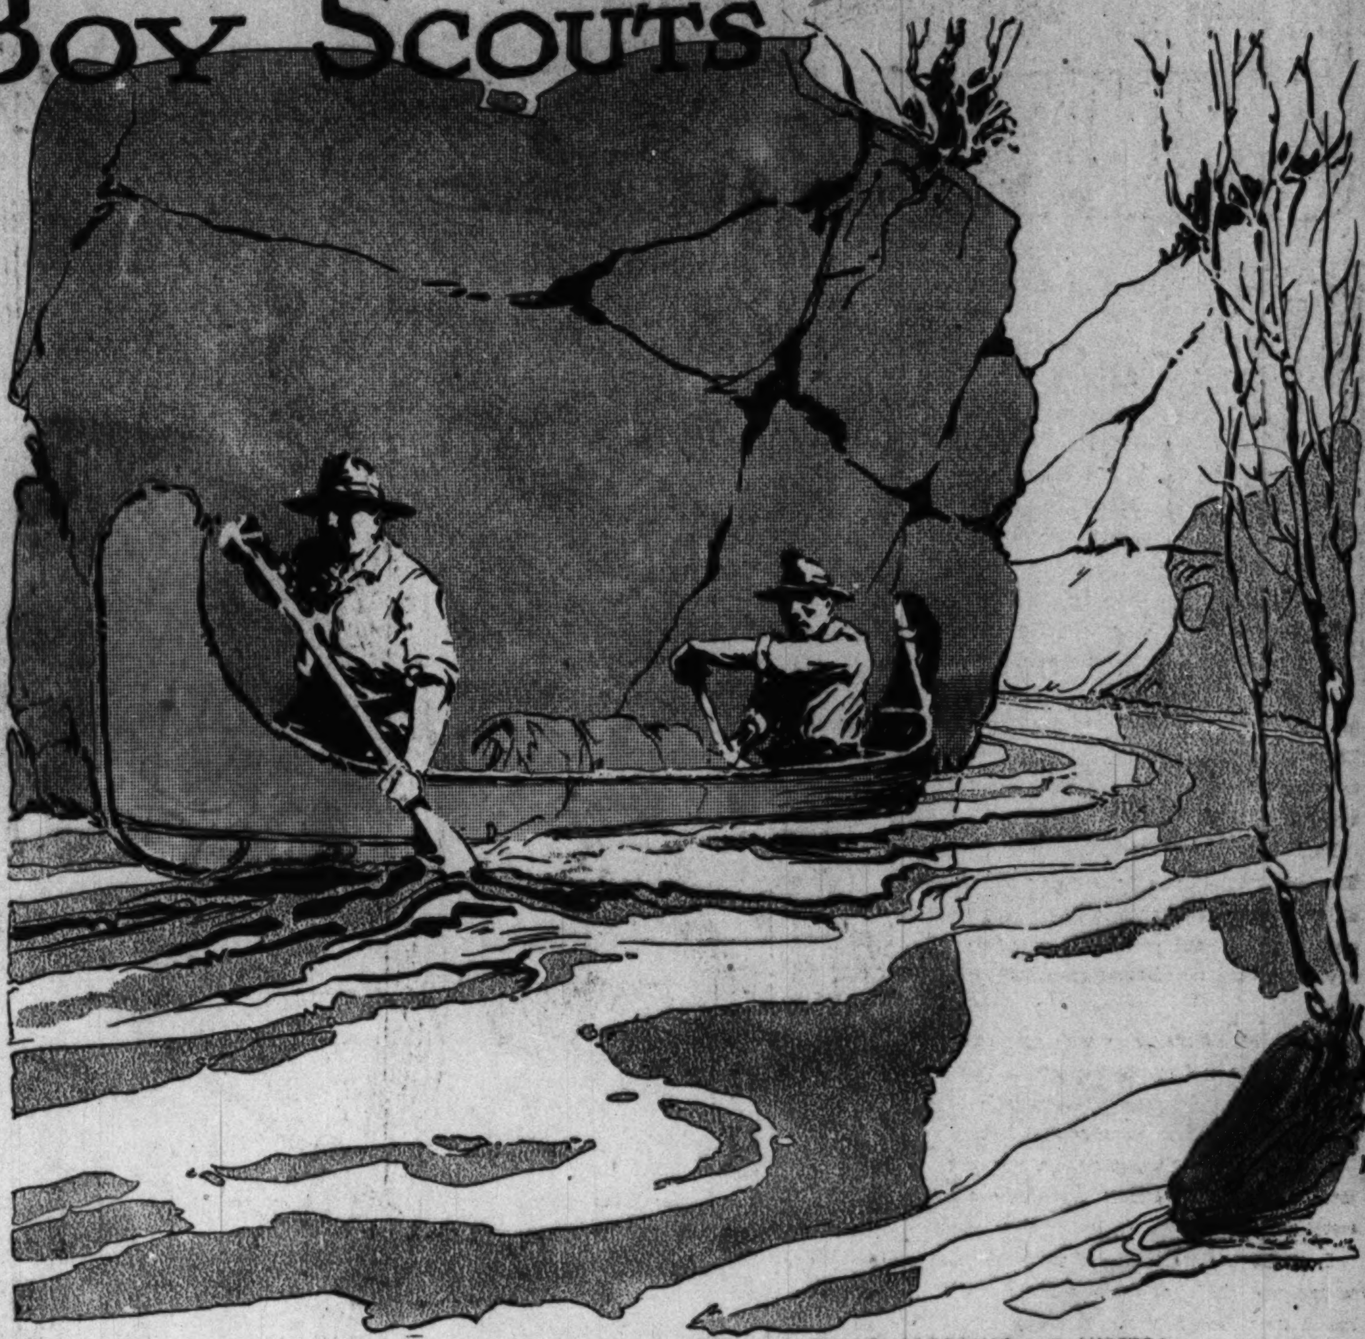
By that time a whole flock of natives was about, aiding the harpooner's fight. We stood by and turned on the acetylene light in the bow of the cruising canoe.

When the battle was over the youths in the river landed, or more properly "beached," their trophy, which inspection proved to be a mighty catfish, weighing perhaps forty-five pounds or thereabout.

That was our introduction to the sport of spearing fish on Red river. The young mountaineers, a trifle backward about making friends, grew interested in the "gosh blamed searchlight" on the canoe and decided to become acquainted.

Now, once on a time I held that the only sportsmanlike way to take fish was with a dry fly on a ladylike, silk wound, octagonal split bamboo rod. After I looked over this fiendish looking catfish I was overcome with the desire to go out and fight fish with a warty war club.

So then and there we joined forces with the natives and with the aid of the refinements of civilized devices made the cruel war on the fish even more cruel. The canoe searchlight was turned so that its cyclops stare gazed into the river. With poles cut from the canebreak that came down to the river in a narrow swale and a few gaff hooks straightened for the purpose we hurriedly rigged an equipment of fish spears and went to work.



-ABOUT 200 MILES OF TUMBLING RAPIDS AND MEANDERING INTERLUDES OF ROCK WALLED WATERS

Pine knot torches may be something of a fish lure, but the results give all the glory to the acetylene light. We got em—big redhorse, big catfish, some worthless drum, a mild eyed buffalo fish far, from his proper habitat, here and there a husky bass which ought to have known better.

When the hunt was over the natives had more fish than they had suspected were in the river. A brace of the bass was enough for us. But at sunup we were rather glad for reasons of conscience to break camp and slip off down the river, trusting on the rest of the trip mostly to the conventional rod and fly.

My Adventures As a Spy

by Lieut. Gen. Sir Robert Baden Powell, K.C.B.

Founder of the Boy Scouts

OUR next step was to see how crossing the river was carried on by the cavalry. From information received we presented ourselves at a certain spot on the river at a little before 10 one morning. The official attaché had received notice that a brigade of cavalry would swim the river at this point at 10 o'clock, and at 10 o'clock their special train was due to arrive there. We were there, fortunately, half an hour beforehand, and we saw the whole brigade come down to the river and file across a fairly deep ford, where the horses got wet to some extent, but they did not swim.

On the far bank a few men were left behind. These, as it turned out, were all the men and horses who could actually swim well, and as the train arrived and the attachés disembarked on to the bank, they found the major part of the brigade already arrived, dripping wet, and the remainder just swimming over at that moment.

Of course, in their reports they stated that they had seen the whole brigade swimming over. But this is how reports often get about which are not strictly true.

Emboldened by our success in getting into the fort by day and night, we then continued the experiment for several nights in succession, watching the further practice with searchlights, star shells, and light rockets. We had, however, collected all the information that was necessary, and there was no need for us to go there again. But news reached us that there was to be a final show for the emperor himself, and I could not resist the temptation of going once more to the fort, as I expected there would be a grand pyrotechnic display for this occasion.

I got there in good time before the emperor's arrival, and made my way into the place as usual, my brother remaining outside to see the effect of the lights from the attacker's point of view. Inside, however, all was not quite the same as it had been on previous occasions. There were a large number of officers collected there, and a too larger number of police officers for my liking. I, therefore, repented of my intention and took myself out again.

Then as I walked back along the road in the dark I noticed the lights of the emperor's cortége coming along towards me. As the first carriage passed me I did the worst thing in the world I could have done at such a moment—I turned my head away to avoid being recognized in the lamplight. My action made the occupants of the first carriage suspicious. They were some of the staff officers of the emperor. In a moment they stopped the carriage, rushed at me, and, with scarcely a word, seized and hustled me into the carriage with them and drove back to the fort again. They asked me a few questions as to who I was and why I was there and on arrival at the fort I was handed over to some officers and again asked my business.

I could only say that I was an Englishman who had been looking on at the maneuvers as a spectator and was anxious to find my way to the station (which was some ten miles away). This was all fairly true, but not quite good enough for them, and they presently packed me into a carriage and sent me back—in charge of an officer—to the station, with a view to my being handed over to the police and removed to the capital.

It was in the days of my apprenticeship, and I had been exceedingly foolish in taking a few notes, which, although undecipherable, perhaps would none the less be used as evidence against me. Therefore, so soon as we were under way I made it my business to quietly tear these notes up into small pieces and to drop them out of the carriage window whenever my guardian was looking the other way. When we arrived at the station there was some little time to wait, and I asked if I might go to the inn and collect my belongings. Permission was granted to me, and I was taken there under the charge of a police officer.

Hastily I packed my bag, and the good officer endeavored to help me, picking up anything he could see in the room and thrusting it in with my things. Unfortunately, he kept packing my brother's things in as well, and so when his back was turned I thrust them back into my brother's bed, for I did not want it known he was about there, too.

Having finally filled my portmanteau, my next care was to leave a warning lest he, too, should be entrapped. So, while ostensibly paying the bill to the landlord of the house, who had been called up by the police, I wrote a warning note on a scrap of paper, which I jammed on the candle, where my brother could not fail to find it when he came home later on, and then I went off to the station and was taken back to the capital by a hussar officer of congenial temperament.

With all good feeling and the true hospitality of his kind, he insisted on buying half a dozen bottles of beer for my consumption—since I was an Englishman—and he helped me with the ordeal during the small hours of the morning.

On reaching the capital I was put into a hotel, my passport taken from me, and I was told that I should be expected to remain there until called for. In the meantime I might go about the city, but was not to take myself away without permission. I soon found that I was being watched by a detective told off for the purpose, and then it was that I made the acquaintance of a foreign spy who was acting as waiter in the hotel. He was so well informed on higher politics, as well as on military matters, that I guessed he must be an officer of the intelligence staff, and he was most helpful and kind to me in my predicament.

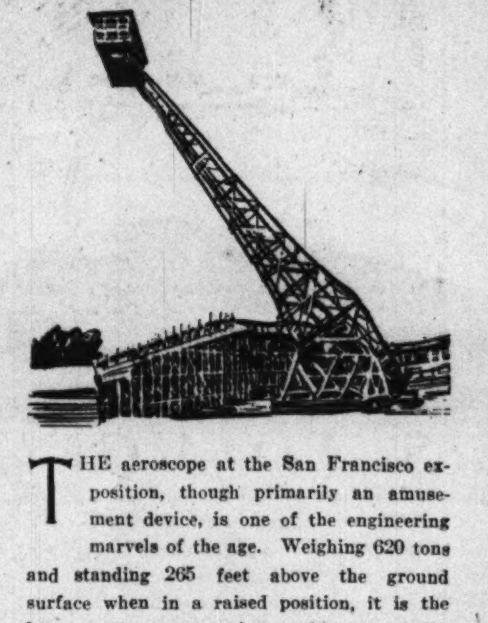
He pointed out to me who were the detectives in the hotel staff, and informed me that their duty was merely to watch me, to ascertain what my moves were day by day, and to report them by telephone to the head police office. He advised me before going out each day to inform the hall porter, thereby letting the detectives overhear what were my plans; they would then telephone to the police, who would have their own detectives watching me while I was out.

Within a short time my brother rejoined me from the maneuver area, but by doing so he at once came under observation and under suspicion, and we were practically a pair of prisoners. So much was this the case that a few days later we received a visit at daybreak one morning from a friend in power, who was also in touch with the police, and he advised us that the best course we could take was to escape from the country while it was possible, he undertaking quietly to make arrangements for us. The idea was that we should slip away to a seaport, where we could get on to a British steamer as two of the crew and so pass out of the country.

That was the scheme. But the difficulty was how to play it off. A ship was found whose captain was willing to receive us provided that we could get to him without being observed.

(To be continued next Sunday.)

POPULAR SCIENCE



THE aeroscope at the San Francisco exposition, though primarily an amusement device, is one of the engineering marvels of the age. Weighing 620 tons and standing 265 feet above the ground surface when in a raised position, it is the largest passenger carrying machine ever built. Passengers on this form of merry-go-round are slung around in a circle of some 200 feet radius, and the feature has been most popular during the fair.

The aeroscope is fundamentally a trunnion bascule bridge, mounted on a revolvable tower. The tower, in turn, is mounted on a series of eight great trucks, which travel on a ninety pound rail, forming a circle sixty feet in diameter. Four of these trucks are provided with fifteen horse power motors and a train of gears which drives them in the same way as a street car truck.

The operator or pilot travels with the car and directs its operation by means of a telephone to the motorman in the tower and by means of suitable interlocking signals. Both power and hand brakes are provided, and these, together with the interlocking signals and the care exercised in designing all the parts equally strong, guarantee absolute safety. One year was required to erect the big machine, and so accurate was its design and erection that it went into service immediately on completion, without any preliminary trial.

Definition of Horse Power.

To lift 550 pounds one foot in one second requires what is known as one horse power. Similarly, a horse power is able to raise twice that weight one foot in twice the time, or one-half foot in just that time. Moreover, it can raise half 550 pounds one foot in half a second, or two feet in a second, and so on. Therefore when we lift one-fourth of that weight, 137⅛ pounds, four feet in one second, we are exerting a horse power. Accordingly, when a person who weighs 137⅛ pounds runs upstairs at the rate of four feet a second, he is exerting the equivalent of a horse power. For a man weighing twice that much, 275 pounds, it would be necessary to climb at the rate of only two feet a second to exert a horse power. It is possible to do much more. As a matter of fact, a horse often exerts many times a horse power. The average horse can draw a wagon up a hill where a ten horse power engine with the same load would fail. A horse power does not represent the greatest momentary strength of the average horse, but is a measure of the power which he can exert continuously.

Defense Against Gas.

The Optician, an English publication, points out that the radical way of dealing with the lethal gas which the Germans are launching against the allied troops, so as to obtain an atmosphere which, although injurious, would not be fatal, is by the use of steam sprays, to produce the effect of projecting a heavy shower of rain. Steam power has the advantage over pneumatic power, etc., that no motors and other machines are needed. Bromine is soluble and chlorine soluble in water; and any of the known artifices for drenching the atmosphere is, therefore, a method of defense.

Job for Amateur Astronomers.

A persistent idea is that the moon is a dead planet, without air, water, and vegetation, but a different view is held by no less an authority than Prof. W. H. Pickering. For more than twenty years he has recognized evidence of the existence of vegetation on the moon. The vitality of the impression that our satellite is lifeless is attributed to the fact that observers through a telescope usually give attention to the regions near the terminator, or edge of illumination, and what is seen is easily understood. The really interesting parts of the surface, however, are far from the terminator, in the regions of lunar summer. It is in these that changes are taking place, and they are conspicuous even in telescopes of moderate capacity. Prof. Pickering suggests that the amateur may render valuable service to science by recording and publishing accurate observations, with drawings, so that the changes may be gradually traced out.

Germany Has Tire Problem.

A prize of $25,000 has been offered by the German government for a satisfactory process of regenerating rubber. It is not merely a reclaiming process that is desired, but a real regenerating process. The resiliency of the original rubber must be regained to an extent of at least 90 per cent in order to make the process eligible for competition. The tire problem is beginning to worry the army authorities, and negotiations are said to be pending with the manufacturer of a well known fiber tire, of the tension type, which is expected to solve the difficulty of obtaining rubber for pneumatics in sufficient quantity for army needs.

Interesting Boys

A BOY AVIATOR.

ABOUT two years ago a timid, slender youth of 16 years of age was often seen about the aviation field at Cicero, Ill., flying model aeroplanes. A year later found this boy flying his models better than any other boy student of aviation in the world. He could make the little models do all sorts of uncanny stunts, and he was busy finding out just how and why they did them.

This year this boy is flying a real man carrying machine which he has designed, built, paid for, and learned to operate himself, unaided. The boy in the story is Emil Laird. Young Laird did this on his salary as an employé of a Chicago bank. He was rather carefully economical, and by the time he was ready to fly a plane he found he could afford one.

Laird has built a tractor type biplane—which means that the propeller is set ahead of the machine, exerting tractive or drawing power instead of pushing, as do the propellers on the more common type of American machine. Laird's machine is rather small and very light. It is said to be capable of a speed of about sixty miles an hour, which is doing well for a biplane.

The young aviator's first flight was something of a surprise among the skeptics and "wise ones" about the Cicero field. He made the final inspection, climbed aboard, and was off. The machine took the air a bare hundred feet from the starting point, a testimonial to the efficiency of its design and the skill of the flyer. The boy went on away into the sky and left the scoffers gasping at his remarkable control of the machine.

Now he is a full fledged aviator. One thing is a certainty—he knows his machine. The defense of the country might make a corps of such young men highly important some day.

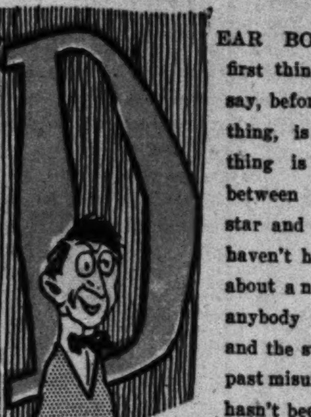
HIS LETTERS
QUIN HALL



DEAR BOBS: The first thing I want to say, before I say anything, is that everything is still lovely between the little star and myself. We haven't had a quarrel about anything or anybody for a week, and the subject of our past misunderstanding hasn't been mentioned once. I heard that the lady had visited the studio one day, but Miss Leslie and I were out in the country trying to get a pastoral scene for a three reel now under way.

Finny has been working us hard lately. There has been no time for anything but work all week, and when night came everybody was glad to beat it and get to the hay without any preliminary meanderings among the bright lights.

By the way, Bobs, there isn't as much of the latter aforesaid among our set—the movie folks in general, I mean—as seems to be the more or less common supposition. This job a job, no[illegible] a place to make a reputation that will draw a full hand of mash notes with every mail.

Take the pastoral scene I spoke of [illegible] on page one. It'll look to the people out front like it must have been something pretty soft for the personnel that made up that cast,

"My mail is increasing every day." including yours as ever. But tell 'em, Bobs, that that's all wrong. Nothing like it, nothing whatsoever.

Finny said on Monday afternoon: "Motor cars will be waiting at 5 a. m. in the morning. Everybody be here in rube outfit. Eight miles in the country. Get your breakfast some time tonight."

We answered the summons all right—everybody dressed for hay making; but the sun wasn't going to shine that day, and the rain began to fall as we were about to step into the cars.

Finny said stick around a while, and we did. I might say here that sticking around means doing nothing, and this to a temperamental bunchful of artists was the hardest kind of work.

By 10 o'clock things looked brighter, but it was too late for the back to the land stunt, so we had to change our makeup for studio work. The farm work was to be attempted the following day.

I may say while I am saying it, old chap, that the morning had not been as tedious to me as to some, for a part of it was spent sitting on a box in a secluded corner of the works with my beloved beside me.

We repeated our early morning stunt on Wednesday, except that there was no rain this time, and we put in a long, hard day before the camera out in the country.

So, my dear boy, don't get the notion that it's all play hereabouts.

My mail is increasing every week and I guess I am getting about as much as the next fellow in my line. The size of our mail is something we like to boast about, because, you know, it shows how popular we are and makes us just that much stronger with the management—strength meaning salary and salary meaning many nice things, like the pretty bungalow Miss Leslie and I are planning to own in the not far distant future.

"Everything is still lovely between the little star and myself."

There are some other ways I could use that salary, too. A good many people whom I never heard of before write to ask the favor of a loan to tide them over an unexpected financial stringency. Then the other kinds of charity propositions that come rolling in with the daily mail—Jerusalem! You wouldn't believe the nerve of some folks. They ask me to come across for everything from a public library to tickets for the circus.

One man wrote me he wanted to build up a private library in his home and asked if I wouldn't like to slip him a check for about half of the 3,000 volumes he hoped to stock up with. As he inclosed a stamped and self-addressed envelope I did take the trouble to reply that I would feel honored to do so but I needed the money.

The wife of a New England farmer and mother of five wrote me that a circus was coming and the family saw no way of getting under the big tent unless I sent the price. She said she had seen me in the movies and knew by my kind face that I wouldn't refuse happiness to anybody. I almost fell for that one, but Finny said chuck it and play the races if I wanted to get rid of my dividends in a hurry. Finny hasn't much heart—he's a director. As ever,

JIM.

Robert Warwick

ROBERT WARWICK, or "Bob" as he is known to his intimate friends, is a product of the west. Music was the first art which attracted him and he studied singing in Europe, but his voice "went back on him" and he returned to the stage and met with great success. After acting on the "legitimate" stage for a number of years, he accepted an offer from the World Film corporation, and made his debut on the screen in "The Man of the Hour." He made a wonderful success of it, and has also appeared in "The Dollar Mark," "Alias Jimmy Valentine," and "The Man Who Found Himself." He loves his work and is conscientious and thorough in his impersonations. He is not married.

IN MOVIE LAND.

WRITES a Chicago movie fan who is at present 'way out west: "I'm having a glorious time at the studios. Meeting all the people I hoped I'd meet some day. Please print this:

"Marguerite Snow and Baby Julie are nicely settled in a cute Hollywood bungalow awaiting the arrival of 'Big Jim' Cruze." (He's touring to the coast with Sidney Bracey, from New Rochelle, you remember?) "It's evident that Julie will be a famous singer—witness her rendering of 'Rock-a-Bye, Baby.'

"Francis X. Bushman, plus purple auto, purple socks, purple ring, purple smoking jacket and aviary, is finally settled near the Quality studio of the Metro company.

"At a recent vaudeville performance given by movie stars for St. Catherine's church of Los Angeles Fred Mace, Roscoe Arbuckle, Charles ('Hogan') Murray, and Bob Albright did a 'quartet act' which resulted in 'Fatty' falling into the footlights and breaking most of the bulbs.

"Handsome 'Wally' Reid has finished Carmen and Mona Lisa with Geraldine Farrar and is now working on a third picture, still playing the lead for the famous diva."

Walker Whiteside is going out on the road this fall in opposition to himself—the object being to discover whether or not appearing on the screen is detrimental to a stage artist's drawing power. Last spring Mr. Whiteside appeared in a screen version of "The Melting Pot." This season he will be stage starred in "The Ragged Messenger," a John Cort production.

Colin Campbell, who plays the part of the flying Scotchman in the new Lubin five act comedy, "Tillie's Tomato Surprise," in which Marie Dressler, Tom McNaughton, Sarah McVicar, and others will be featured, has not been long in this country. He arrived on a Saturday morning and promptly walked up Broadway to see the big buildings. At Forty-second street a painter dropped a can of paint on his head, and when the English actor came to he found five or six stitches in his scalp and his name in all the papers. A few days later, when convalescing in his hotel, the clerk notified him that a detective from police headquarters desired to see him. The sleuth was ushered upstairs and then began a third degree.

"Your name is Colin Campbell?" queried the New York Sherlock Holmes.

"Y-y-es, sir," said the trembling Campbell, not knowing what was coming next, although his conscience was absolutely clear.

"You are Scotch?" asked the detective, and in the face of his Scottish accent Campbell could not say nay.

"That is all," said the detective. "I want you for bigamy," and it took Campbell a full hour to convince the detective that he was not the Colin Campbell who was wanted for deceiving two trusting, unsophisticated, and, of course, beautiful maidens.

ANSWERS TO MOVIE FANS.

TESS—So far as I know, Florence Lawrence has not returned to pictures. Richard Travers is suing for divorce. I do not believe Wally Van is married. Your votes were received and recorded.

A KERRIGAN FAN—So glad you enjoy the Right Off the Reel page. Thank you for telling me that you do. Blanche Sweet is a little over 5 feet tall. Address Warren Kerrigan, care of the Universal company, Universal City, Cal.; Earl Williams, care of the Vitagraph company, East Fifteenth street and Locust avenue, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Owen Moore in care of the Keystone company, 1712 Allesandro street, Los Angeles, Cal.

K. E. D.—"Swedie's" real name is Wallace Beery. Charles Chaplin is not married. Beatriz Michalena is an American. She was born in California.

PATHE: Matt Moore is not married. Regarding the others you mention I cannot say.

WORRIED WIDOW—No, indeed, the fact that you received printed material on scenario writing would not bar you from entering into the $10,000 sequel contest. One thousand words is the limit. You may have less if you wish to. If you will send me a stamped envelope I shall send you conditions covering this contest. I think this will answer satisfactorily all the questions you have asked me.

R. H.—Yes, Elmer Booth was killed in an automobile accident a short time ago.

ELEVEN YEAR OLD—I love to get letters from 11 year olds. I think the girl you are referring to is Edna Purviance. I believe both Marguerite Snow and Florence La Badie answer letters. Be sure to inclose stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply when writing. No trouble at all. Write again sometime.

D. R. C.: I'm glad you've come back again, Drusilla. It's always nice to receive a letter in familiar handwriting. Since the only thing on your mind is the fear that Joe Tinker is an actor, please let me put you at rest once and for all. He is not.

A. M. D.—Address Ruth Roland in care of the Pathé Frères, 1 Congress street, Jersey City Heights, N. J. No, I never get tired.

C. E. O.—No, indeed, I am forbidden. Cleo Madison is not married. Address Kathlyn Williams in care of the Universal company, Universal City, Cal.

M. C.—I am vurr' sorry, but as you did not mention the name of the company that produced the picture you are interested in, I am unable to give you the information you desire. Nope, don't give no "dope" about myself.

H. E. K.—No, Warren Kerrigan is not married. Lottie Pickford played in lots of other pictures besides "The Diamond from the Sky." I believe she is in her early twenties. No, I do not think you are silly. You're welcome.

M. R. E.—If you will send a self addressed, stamped envelope, I will be glad to send you the information I have on "Photoplay Acting."

MATTY—A letter addressed to D. W. Griffith, care of Mutual company, 4500 Sunset boulevard, Los Angeles, Cal., will reach him.

B. F. M.—If you will send a self addressed, stamped envelope, I shall be glad to give you the information you wish.

BLUE EYES—I have not heard that James Cruze and his wife started across the continent in an automobile. "Under False Colors" is a two reel production. Florence La Badie takes the part of "Nary." No, it is not a serial. Arline Pretty is now with the Vitagraph company. Your vote was recorded.

MARY ESTHER—Francis X. Bushman says he is not married. His middle name is Xavier. Yes, vurr' good. Dorothy Phillips played the part of "Sunshine" in "Tempest and Sunshine."

GOODIE: Hello yourself. Gene Gauntier is with the Universal company. Yes, the picture of James Cruze has appeared in the "Frame" several times. Sometimes.

BROWNIE—I am sorry, but I have no information regarding the actress you mention. If you will write to Mary Pickford in care of the Famous Players company, 213 West Twenty-sixth street, New York, inclosing 25 cents with your request for her picture, I am sure she will send it to you. No trouble at all.

INEZ, ANNA MARIE, AND LORETTA: Bess um hearts! I don't exactly blame you for being wild over Earle Williams. He is certainly vurr' vurr' much there as to looks. In answer to your questions the young man was born in Sacramento—I always missed that word in spelling tests—California, on February 28th, 1880. At present he lives in New York. He is single-ly blessed so far as I know. No, Anita Stewart and Julia Swayne Gordon are not related. Y'wekkum.

GABY H.: Such a nice letter! Thank you. I have heard nothing recently regarding Gaby. Yes, John Bunny is dead. I don't know whether or not Mr. Hall answers letters, but you might try him and see. Be sure to inclose a stamped and self-addressed envelope for his reply.

FUZZY WUZZY: The fact that your turned up nose doesn't take a good picture is not a sure sign that you could not be a movie actress. Makeup worketh wonders you know. Mr. Wallace Beery plays the part of "Swedie." No, he is not a "regular" hired girl. A name for a club of seven, two of which have had photoplay comedies accepted? Let's see. How about the Two-Com'-Seven? I think that's a grand name. No, I am not a Hollander—wurra, wurra!

MISS GARDNER: In the Essanay production, "The Profligate," Ruth Stonehouse took the part of the artist. You're vurr' welcome.

B. F. H.: Any scripts submitted in the $10,000 contest that the American company thinks available will be accepted and paid for at regular market rates. No manuscripts, however, will be returned. No trouble at all.

ETHEL: I don't know his age, Ethel, but his picture has not as yet appeared in the "Frame." Dost wish it would?

A PILGRIM by ROB

"She Had Married Her Husband Out of Awe, Sheer Awe for His Wonderful Personality. And He Was Wonderful; Faultless In Everything—Though Not So Faultless As to Be In Bad Taste, She Often Told Herself."

THE servants had gathered in the front hall to inspect the new arrival—cook, kitchen maid, butler, flanked on the right by parlor maids, on the left by a footman and a small buttons.

The new arrival was a snow white bull terrier, alert, ardent, quivering in expectation of a welcome among these strangers, madly wagging his whiplike tail in passionate silence.

When the mistress of the house at last came down the great stone stairway the servants fell back in a semi-circle, leaving her face to face with the white bull terrier.

"So that is the dog!" she said, in faint astonishment. A respectful murmur of assent corroborated her conclusion.

The dog's eyes met hers; she turned to the servants with a perplexed gesture.

"Is the brougham at the door?" asked the young mistress of the house.

The footman signified that it was.

"Then tell Phelan to come here at once."

Phelan, the coachman, arrived, large, rosy, freshly shaven, admirably correct.

"Phelan," said the young mistress, "look at that dog."

The coachman promptly fixed his eyes on the wagging bull terrier. In spite of his decorous gravity a smile of distinct pleasure slowly spread over his square, pink face until it became a subdued simper.

"Is that a well bred dog, Phelan?" demanded the young mistress.

"It is, ma'am," replied Phelan promptly.

"Very well bred?"

"Very, ma'am."

"Dangerous?"

"In a fight, ma'am." Stifled enthusiasm swelled the veins in the coachman's forehead. Triumphant pæans of praise for the bull terrier trembled upon his lips; but he stood rigid, correct, a martyr to his perfect training.

"Say what you wish to say, Phelan," prompted the young mistress, with a hasty glance at the dog.

"Thanky, ma'am. . . . The bull is the finest I ever laid eyes on. . . . He hasn't a blemish, ma'am; and the three years of him doubled will leave him three years to his prime, ma'am. . . . And there's never another bull, nor a screw tail, nor cross, be it mastiff or fox or whippet, ma'am, that can loose the holt o' thim twin jaws. . . . Beg pardon, ma'am, I know the dog."

"You mean that you have seen that dog before?"

"Yes, ma'am; he won his class from a pup at the Garden. That is 'His Highness,' ma'am, Mr. Langham's champion three-year."

She had already stooped to caress the silent, eager dog—timidly, because she had never before owned a dog—but at the mention of his master's name she drew back sharply and stood erect.

"Never fear, ma'am," said the coachman eagerly. He won't bite, ma'am——"

"Mr. Langham's dog?" she repeated coldly; and then, without another glance at either the dog or the coachman, she turned to the front door; buttons swung it wide with infantile dignity; a moment later she was in her brougham, with Phelan on the box and the rigid footman expectant at the window.

Seated in a corner of her brougham, she saw the world pass on flashing wheels along the asphalt; she saw the April sunshine slanting across brown stone mansion and the glass fronted façades of shops;. . . . she looked without seeing.

So Langham had sent her his dog! In the first year of her widowhood she had first met Langham; she was then 21. In the second year of her widowhood Langham had offered himself, and, with the declaration on his lips, had seen the utter hopelessness of his offer. They had not met since then. And now, in the third year of her widowhood, he offered her his dog!

She had at first intended to keep the dog. Knowing nothing of animals, discouraged from all sporting fads by a husband who himself was devoted to animals dedicated to sport, she had quietly acquiesced in her husband's dictum that "horsewomen and dogwomen made a man ill!"—and so dismissed any idea she might have entertained toward the harboring of the four footed.

A miserable consciousness smote her: why had she allowed the memory of her husband to fade so amazingly in these last two months of early spring? Of late, when she wished to fix her thoughts upon her late husband and to conjure his face before her closed eyes, she found that the mental apparition came with more and more difficulty.

Sitting in a corner of her brougham, the sharp rhythm of her horses' hoofs tuning her thoughts, she quietly endeavored to raise that cherished mental specter, but could not, until by hazard she remembered the portrait of her husband hanging in the smoking room.

But instantly she strove to put that away; the portrait was by Sargent, a portrait she had always disliked, because the great painter had painted an expression into her husband's face which she had never seen there. An aged and unbearable acquaintance of hers had declared that Sargent painted beneath the surface; she resented the suggestion, because what she read beneath the surface of her husband's portrait sent hot blood into her face.

Thinking of these things, she saw the spring sunshine gilding the gray branches of the park trees. Here and there elms spread tinted with green; chestnuts and maples were already in the full glory of new leaves; the leafless twisted tangles of wistaria hung thick with scented purple bloom; everywhere the scarlet blossoms of the Japanese quince glowed on naked shrubs, bedded in green lawns.

Her husband had loved the country. . . . There was one spot in the world which he had loved above all others—the Sagamore Angling club. She had never been there. But she meant to go. Probably tomorrow. . . . And before she went she must send that dog back to Langham.

At the cathedral she signaled to stop and sent the brougham back, saying she would walk home. And the first man she met was Langham.

There was nothing extraordinary in it. His club was there on the corner, and it was exactly his hour for the club.

"It is so very fortunate . . . for me," he said. "I did want to see you. . . . I am going north tomorrow."

"Of course it's about the dog," she said pleasantly.

He laughed. "I am so glad that you will accept him——"

"But I can't," she said; ". . . And thank you so much for asking me."

For a moment his expression touched her, but she could not permit expressions of men's faces to arouse her compunction, so she turned her eyes resolutely ahead toward the spire of the marble church.

He walked beside her in silence.

"I also am going north tomorrow," she said politely.

He did not answer.

Every day since her widowhood, every day for three years, she had decided to make that pilgrimage . . . some time. And now, crossing Union square on that lovely afternoon late in April, she knew that the time had come. Not that there was any reason for haste. . . . At the vague thought her brown eyes rested a moment on the tall young man beside her. . . .

Yes . . . she would go . . . tomorrow.

A vender of violets shuffled up beside them; Langham picked up a dewy bundle of blossoms, and their perfume seemed to saturate the air till it tasted on the tongue.

She shook her head. "No, no, please; the fragrance is too heavy." . . .

"Won't you accept them?" he inquired bluntly.

Again she shook her head; there was indecision in the smile, assent in the gesture. However, he perceived neither.

She took a short step forward. The wind whipped the fountain jet, and a fanlike cloud of spray drifted off across the asphalt. Then they moved on together.

Presently she said quietly, "I believe I will carry a bunch of those violets," and she waited for him to go back through the fountain spray, find the peddler, and rummage among the perfumed heaps in the basket. "Because," she added cheerfully, as he returned with the flowers, "I am going to the East Tenth street mission, and I meant to take some flowers anyway."

"If you would keep that cluster and let me send the whole basket to your mission——" he began.

But she had already started on across the wet pavement.

"I did not know you were going to give my flowers to those cripples," he said, keeping pace with her.

"Do you mind?" she asked, but she had not meant to say that, and she walked a little more quickly to escape the quick reply.

"I want to ask you something," he said after a moment's brisk walking. "I wish—if you don't mind—I wish you would walk around the square with me—just once——"

"Certainly not," she said; "and now you will say good-by—because you are going away, you say." She had stopped at the Fourth avenue edge of the square. "So good-by, and thank you for the beautiful dog and for the violets."

"But you won't keep the dog and you won't keep the violets," he said; "and besides if you are going north——"

"Good-by," she repeated, smiling.

"——besides," he went on, "I would like to know where you are going."

"That," she said, "is what I do not wish to tell you—or anybody."

There was a brief silence; the charm of her bent head distracted him.

"If you won't go," she said, with caprice, "I will walk once around the square with you, but it is the silliest thing I have ever done in my entire life."

"Why won't you keep the bull terrier?" he asked humbly.

"Because I'm going north—for one reason."

"Couldn't you take His Highness?"

"No—that is, I could, but—I can't explain—he would distract me."

"Shall I take him back then?"

"Why?" she demanded, surprised.

The LETTER DROPPED from HER YIELDING HAND

"I—only I thought if you did not care for him," he stammered. "You see, I love the dog."

She bit her lip and bent her eyes on the ground. Again he quickened his pace to keep step with her.

"You see," he said, searching about for the right phrase, "I wanted you to have something that I could venture to offer you—er—something not valuable—er—I mean not—er——"

"Your dog is a very valuable champion; everybody knows that," she said carelessly.

"O, yes—he's a corker in his line; out of Empress, by Ameer, you know——"

"I might manage . . . to keep him . . . for a while," she observed without enthusiasm. "At all events, I shall tie my violets to his collar."

He watched her; the roar of Broadway died out in his ears; in hers it grew, increasing, louder, louder. A dim scene rose unbidden before her eyes—the high gloom of a cathedral, the great organ's first unsteady throbbing—her wedding march! No, not that; for while she stood, coldly transfixed in centered self-absorption, she seemed to see a shapeless mass of wreathes piled in the twilight of an altar—the dreadful pomp and panoply and circumstance of death——

She raised her eyes to the man beside her; her whole being vibrated with the menace of a dirge, and in the roar of traffic around her she divined the imprisoned thunder of the organ pealing for her dead.

She turned her head sharply toward the west.

"What is it?" he asked in the voice of a man who needs no answer to his question.

She kept her head steadily turned. Through Fifteenth street the sun poured a red light that deepened as the mist rose from the docks. She heard the river whistles blowing; an electric light broke out through the bay haze.

It was true she was thinking of her husband—thinking of him almost desperately, distressed that already he should have become to her nothing more vital than a memory.

Unconscious of the man beside her, she stood there in the red glow, straining eyes and memory to focus both on a past that receded and seemed to dwindle to a point of utter vacancy.

Then her husband's face grew out of vacancy, so real, so living, that she started—to find herself walking slowly past the fountain with Langham at her side.

After a moment she said: "Now we have walked all around the square. Now I am going to walk home; . . . and thank you . . . for my walk, . . . which was probably as wholesome a performance as I could have indulged in—and quite unconventional enough, even for you."

They faced about and traversed the square, crossed Broadway in silence, passed through the kindling shadows of the long cross street, and turned into Fifth avenue.

"You are very silent," she said, sorry at once that she had said it, uncertain as to the trend his speech might follow, and withal curious.

"It was only about that dog," he said.

She wondered if it was exactly that, and decided it was not. It was not. He was thinking of her husband as he had known him—only by sight and by report. He remembered the florid gentleman perfectly; he had often seen him tooling his four; he had seen him at the traps in Monte Carlo, dividing with the best shot in Italy; he had seen him riding to hounds a few days before that fatal run of the Shadowbrook hunt, where he had taken his last fence. Once, too, he had seen him at the Sagamore Angling club up state.

"When are you going?" he asked suddenly.

"Tomorrow."

"I am not to know where?"

"Why should you?" and then, a little quickly: "No, no. It is a pilgrimage."

"When you return——" he began, but she shook her head.

"No, . . . no. I do not know where I may be."

In the April twilight the electric lamps along the avenue snapped alight. The air rang with the metallic chatter of sparrows.

They mounted the steps of her house; she turned and swept the dim avenue with a casual glance.

"So you, too, are going north?" she asked pleasantly.

"Yes—tonight."

She gave him her hand. She felt the pressure of his hand on her gloved fingers after he had gone, although their hands had scarcely touched at all.

And so she went into the dimly lighted house, through the drawing room, which was quite dark, into the music room beyond; and there she sat down upon a chair by the piano—a little gilded chair that revolved as she pushed herself idly, now to the right, now to the left.

Yes, . . . after all, she would go; . . . she would make that pilgrimage to the spot on earth her husband loved best of all—the sweet waters of the Sagamore, where his beloved club lodge stood, and whither, for a month every year, he had repaired with some old friends to renew a bachelor's love for angling.

She had never accompanied him on these trips; she instinctively divined a man's desire for a ramble among old haunts with old friends, freed for a brief space from the happy burdens of domesticity.

The lodge on the Sagamore was now her shrine; there she would rest and think of him, follow his footsteps to his best loved haunts, wander along the rivers where he had wandered, dream by the streams where he had dreamed.

She had married her husband out of awe sheer awe for his wonderful personality. And he was wonderful; faultless in everything—though not so faultless as to be in bad taste, she often told herself. His entourage also was faultless; and the general faultlessness of everything had made her married life perfect.

As she sat thinking in the darkened music room something stirred in the hallway outside. She raised her eyes; the white bull terrier stood in the lighted doorway, looking in at her.

A perfectly incomprehensible and resistless rush of loneliness swept her to her feet; in a moment she was down on the floor again, on her silken knees, her arms around the dog, her head pressed tightly to his head.

"O," she said, choking, "I must go tomorrow—I must—I must. . . . And here are the violets; . . . I will tie them to your collar. . . . Hold still! . . . He loved you; . . . but you shall not have them—do you hear? . . . No, no, . . . for I shall wear them, . . . for I like their odor; . . . and, anyway, . . . I am going away." . . .

The next day she began her pilgrimage, and His Highness went with her, and a maid from the British isles.

She had telegraphed to the Sagamore club for rooms, to make sure, but that was unnecessary, because there were at the moment only three members of the club at the lodge.

Now, although she herself could scarcely be considered a member of the Sagamore Angling club, she still controlled her husband's shares in the concern, and she was duly and impressively welcomed by the steward. Two of the three members domiciled there came up to pay their respects when she alighted from the muddy buckboard sent to the railway to meet her; they were her husband's old friends, Col. Hyssop and Maj. Brent, white haired, purple faced, well groomed gentlemen in the early 60s.

The third member was out in the rain fishing somewhere downstream.

"New man here, madam—a good fellow, but a bad rod—eh, Brent?"

"Bad rod," repeated Maj. Brent, wagging his fat head. "Uses ferrules to a six ounce rod. We splice—eh, colonel?"

"Certainly," said the colonel.

She stood by the open fire in the center of the hallway, holding her shapely hands out toward the blaze, while her maid relieved her of the wet raincoat.

"Splice what, Col. Hyssop, if you please?" she inquired, smiling.

"Splice our rods, madam—no creaky joints and ferrules for old hands like Maj. Brent and me, ma'am. Do you throw a fly?"

"O, no," she said, with a faint smile. "I—I do nothing."

"Except to remain the handsomest woman in the five boroughs!" said the major, with a futile attempt to bend at the waist—utterly unsuccessful, yet impressive.

Again she looked up into her husband's face over the mantel.

Her bull terrier came trotting into the hall, his polished nails and padded feet beating a patter across the hardwood floor.

"I shall dine in my own rooms this evening," she said, smiling vaguely at the approaching dog.

"We hoped to welcome you to the club table," cried the major.

"There are only the major and myself," added the colonel, with courteous entreaty.

"And the other—the new man," corrected the major, with a wry face.

"O, yes—the bad rod. What's his name?"

"Langham," said the major.

The English maid came down to conduct her mistress to her rooms; the two gentlemen bowed as their build permitted; the bull terrier trotted behind his mistress up the polished stairs. Presently a door closed above.

"Devilish fine woman," said Maj. Brent.

Col. Hyssop went to a mirror and examined himself with close attention.

"Good gad!" he said irriitably. "How thin my hair is!"

"Thin!" said Maj. Brent, with an unpleasant laugh. "Thin as the hair on a Mexican poodle."

"You infernal ass!" hissed the colonel, and waddled off to dress for dinner. At the door he paused. "Better have no hair than a complexion like a violet."

"What's that?" cried the major.

The colonel slammed the door.

Upstairs the bull terrier lay on a rug watching his mistress with tireless eyes. The maid brought tea, bread and butter, and trout fried crisp, for her mistress desired nothing else.

Left alone, she leaned back, sipping her tea, listening to the million tiny voices of the night. The stillness of the country made her nervous after the clatter of town. Nervous? Was it the tranquil stillness of the night outside that stirred that growing apprehension in her breast till, of a sudden, her heart began a deadened throbbing?

Langham here? What was he doing here? He must have arrived this morning. So that was where he was going when he said he was going north?

After all, in what did it concern her? She had not run away from town to avoid him, . . . indeed not, . . . her pilgrimage was her own affair. And Langham would quickly divine her pious impulse in coming here. . . . And he would doubtless respect her for it. . . . Perhaps have the subtle tact to pack up his traps and leave. . . . But probably not. . . . She knew a little about Langham, . . . an obstinate and typical man, . . . doubtless selfish to the core, . . . cheerfully, naively selfish. . . .

She raised her troubled eyes. Over the door was printed in gilt letters:

The President's Suite.

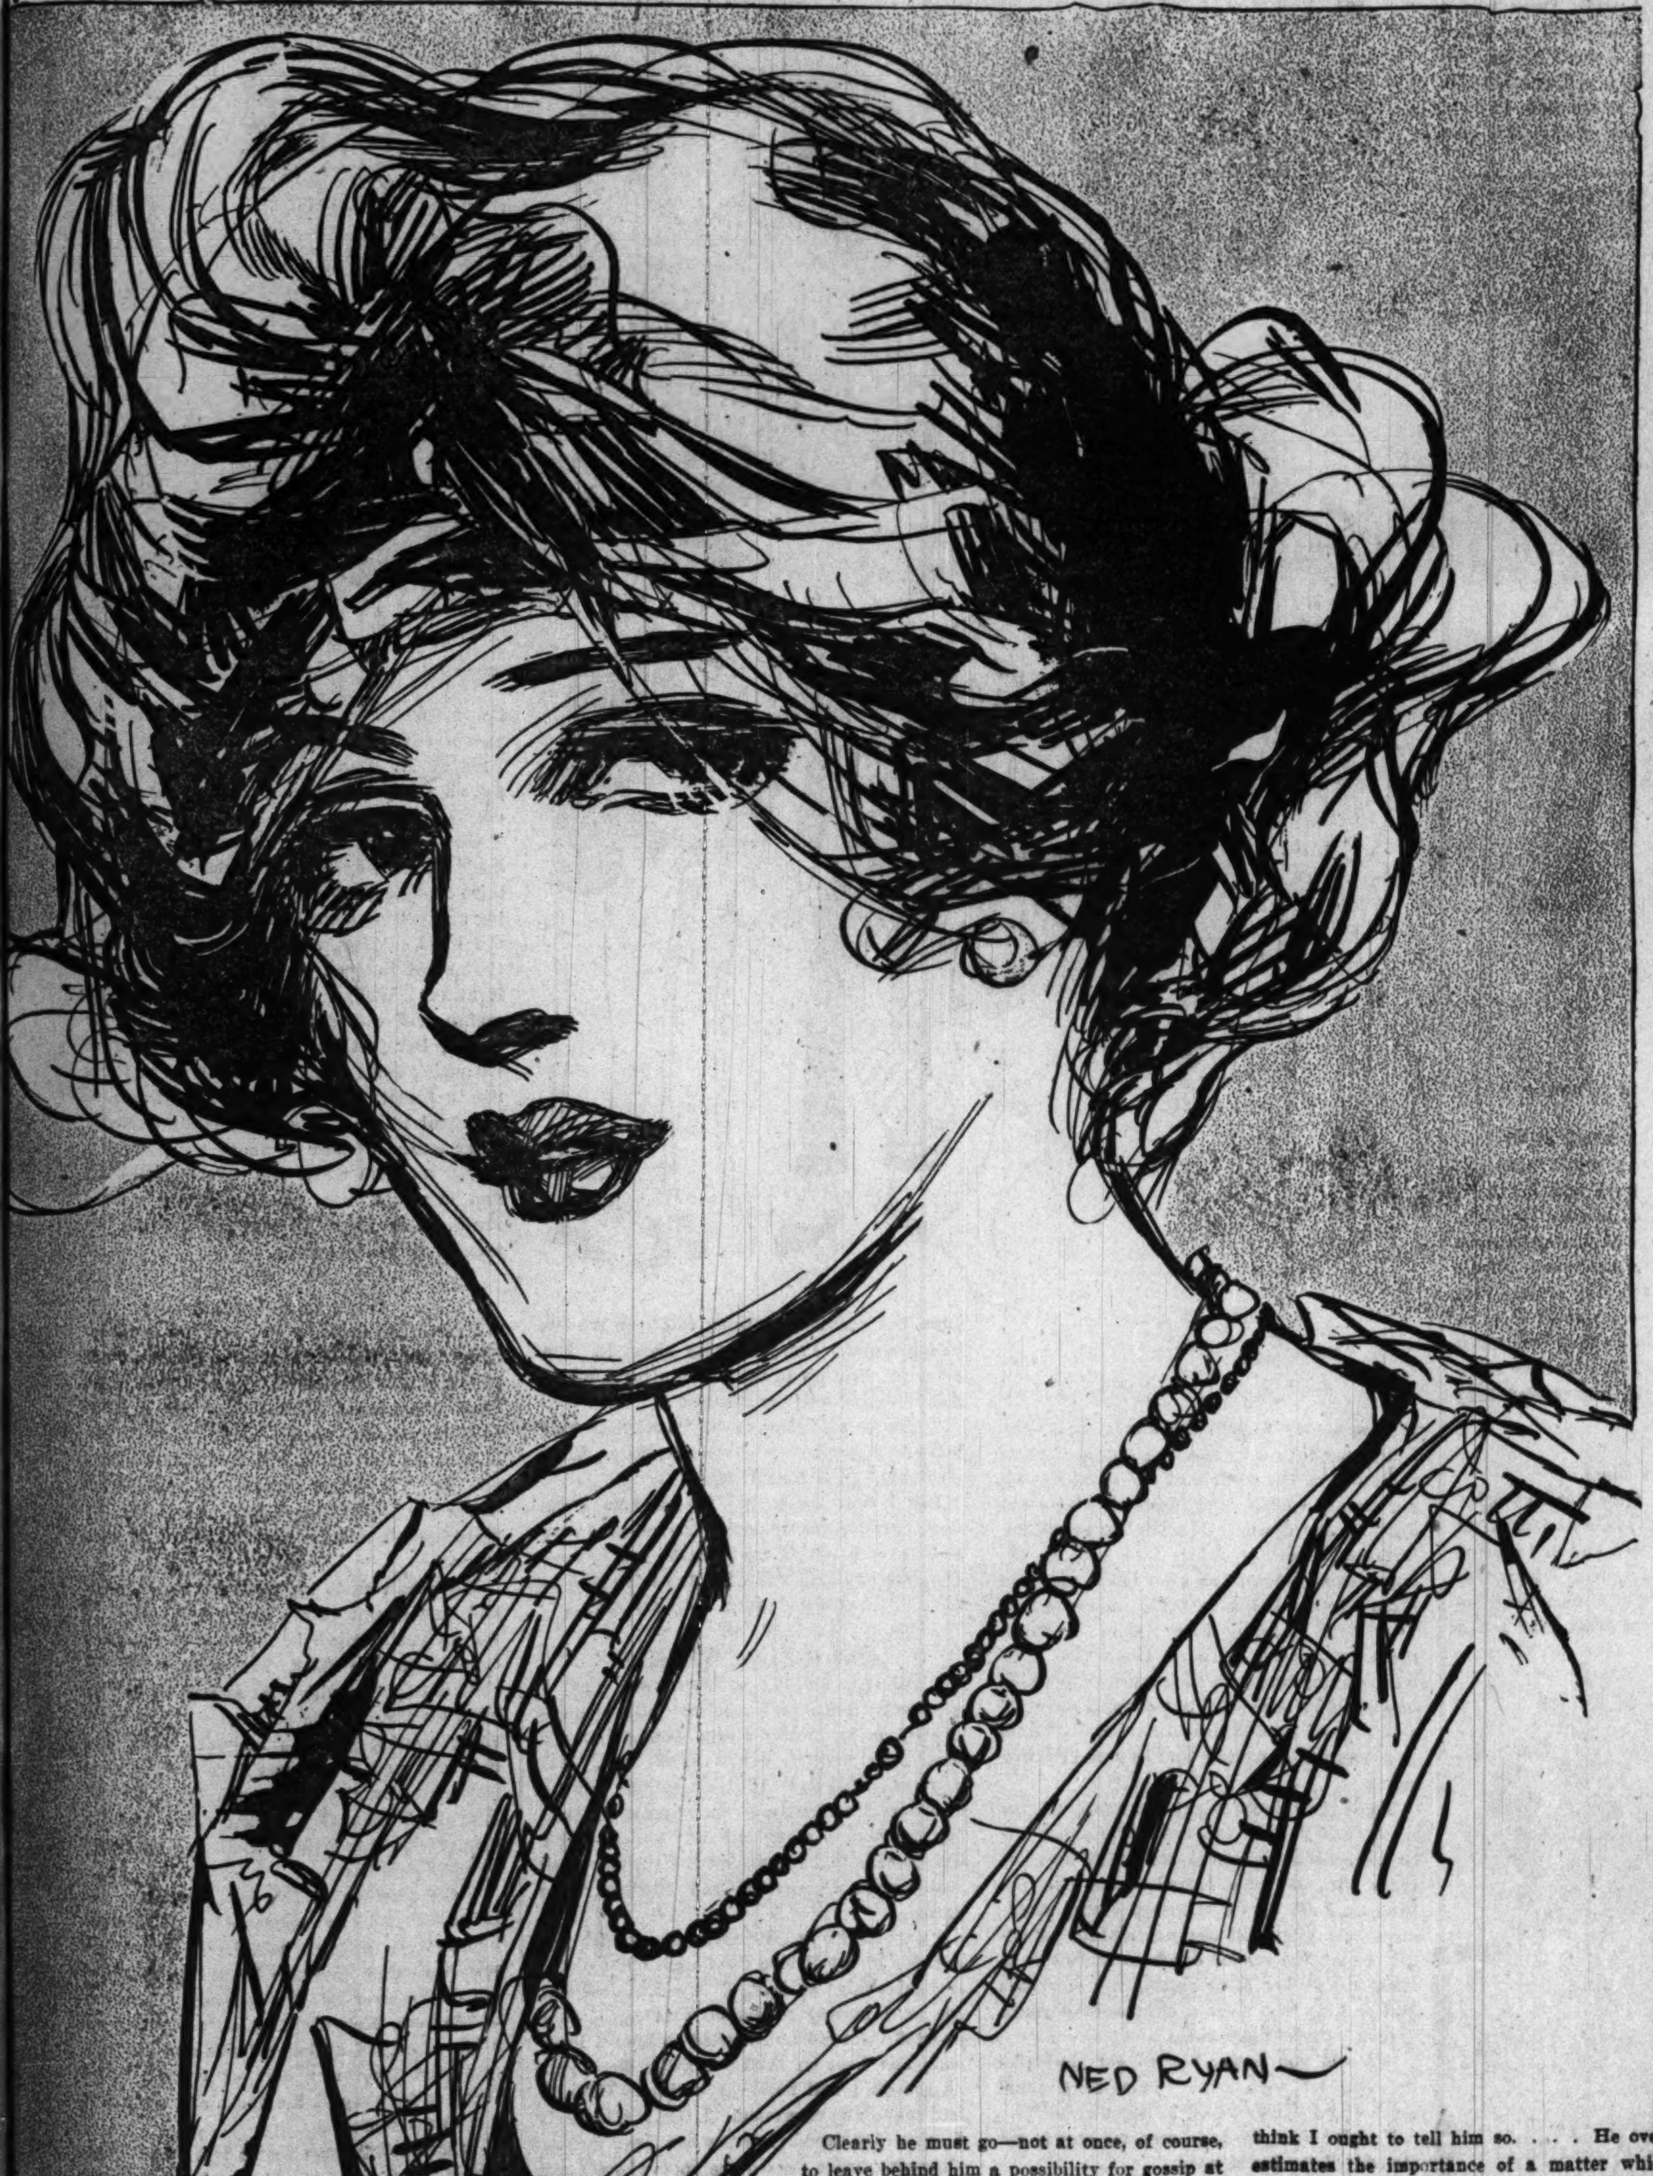
Tears filled her eyes; truly they were kindly and thoughtful, these old friends of her husband.

And all night long she slept in the room of her late husband, the president of the Sagamore Angling club, and dreamed till daybreak of . . . Langham.

Langham, clad in tweeds from head to foot, sat on the edge of his bed.

He had been sitting there since daybreak, and the expression on his ornamental face had varied between the blank and the idiotic. That the only woman in the world had miraculously appeared at Sagamore lodge he had heard from Col. Hyssop and Maj. Brent at dinner the evening before.

That she already knew of his presence there he could not doubt. That she did not desire his presence he was fearsomely persuaded.



Clearly he must go—not at once, of course, to leave behind him a possibility for gossip at his abrupt departure. From the tongues of infants and well fed clubmen, good Lord deliver us!

He must go. Meanwhile he could easily avoid her.

And as he sat there, savoring all the pent up bitterness poured out for him by destiny, there came a patter of padded feet in the hallway, the scrape of nails, a sniff at the doorsill, a whine, a frantic scratching. He leaned forward and opened the door. His Highness landed on the bed with one hysterical yelp and fell upon Langham, paw and muzzle.

When their affection had been temporarily satiated the dog lay down on the bed, eyes riveted on his late master, and the man went over to his desk, drew a sheet of club paper toward him, found a pen, and wrote:

"Of course it is an unhappy coincidence, and I will go when I can do so decently—tomorrow morning. Meanwhile I shall be away all day fishing the West Branch, and shall return too late to dine at the club table.

"I wish you a happy sojourn here——"

This he reread and scratched out.

"I am glad you kept His Highness."

This he also scratched out.

After a while he signed his name to the note, sealed it, and stepped into the hallway.

At the farther end of the passage the door of her room was ajar; a sunlit-scarlet curtain hung inside.

"Come here!" said Langham to the dog.

His Highness came with a single leap.

"Take it to . . . her," said the man under his breath. Then he turned sharply, picked up rod and creel, and descended the stairs.

Meanwhile His Highness entered his mistress' chamber, with a polite scratch as a "by your leave!" and trotted up to her, holding out the note in his pink mouth.

She looked at the dog in astonishment. Then the handwriting on the envelope caught her eye.

As she did not offer to touch the missive, His Highness presently sat down and crowded up against her knees. Then he laid the letter in her lap.

Her expression became inscrutable as she picked up the letter; while she was reading it there was color in her cheeks; after she had read it there was less.

"I see no necessity," she said to His Highness—"I see no necessity for his going. I think I ought to tell him so. . . . He overestimates the importance of a matter which does not concern him. . . . He is sublimely self-conscious, . . . a typical man. And if he presumes to believe that the hazard of our encounter is of the slightest moment . . . to me . . . "

The dog dropped his head in her lap.

"I wish you wouldn't do that!" she said almost sharply, but there was a dry catch in her throat when she spoke, and she laid one fair hand on the head of His Highness.

A few moments later she went downstairs to the great hall, where she found Col. Hyssop and Maj. Brent just finishing their morning cocktails.

When they could at last comprehend that she never began her breakfast with a cocktail they conducted her solemnly to the breakfast room, seated her with empressement, and the coffee was served.

It was a delicious, old fashioned, country breakfast—crisp trout, bacon, eggs, and mounds of fragrant flapjacks.

"Langham's gone off to the West Branch; left duty's compliments and all that sort of thing for you," observed the colonel, testing his coffee with an air.

His Highness, who had sniffed the bacon, got up on a chair where he could sit and view the table. Moisture gathered on his jet black nose; he licked his jowl.

"You poor darling!" cried his mistress, rising impulsively, with her plate in her hand. She set the plate on the floor. It was cleaned with a snap, then carefully polished.

"You are fond of your dog, madam," said the major, much interested.

"He's a fine one," added the colonel. "Gad! I took him for Langham's champion at first."

She bent her head over the dog's plate.

Later she walked to the porch, followed by His Highness.

A lovely little path invited them on—a path made springy by trodden leaves; and the dog and his mistress strolled forth among clumps of hazel and silver birches, past ranks of alders and Indian willows, on across log bridges spanning tiny threads of streams which poured into the stony river.

The unceasing chorus of the birds freshened like wind in her ears. Spring echoes sounded from blue distances: the solemn congress of the forest trees in session murmured of summers past and summers to come.

How could her soul sink in the presence of the young world's uplifting?

Her dog came back and looked up into her eyes. With a cry which was half laughter she raced with him along the path, scattering the wild birds into flight from bush and thicket.

Breathless, rosy, she halted at the river's shallow edge.

Flung full length on the grass, she dipped her white fingers in the river and dropped wind flowers on the ripples to watch them dance away.

She listened to the world around her; it had much to say to her if she would only believe it. But she forced her mind back to her husband and lay brooding.

An old man in leggings and corduroys came stumping along the path; His Highness heard him coming and turned his keen head. Then he went and stood in front of his mistress, calm, inquisitive, dangerous.

"Mornin', miss," said the keeper; "I guess you must be one of our folks."

"I am staying at the clubhouse," she said, smiling, and sitting up on the grass.

"I'm old Peter, one o' the guards," he said. "Fine mornin', miss, but a leetle bright for the fish—though I ain't denyin' that a small, dark fly'd raise 'em; no'm. If I was sot on ketchin' a mess o' fish I guess a hare's ear would do the business; yes'm. I jest passed Mr. Langham down to the forks, and I seed he was a-chuckin' a hare's ear; an' he riz 'em, too; yes'm."

"How long have you been a keeper here?" she asked.

"How long, 'm? Waal, I was the fustest guard they had; yes'm. I live down here a piece. They bought my water rights; yes'm. An' they give me the job. The president he sez to me, 'Peter,' he sez, jest like that—'Peter, you was raised here; you know all them brooks an' rivers like a mink; you stay right here an' watch 'em an' I'll do the squar' by ye,' he sez, jest like that. An' he done it; yes'm."

"So you knew the president, then?" she asked in a low voice.

"Knew him?—him? Yes'm."

The old man laughed a hollow, toothless laugh, and squinted out across the dazzling river.

"Knew him twenty year, I did. A good man, and fair at that. Why, I've seen him a-settin' jest where you're settin' this minute—seen him a hundred times a-settin' there."

"Fishing?" she said in an awed voice.

"Sometimes. Sometimes he was a-drinkin' out o' that silver pocket p'stol o' his'n. He got drunk a lot up here; but he didn't drink alone; no'm. There wasn't a stingy hair in his head; he——"

"Do you mean the president?" she said incredulously, almost angrily.

"Him? Yes'm. Him an' Col. Hyssop an' Maj. Brent; they had good times in them days."

"You knew the president before his marriage?" she observed coldly.

"Him? He wasn't never married, miss!" said the old man scornfully.

"Are you sure?" she asked, with a troubled smile.

"Sure? Yes'm. Why, the last time he was up here, three year come July Fourth, I seen him a-kissin' an' a-huggin' of old man Dawson's darter——"

She was on her feet in a flash. The old man stood there smiling his senile smile and squinting out across the water, absorbed in his garrulous reminiscence.

"Yes'm; all the folks down to the village was fond o' the president, he was that jolly and free, an' no stuck up city airs; no'm; jest free and easy, an' a-sparkin' the gals with the best o' them——"

The old man laughed and crossed his arms under the barrel of his shotgun.

"Folks said he might o' married old man Dawson's darter if he'd lived; dun'no'. I guess it was all fun. But I hear the gal took on awful when they told her he was dead; yes'm."

Toward evening Langham waded across the river, drew in his dripping line, put up his rod, and counted and weighed his fish. Then, lighting a pipe, he reslung the heavy creel across his back and started up the darkening path. From his dripping tweeds the water oozed; his shoes wheezed and slopped at every step; he was tired, soaked, successful—but happy? Possibly.

It was dark when the lighted windows of the lodge twinkled across the hill; he struck out over the meadow, head bent, smoking furiously.

On the steps of the clubhouse Col. Hyssop and Maj. Brent greeted him with the affected heartiness of men who disliked his angling methods; the steward brought out a pan; the fish were uncreeled, reweighed, measured, and entered on the club book.

"Finest creel this year, sir," said the steward, admiringly.

The major grew purple; the colonel carefully remeasured the largest fish.

"Twenty-one inches, steward!" he said. "Wasn't my big fish of last Thursday twenty-two?"

"Nineteen, sir," said the steward promptly.

"Then it shrank like the devil!" said the colonel. "By gad! it must have shrunk in the creel!"

But Langham was in no mood to savor his triumph. He climbed the stairs wearily, leaving little puddles of water on each step, slopped down the hallway, entered his room, and sank into a chair, too weary, too sad even to think.

Presently he lighted his lamp. He dressed with his usual attention to detail, and touched the electric button above his bed.

"I'm going tomorrow morning," he said to the servant who came; "return in an hour and pack my traps."

Langham sat down. He had no inclination for dinner. With his chin propped on his clinched hands he sat there thinking. A sound fell on his ear, the closing of a door at the end of the hall, the padded pattering of a dog's feet, a scratching, a whine.

He opened his door; the bull terrier trotted in and stood before him in silence. His Highness held in his mouth a letter.

Langham took the note with hands that shook. He could scarcely steady them to open the envelope; he could scarcely see to read the line:

"Why are you going away?"

He rose, made his way to his desk like a blind man, and wrote:

"Because I love you."

His Highness bore the missive away.

For an hour he sat there in the lamplit room. The servant came to pack up for him, but he sent the man back, saying that he might change his mind. Then he resumed his waiting, his head buried in his hands. At last, when he could endure the silence no longer, he rose and walked the floor, backward, forward, pausing breathless to listen for the patter of the dog's feet in the hall. But no sound came; he stole to the door and listened, then stepped into the hall. The light still burned in her room, streaming out through the transom.

She would never send another message to him by His Highness; he understood that now. How he cursed himself for his momentary delusion! how he scorned himself for reading anything but friendly kindness in her message! how he burned with self-contempt for his raw, brutal reply, crude as the blurted offer of a yokel!

That settled the matter. If he had any decency left he must never offend her eyes again. How could he have hoped? How could he have done it? Here, too!—here in this place so sanctified to her by associations—here, whither she had come upon her pious pilgrimage—here, where at least he might have left her to her dead!

Suddenly, as he stood there, her door opened. She saw him standing there. For a full minute they faced each other. Presently His Highness emerged from behind his mistress and trotted out into the hall.

Behind His Highness came his mistress, slowly, more slowly. The dog carefully held a letter between his teeth, and when Langham saw it he sprang forward eagerly.

"No, no!" she said. "I did not mean—I cannot—I cannot—— Give me back the letter!"

He had the letter in his hand; her hand fell over it; the color surged into her face and neck. The letter dropped from her yielding hand; the thrill from their interlocked fingers made her faint, and she swayed forward toward him, so close that their lips touched, then clung, crushed in their first kiss. . . .

Meanwhile His Highness picked up the letter and stood politely waiting.

"My Outing Was Just Too Lovely for Anything," lisps Oney Fred Sweet

Of Course the Crowds Stared a Little and the Parting Was Sad, But Outside of That the Summer Resort Trip Proved Perfectly Dear.

I'M this kind of a girl: I'm jolly and friendly, but I'm by no means what you might call a flirt. I try to be in style—the outing jacket I wore to St. Joe the other day had that latest smock effect—but no one could say that I dress to attract the men. I read carefully what Doris Blake has to say on proper manners, and I don't think any one over on the beach or along the cement walk at St. Joe or on the boat coming back the other day could say that I was not a "nice girl." Yet everybody stared when I walked demurely down the gang plank of the steamboat about 1 o'clock in the afternoon with my mind made up to forget Chicago and its everyday cares.

"What on earth do you suppose they are staring at?" I asked of a girl who happened to be crowded beside me on the steamer gang plank. "Gracious, isn't my hat on straight, or is there something wrong to the hang of this skirt?"

The girl addressed turned to look at me, and I saw that same "for-the-love-of-Mike" look come into her face.

"The women—I can account for their stares," I sneered, turning up my nose. "They are envying my clothes and my complexion. Well, if they had hustled around in the department store like I had they could have got the same kind of an outing jacket for $1.49. As for the men," I continued, lifting my vanity bag to take a peek into the mirror attached inside, "I am not afraid of their admiring glances, for I know that heaven will protect the working girl."

Indeed, I was scarcely off the gang plank before a motherly looking woman with white hair stepped up and handed me a Y. W. C. A. card.

"You'll find a nice rest room up there, girlie," she confided sweetly. "Were you looking for friends?"

Achieved a Stunning Effect.

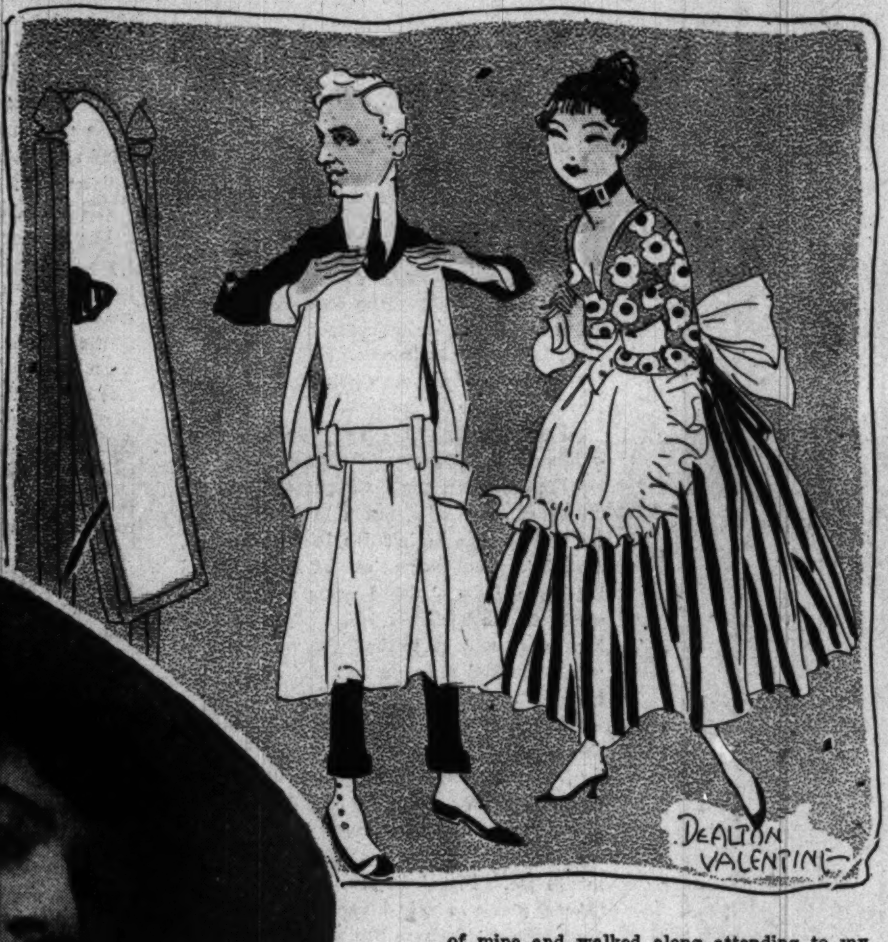
"No," I says, a quaint Mary Pickford expression illuminating my countenance. "No, I am just looking for a summer resort good time, and mamma doesn't care how near I get to the water."

Did I say I had paid only $1.49 for my outing jacket with the smocking? Well, girls, I paid more than that when you take into consideration my frayed nerves. I don't know how many jackets and middy blouses I tried on before I struck what I considered a real bargain. It just seemed as though I couldn't get what I wanted. I had to go from table to table and—you know—hold the goods against me in front of those mirrors with an unconscious-of-everybody-around expression on my face to make sure that I was going to get just the right effect. And my hat? I know I tried twenty of 'em up in the French room before I found a thing that suited. Yet it was worth the pains. Even a fashion editor would have stood back and given vent to that one word "stunning" had she seen me coming down that steamer gang plank.

I just let them stare, those horrid men and those envious women. I sauntered slowly past them all until I was well out on the streets of St. Joe, when suddenly I realized that I was going in the wrong direction to get to the beach. I suppose I looked confused and befuddled as I made inquiries. You know how a girl feels all alone that way, and I know I looked young and awfully unsophisticated. The man who directed me toward the sand and water smiled as he did so. I don't know just how to describe that smile; it may have been friendly, but I have read a good many novels, and deep down in my heart I felt that it was a villainous smile.

Mincingly I picked my way back through the dock station along the way that I had so recently traveled, and it just seemed to me that every eye in St. Joe was studying my carriage, my clothes, and my lovely complexion. I may use a little powder sometimes to keep my nose from being shiny, because I think there is nothing more vulgar than a shiny nose, but honestly, girls, I'm not one of the kind to just daub it on.

Down at the corner, just before you turn on to the wide cement walk, there was a young man who I thought called out something smart to me, but I wouldn't say for sure. I'm not the kind of a girl who is quick to imagine an insult. I stared right back at the young man out of those soulful blue eyes of mine and walked along attending to my own business.



To all appearances the whole of St. Joe and that portion of Chicago which has come over on the steamboat were walking right along at my heels. If it is rude to stare, then every soul that I met that afternoon happened to belong to the rude class. Some of them looked away when they noticed that I was observing them, but just as soon as they could do so decently they continued with their "once overs." It made me nervous, but what was a poor, unprotected baby doll like me to do?

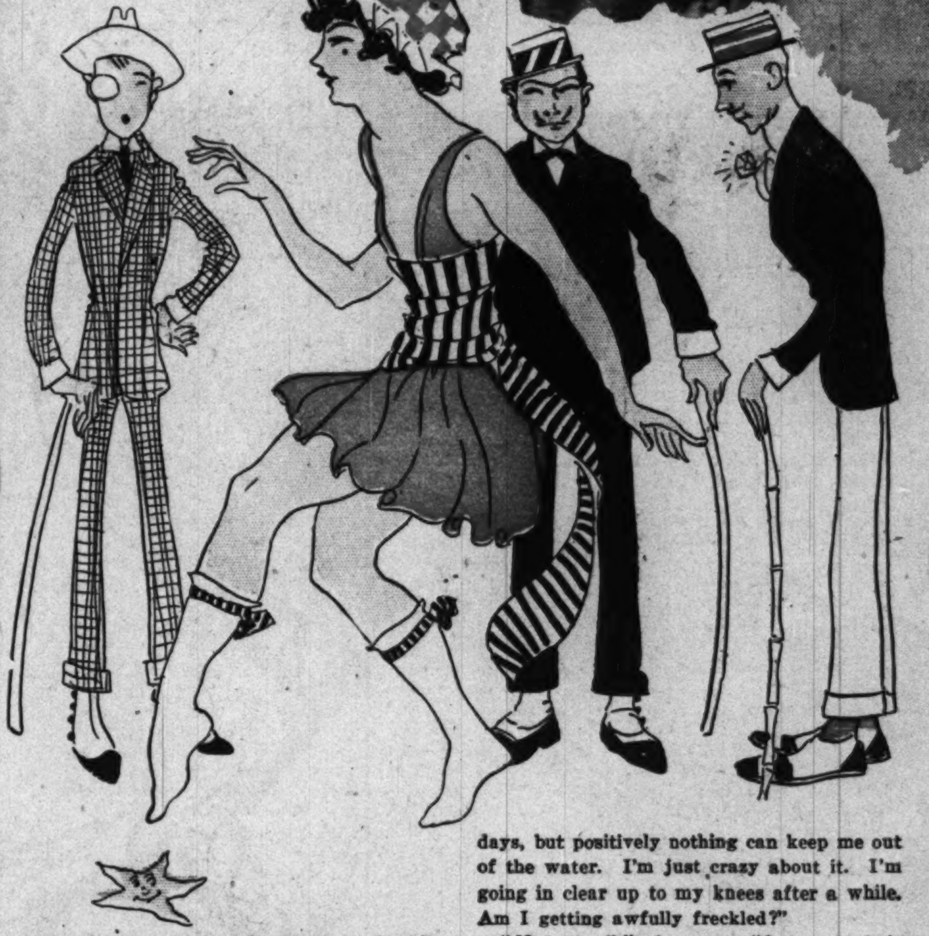
Rude Guys Stare.

I don't know, maybe I am not like other girls, but I felt awfully self-conscious after I'd got into my bathing suit and had started down the long stretch of beach. There was a group of five or six young men laughing and kidding on the cement walk that I had to pass on my way to the waves, and while I kept my face downcast and simply glanced shyly out of the corners of my eyes, I could see plainly enough they were all giving me the "up and down." It made me so uncomfortable, especially when two out of the bunch came down to sit on a bench near the place where I began to dabble in the water. They kept watching every move I made, these two, and I have no doubt that they were making bets with each other as to which one would be successful in "copping me out." I've read of such things in novels, and these guys seemed so worldly and so sure of themselves.



Those two boys might have spoiled my whole half hour in the water if another girl hadn't come along and struck up an acquaintance with me. She looked a good deal the same as I did (like a Harrison Fisher magazine cover girl), but she was awfully affected. I had just rushed out from the water to stand beside her after getting my stockings just soaking wet when a shirt sleeved youth with a camera approached.

"Would you ladies like to get your pictures taken?" he asked. "Three for a quarter, and I finish them off in ten minutes."

I wish you could have seen me stamp my stockinged toe in the sand.

"No, no, no!" I pouted. "Don't you dare point that thing this way. You're probably one of those newspaper photographers, and if there's anything I hate it would be any publicity like that. I wouldn't like it, and I know my folks would never let me hear the end of it when I got home."

The girl beside me in a bathing suit lifted her eyebrows when my voice broke on the last sentence.

"I've got a terrible cold," I explained, "and I've been hoarse this way for three days, but positively nothing can keep me out of the water. I'm just crazy about it. I'm going in clear up to my knees after a while. Am I getting awfully freckled?"

"Not at all," she says, "but your hair looks as if it was coming down a little. Wait a minute and I'll pin it up."

But I beat her to it. I tucked back the flossy strands, manipulating the hairpins with a delicate touch of my fingers—you know—deft like and graceful. I just can't stand to have any one else fussing with my hair.

Attracts Prince Charming.

I still felt awfully self-conscious when I got back on St. Joe's cement walk again—dressed in my white outing jacket and my duck skirt with its new fangled flare. (Do you really like it? It's just an old thing I stuck on for the trip.) It was almost time for the boat to start back to Chicago, and I did so hate to have to run the gantlet of so many pairs of envious and admiring eyes again.

I suppose every girl carries about with her a vision of her Prince Charming, but I didn't recognize mine at first. I saw him studying me as I started to get on the boat, but I averted my head and started to hum a little song and kept on taking mincing steps just as though I had not been noticed. Girls, I had made an impression. I felt it then, and I was convinced later when my Prince Charming twice passed the spot where I sat looking out on the pale blue lake with the boat plowing out of the harbor.

You, Gladys and Alice, could probably describe him better than I can. I suppose you would say that a thoroughly devastating war would have to cut down the male population to one before he would even interest you. I'll admit he was no Francis X. Bushman. I think he must have picked his straw hat from the ten year old stock of some small town general store's men's furnishings department; his necktie was factory fixed and the expression on his face was more or less vacant. No, I can't say that he was another Francis X. Bushman, but every time he passed the point where I was sitting on the deck I suffered.

Girls, did you ever sit around lonesome during an outing and have that awful feeling of longing, with all the other girls laughing and getting acquainted with the boys, and the band playing, and the sky so blue and the sunset tints on the clouds so pretty that it hurts? Well, I "kept the corners of my mouth up" and did all I could to still my pulses, but just the same when my Prince Charming came back the third time he found me in something more than an attitude of watchful waiting. As I gracefully tucked a stray strand of hair in above my left ear I looked up from under my wide brimmed hat and our eyes met. Don't criticize me too much, Miss Doris Blake, but I didn't demand any introduction.

Night in Fairyland.

It was beginning to get dark on the lake. The velvet blue of the calm waters was blending into the velvet blue of the sky, the illumination on a distant boat lent a fairyland appearance to the scene, and the orchestra on the dance hall deck beneath was playing "Midnight Down in Chinatown When the Lights Are Low." From then on there wasn't another soul on the boat save we two.

He wasn't on to any new and fancy steps, and he tramped on my toes consistently and we got pretty much in the way of the other couples on the floor, but girls, with the rhythm of the moving boat around us and the glimpses through the port holes of the darkening waters, and the coconut shells and the bells and the drums furnishing accompaniment for the orchestra's "I'm on My Way to Dublin Bay," what cared I if the perspiration dug irrigation ditches down my powdered cheeks?

Close together on the deck we sat as the lights of the city appeared—like Japanese lanterns at a lawn social. Together we watched other pleasure boats being tugged out of the river into the free sailing expanse of the lake, their shrill whistles startling me a bit, of course, although I felt so deliciously protected from any sort of danger. And then we drew up at the docks and there was a rush for shore.

It was in the rush that I lost him. Memory of the look on his face as he gazed back over the crowd trying to locate me haunted as I hurried across the Rush street bridge and as I dodged past impatient automobiles suddenly released by the traffic policeman. As I felt myself gradually being swallowed by the city, I jerked my handkerchief out of the pocket of my duck skirt and dabbed at the corners of both my eyes.

Tell me, Dear Miss Blake, can a girl ever laugh and be the same again after a parting like that which she knows must—must be forever?

Send all suggestions to THE AMERICAN FILM MANUFACTURING COMPANY, 6227 BROADWAY, CHICAGO, ILL.

One two-reel episode corresponding with the chapter of the story as it appears in The Sunday Tribune is released every Monday.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

A bitter feud, engendered over an heirloom, "the diamond from the sky," found in a meteor by an ancestor, has existed between Col. Arthur Stanley and his cousin, Judge Lamar Stanley. The feud is augmented by the fact that the succession to the Stanley earldom in England may come to an American family. When his wife dies after having given birth to a daughter Col. Stanley buys and substitutes as heir a new born gypsy boy. Three years later the gypsy mother, Hagar, steals the colonel's daughter, who is being reared in secret, and obtains possession of the "diamond from the sky" and a document that holds the secret of the false heir.

When the daughter, Esther Stanley, grows up, Hagar returns with her to Stanley hall. Dr. Lee, exacting as a condition that he keep the "diamond from the sky," adopts Esther in hopes that the supposed Arthur Stanley II., who is Hagar's son, will marry Esther and she become mistress of Stanley hall. Blair Stanley, Arthur's cousin, who would be the rightful heir to the earldom if the truth were known, also falls in love with Esther.

In endeavoring to steal the "diamond from the sky" from Dr. Lee, Blair causes the old doctor's death. Arthur assumes the onus of the murder in the hope that he himself will escape and Blair, who is a profligate, will live a straighter life. Hagar and Esther are established in Stanley hall after Hagar has established Blair's guilt through finger print evidence. Blair in the meantime has fallen in love with Vivian Marston, an adventuress, and, disguised and in possession of the "diamond from the sky," elopes with her. Mrs. Stanley, sensing that Esther is the real heir, plans to make friends with her and effect a marriage between her and Blair Stanley, her disgraced son. She reasons that if Esther marries Blair Hagar would withhold any accusations or proofs of his guilt in connection with the murder of Dr. Lee. Esther in the meantime has rifled Hagar's strong box and found proof that she, Esther, is the real heir. She resolves to say nothing about it. At Mrs. Stanley's request, Esther and Hagar accompany her to Mrs. Randolph's in Richmond. Burglars loot the train on which Blair and Vivian are riding and take from them the "diamond from the sky." Vivian, enraged, throws over Blair and threatens him with exposure unless he regains the diamond.

Blair returns to Richmond, and, finding Esther agreeable, courts her in order to arouse the jealousy of Vivian. Hagar's mind, affected by an accident in the gypsy camp, wanders, and Esther learns that to restore her to normal condition an operation costing $1,000 will be necessary. Mrs. Stanley offers Esther the money on condition that she marry Blair, but Esther refuses.

Arthur by applying the robber's loot as payment intends to save Stanley Hall from the hands of strangers and help Esther and Hagar. He employs Tom Blake the detective, instructing him to defray all of Hagar's expenses and to bid in on Stanley Hall. Esther, meanwhile, flees from the Stanleys to escape the persecution of Blair Stanley. She intends to find Arthur. Blake, following instructions, buys Stanley Hall. Luke Lovell, the sinister, by a trick of fate again comes across the diamond from the sky and buys it for a quart of whisky. Arthur as "John Powell" meanwhile strikes it rich in oil and is banqueted in Los Angeles. At the height of the festivities he receives word from Blake that Esther has departed "for parts unknown." This blow crushes him. As to the diamond, Luke and his fellow bootlegger quarrel over its possession and the diamond sinks into the Pacific, near Santa Barbara.

Vivian, learning of Arthur's sudden wealth, renews her attentions to Blair in the hope that together they will be able to strip him of his gold. Blair and Vivian and Esther and Quabba separately go to Los Angeles in search of Arthur. Marmaduke Smythe also is in search of Arthur in California, and up in the mountain region where Arthur is seeking an investment a combat is staged to determine which which will be the first to reach Arthur.

Blair hires Luke Lovell to kill Esther and Marmaduke Smith by putting a defective lynchpin into the stage coach. The coach rolls down the mountain, but Esther and the lawyer escape unhurt. Meanwhile Quabba returns and they both flee into the woods, where they are pursued by Blair and Luke until nightfall. In the morning all hands of the Lady Veronica mine are ordered to the new works by a message from John Powell. Quabba and Esther flee in an ore car over a trolley, thinking there will be help at the mine. Finding it deserted, they elude Luke and Blair by going through the tunnel on the electric trolley. Meanwhile John Powell goes aboard his new yacht in Santa Barbara bay. Vivian, bent upon his capture, charters a sailboat and heads directly across the course of the yacht. Powell at the wheel forces the inevitable collision and jumps into the bay to save her life.

CHAPTER XVI.

THE path of peril leads through the heart of the mountains. The path of peril is across the deeps where the dimpling of the waters shows the footsteps of the wind upon the sea. Through the heart of the mountains, in the dark and dripping tunnel of the mine, goes the dingy little electric motor bearing Esther. Beside her the one constant friend and faithful servant, Quabba, the hunchback.

Behind them, blundering through the darkness, relentless as they are desperate and determined, come the Virginia ne'er-do-well and the gypsy outlaw, Blair Stanley, and Luke Lovell.

Where the path of peril lies upon the sea Vivian Marston floats, feigning unconsciousness, by the crushed and cut-down sailboat she drove across the course of the great white yacht. Vivian Marston chose the path of peril to gain her purpose, and that purpose is her wild wish for the diamond from the sky. It is a desperate chance she takes but the diamond is the guerdon of desperate chances. To Vivian any lawless love she might inspire in Blair Stanley or his cousin Arthur, for whom now she wove her webs, were but a means to the end to her. That end, her all consuming desire for the diamond.

At the first cry of danger Arthur had sprung from the wheel of the yacht and run from the bridge to the deck. Hardly had the impact of the yacht's cutwater cleft the little sailboat and crumpled it into a shattered mass and hardly had Vivian sprang into the water with a scream than Arthur dove overboard. There was a hurried rush to the starboard rail, the quick command of the sailing master, the hurried lowering of a boat, the casting over of life preservers, while other daring members of the crew plunged headlong into the sea to aid the gallant young owner, "John Powell," in his rescue of the reckless young woman who, through foolhardy daring, had attempted to cross the bow of the swift yacht in her tiny sailboat.

Arthur in his excitement did not notice the fair face of the woman he had plunged overboard to save was a somewhat familiar one—the face of the vivacious Vivian Marston. In fact, until now, Arthur's encounters with Vivian had left but the slightest impression upon him. Even when he had first beheld her at the ball in Richmond with the diamond from the sky blazing upon her breast he had no thought for her save to wonder by what strange and mysterious manner the great jewel he had left in the pawnshop the day before had come to gleam upon the neck of this bold, handsome woman.

Let him be the rightful heir of Stanley, impoverished by his own prodigality and a fugitive from justice in Virginia, or let him be "John Powell, the Golden Man," as he was known in California—in either case Vivian Marston will have enmeshed him, even as she has enmeshed his desperate kinsman, Blair Stanley. Which of these two got the diamond it mattered not to her now. Vivian felt convinced the great gem would come to her from the hands of either of them. If it came rightfully as a heritage to either she would have it. If it were to be bought for money, "John Powell" had the means to buy it for her. She had done well, she thought, to take the path of peril to find the diamond by throwing herself in the arms of Arthur Stanley, alias John Powell.

ESTHER and QUABBA ESCAPE FROM THE MINE

So Vivian sighed with vague contentment, and clung, seemingly semi-unconscious, to Arthur as they were hauled into the lifeboat; and when she was borne up the companionway and into the handsomely furnished cabin of the yacht's owner who had rescued her she could have laughed aloud for sheer joy at the success of her wild plan.

In the mine the path of peril is dark and fearsome to the timid girl who is driven over it pursued by the desperate men who will stop at nothing so they prevent her reaching Arthur Stanley with the Stanley document that they believe she carries with her. The operation of a mine electric motor is simple enough, but when it balks in the inexperienced hands of Quabba then indeed the dangers of this path of peril grow manifold.

"Me don't know what's the matter with him, all the time now, Miss Esther!" whimpers Quabba. "Some wire loose, maybe? Eh; what you think?"

"We are far ahead of them," says Esther encouragingly. "Even if the motor will only do this well they will not overtake us. It seems to me we have gone miles and miles through this dreadful darkness. The driver of the stage told me about these mines. This is the main tunnel he told me about, I know. It goes straight through the mountains for four miles to the openings at the workings in the opposite valley."

"She stops; she don't go no more!" moans Quabba, as the little motor grinds and halts, then goes forward a few feet and stops with a jerk.

"Do you think you can fix it?" asked Esther eagerly.

Quabba's courage returns as he notes in Esther's question a tone of confidence in his ability as an amateur electrical engineer.

"Ha!" he says. "Plenty time I fix the organ. I find what's the matter and fix this!" and he jumps from the seat and, under an electric light in a wide part of the tunnel where the motor has halted, he proceeds to examine it, with the air of one who desires to impress all beholders with his deep knowledge of electrical mechanics. There was light enough at this point to make any slight repairs, providing poor Quabba was competent to do so. But an intimate knowledge of the mechanism of street pianos is hardly of avail in repairing balky electric motors.

"Do be careful!" cautions Esther. "If anything should happen to you I would never forgive myself! I have heard of men being killed tampering with electric wires. And look!" And Esther pointed to a sign at the side where a new heading from the main tunnel was evidently being driven. For there, plain in the light from the overhead incandescent bulb, was a dingy yet plain sign of warning that read "Danger! Blast ready!" Near it was a small black box from which a plunger protruded and to which coils of insulated wire were attached.

Even to Esther's inexperienced eyes the purpose of the grim looking little box and the coils was apparent. It was mechanism to set off a blast, and the blast, as the sign warned, was ready.

Quabba realized the fact as well as Esther and redoubled his efforts to locate the cause of the trouble in the motor and to get out of the danger zone. The young girl and the poor hunchback, fleeing from the danger of human enemies, were now in danger of annihilating death in the deserted mine tunnel at this point. But such a death Esther did not dread as she dreaded the worst fate that might come to her if she fell again into the hands of Blair Stanley.

For Luke Lovell, brutal as he was, Esther had not the fear she had of Blair. Her old association and authority over Luke as the daughter, as she was supposed to be, of Hagar, the queen who ruled the Romany people with strong decision, Esther knew would make the gypsy hesitate in any evil intent he might have toward her. Esther knew, too, that Luke, for all his brutishness, had ever been attached to her. He had protected her in some measure before, perhaps he would do so again; but dominated as he was by greed and the stronger, wickeder mind of Blair Stanley Esther felt no great confidence in Luke Lovell's further protection, if protection it might be called.

While Quabba fussed and perspired in his inexperienced efforts to remedy or find cause of the balking of the motor Esther sat listening with straining ears to the weird and eerie subterranean sounds of the ceaseless dripping of the water from the mine roof and the occasional rattle and fall of loosened earth and rocks in the dark depths of the tunnel.

Then there came through the darkness from far off behind them the sound of footfalls through the water that covered the tunnel floor. Like moving stars in the distant darkness she saw the lights of the candles borne by the relentless pursuing Luke and Blair. She knew it must be them, for the mine and all its workings had been as deserted as a place of the dead.

"They are coming, Quabba!" she cried. "What shall we do?"

The hunchback's usual kindly face took on a set expression of murderous determination strange to Esther's eyes.

"This time I kill them!" he exclaimed. "Wait; you see!"

Leaving his task of searching for the trouble in the mechanism of the motor, Quabba slipped around to the back of it and pushed the little machine, with many grunts and straining efforts, from the dangerous spot near the set blast and its warning sign.

Pushing and panting, he shoved the heavy little machine over the water covered tracks a hundred yards or more down the tunnel. Then he rushed back under the electric light by the set blast and, seizing the blast battery by its leather handle and uncoiling the loops of wire, the other ends of which were fastened deep down in the blast holes to the detonator in the dynamite, Quabba slipped back through the darkness and called to Esther in a tense whisper to come around behind the shielding bulk of the motor with him. From the blast battery box he carried trailed the length of wire that would carry the vital spark of the forces of destruction.

Now Blair Stanley and Luke Lovell had located them by the single light upon the electric motor. They pressed forward with exultant shouts; then, just as they reached the wide space where the blast was set at the new heading, Quabba, a hundred yards away and shielded with Esther behind the motor, drove the plunger of the battery down swift and hard.

There was a deafening boom and crash, a burst of fire, the sound of showering rocks, a heavy fall of earth and debris that seemed to heave out and groan and rattle and settle—then a choking fog of blast smoke and silence!

Whatever had been the matter with the motor, the shock and jar of the explosion had settled the loosened wire back in place to a proper contact, for when, shaking with fright and excitement, Quabba had dragged Esther aboard the motor again and turned the lever the little machine moved forward like a living thing, slowly at first and then, gaining speed, glided smoothly and swiftly out of the smoke and on and on, swifter, faster, until the hunchback and the trembling girl felt a breath of fresh air from outside blow upon them and saw a gleam of daylight and sped on and out from the dank mouth of the mine into God's good sunlight!

The men called to this side of the mountain to the new workings were astounded at the appearance of so strange a pair bursting out from the tunnel and speeding down the track on the electric motor that had been left at the other and far off portal of the tunnel. The trackmen dropped their tools. The mine foreman and his wife joined with the throng of miners that surged around the motor and the strange pair that drove it—a pallid gypsy hunchback and a half-fainting girl with a face like a flower.

BLAIR and LUKE HAVE A NARROW ESCAPE

They told their wild story to sympathetic ears. Turning Esther over to the ministering attentions of the big hearted sharer of his joys and sorrows, the mine boss and several assistants reversed the motor and drove back resolutely into the mine depths to find the men whom Esther and Quabba told of, dead or alive.

They returned at nightfall, having cleared away the débris of the blast, but finding no trace of Luke Lovell and Blair Stanley. The wicked have luck alike with the good. At the edge of the blast Blair Stanley had been struck down and hurt slightly, and Luke had borne him back through the choking smoke all the weary way whence they had come, until they, too, reached daylight and safety, as Esther and Quabba had reached it, but on the far side of the mountain mine.

That night by the fire in the office shack of the mine boss Esther and Quabba told again such parts of their story as they cared to tell to the rough but sympathetic new found friends around them. Esther told of her search for Arthur, calling him only by the name that he was known by as oil magnate and owner of these newly acquired mines. She said that he was a friend, a relative, and that for reasons she was unable to solve the desperate men who had tracked her were evidently desirous she should not meet up with him.

"He is a fine young man, Mr. John Powell is, my dear," said the kindly wife of the mine boss. "I will take good care of you and in the morning my husband will have one of the boys drive you to the railroad station. Mr. Powell has gone to Santa Barbara. They say he has bought a beautiful new yacht which is there to meet him. He will protect you and take care of you, I know, and you know. As for those rascals you got away from, it is fourteen rough miles across the mountain trail from the north portal of the tunnel. If they escaped with their lives they will hardly make their way over the mountains tonight."

"If they come this way I promise them a warm reception," remarked the mine boss grimly. "The boys are just naturally pining to get hold of those two fellows. There will be work for the coroner if the boys catch them. And the coroner had better bring in a verdict of 'frozen to death,' too."

The moon shone on the waters of Santa Barbara bay. It shone down upon the broad white deck of a great yacht that moved majestically across the waters. Beneath the moon the sensuous strains of a love song chanted in a minor key arose. In snowy white, with flower garlands on their breasts, a Hawaiian orchestra played "The Love Song of the Sky Flowers." It is seductively sweet in the vernacular. In English it may be sung:

"Beloved, the stars are sky flowers in the night!
The flowers are ground stars, dear, by day.
And all the air is soft for your delight:
Then let us love, sweetheart, while yet we may."

Beneath the moon, a chaplet of flowers in her hair, a clinging white gown of Grecian simplicity setting off her languorous beauty, reclines Vivian Marston. Near her is Arthur Stanley, enthralled, enraptured under the spell of Vivian's alluring charms, the sensuousness of the Hawaiian love song of the sky flowers, and the magic of the moonlight over all.

Under the spell of Vivian's languorous eyes Arthur Stanley, "John Powell," millionaire now, treads the path of peril in his turn, but the path is not plain to him, for it is hidden by deadly flowers. The flowers on the path of peril seem sweet and fair to him; they may be such as are in the chaplet on Vivian's dark locks, for Arthur bends over these and murmurs, "I would give you anything in the world!"

An eager glow comes into Vivian's dangerous eyes, a deeper flush suffuses her fair cheeks. "You would give me anything in the world?" she whispers. "Then get me the diamond from the sky."

"It has disappeared utterly off the earth," answers Arthur. "If it comes to light it may not be mine to give." And he leans over to clasp her in his arms. But, pouting like a child denied, Vivian holds him aloof. "You do not care for me," she says with affected plaintiveness, "or you would promise." And Arthur, such is the witchery of a wanton woman, such is the magic of the moonlight, promises her.

The magic of the moon casts no spell over Frank Durand. In faraway New York Durand has no dreams or illusions. He is a practical person, known in the sphere that he adorns as the "King of Diamonds," for he is the moving spirit of a band of international jewel thieves and swindlers. Mr. Abe Bloom, prosperous gambling house keeper in Richmond, is almost in despair about the great diamond that slipped through his fingers once. In this half despair and desperation Mr. Bloom has written to Mr. Durand, his New York acquaintance of the upper underworld. Mr. Bloom's letter to the wily Durand is brief and blunt:

"My dear Durand: The last heard of the diamond from the sky was train robbers stole it in California. If you and your bunch of crooks can get it I have a syndicate to pay you your own price. Further details later. Our mutual friend Vivian is after it. Am afraid she will double cross us. This diamond is worth half a million dollars. Yours, Abe Bloom."

In his luxurious bachelor apartments the "King of Diamonds" receives his dapper and alert lieutenant, Felix de Vaux, alias Count de Vaux, and shows him the letter from the sententious Mr. Bloom.

"So our old friend Vivian is after the diamond?" says the dapper little count as he turns and faces the framed photograph of Vivian Marston that occupies a place of honor in Durand's handsomely furnished apartments. "Vi was always clever. Remember she wrote about this stone?"

The handsome Durand strokes his close cropped Vandyke beard and muses. "I always thought that diamond was a myth," he says finally. "So many of these old and supposedly priceless heirlooms turn out to be junk when an expert gets his hands on them," and Mr. Frank Durand placed a peculiar emphasis on the word "expert."

"We have records of this so-called diamond from the sky," continued the arch crook, "but nothing much was known of it except it was supposed to be in the possession of an old Virginia family. But no one knew much of it except there was an old family tradition glorifying some jimcrack that perhaps would prove worthless even if it really existed."

"Well," interjected the dapper little count, "if Abe Bloom says there is such a stone and that it is worth half a million you can be sure it is a real diamond and worth much more. Abe Bloom and his little brother Ike, the Richmond pawnbroker, are two of the best judges of diamonds in the country."

"We should know that," assents Durand. "We have paid them well more than once to come on to New York and appraise stones for us when even we were in doubt. And now, good night. We start west tomorrow. Pleasant dreams about the diamond from the sky to you, Felix!"

Pleasant dreams about the diamond from the sky!

Vivian Marston, three thousand miles away, dreams of the diamond.

Quabba, a humble hunchback organ grinder, sleeping by a fire in a mine shed, dreams, too, of the diamond. No selfish dream is Quabba's. There is one person on all the earth he loves above all others, and that one is his young fair mistress, Esther. Quabba longs and dreams of the diamond that he has so strangely found and lost twice in his lowly life. He longs for the diamond that he may give it to his fair young mistress as a tribute from her devoted servitor. In his dreams Quabba beholds Clarence, the monkey, his next beloved, and from whom he long has been parted. And in his black and hairy paws Clarence, the monkey, extends to his master the diamond from the sky. Then Quabba wakes and sleeps again, perchance again to dream.

Since the wreck of the coach down the hillside Marmaduke Smythe, the English lawyer, cursing a fate that led him to lose himself in the wilderness while seeking the heir of Stanley for the Warwickshire earldom, dreams, too, by a dying fire. But his dreams are not of diamonds. He dreams a horrid savage leers at him through a monocle—a savage who is a stickler for the niceties. For even in his dreams the timid London lawyer knows that it is night, and he is impressed by the fact that the savage about to scalp him is attired in a dress coat. The lawyer wakes with a shriek of fear, and on his ears fall the harsh croakings of the unseen enemies who constantly alarm him. Not redskins, as he thinks, but greenskins. Not savages in ambush, but frogs in the marsh. Stirred by the frightful memory of his dream, Marmaduke Smythe springs to his feet and discharges his shotgun into the marsh. Then all is still. The silence brings back courage to the heart of the British barrister lost in the wilderness.

"Ha!" he says, "I must have jolly well exterminated the savage Iroquois! I will reconnoiter! But caution, Marmaduke, caution!" he counsels himself. "Perhaps they are endeavoring to draw me into an ambuscade!"

He creeps forward stealthily and parts the bushes by a marsh puddle. There lies the corpse of his foeman, a great green frog extremely defunct. Near by, caught in the low tangle of marsh shrubbery, is a curious gleaming object in the moonlight. The lawyer stoops down and picks it up.

It is the spoil the pelican despised when he shook it from the fish that brought it from the depths. Worthless to fish or fowl, the eccentric London lawyer grasps it with a startled cry of wonder and surprise.

Marmaduke Smythe has the diamond from the sky!

Prince Camaralzaman Is Lost.

FROM THE ARABIAN NIGHTS
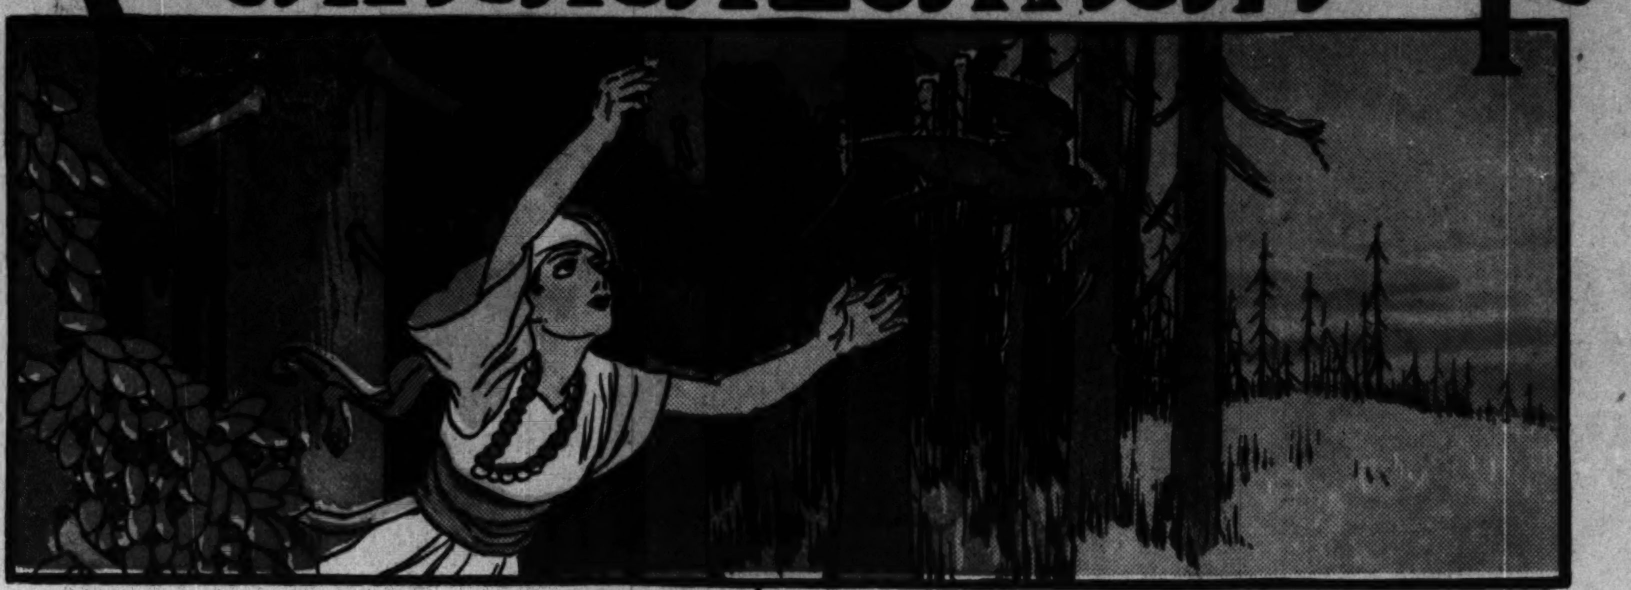
BY
WM. DONAHEY



"Knowing the jewel was precious to his young wife, the prince ran after the bird."

SYNOPSIS.

A powerful king, angry at his only son's refusal to marry, has the prince thrown into prison, where he is discovered by a fairy who is much impressed by his great beauty. Later she meets a second fairy, to whom she tells the beauty of the prince. The second fairy tells of his admiration for a princess who has been imprisoned because of her refusal to marry. To settle the quarrel as to which of these two is the more beautiful the fairies decide to bring the sleeping princess, lay her beside the sleeping prince, wake one at a time, and decide that the one expressing the most delight at the other shall be considered least beautiful. The prince is wakened first, and when he has admired the princess for some time the fairies cause him to again fall asleep. The princess is wakened and falls in love with the prince. She says next day that she will marry the young man whom she saw in the night. The prince says the same. Both are considered insane and are shut up. The princess has a foster brother, who believes her tale and sets out to find her prince, whom he brings back with him. The two are married and set forth to visit the father of Camaralzaman.

PRINCE CAMARALZAMAN and his lovely bride, Princess Badoura, had stopped one day for a rest beside a large river, and the princess fell asleep in her tent. The prince, going in presently, noticed upon her dress a strange and beautiful jewel which he had never seen her wear before, and, unfastening it, he took it outside where he could see it better. As he was examining it a bird suddenly swooped down, snatched the jewel from his fingers, and flew away!

Knowing the jewel was precious to his young wife, the prince ran after the bird, and so eager was he that before he knew what he was doing he was lost. Where his camp lay he could not tell. And worst of all, the bird had flown quite out of sight.

Sad and poor and lonely, the prince wandered many days through a strange country, until at last he came to a great city and, going to a humble gate in a great wall, he knocked and asked of the old man who came to the door a meal and a place to sleep.

The old man said, "Come in quickly, my son. This is a city of very wicked people. They kill all strangers. You must not be seen."

He hurried Camaralzaman inside his little house and heard all his story, after which he said, "Sorrow and misfortune are yours, young man. The home of your father is fully a year's journey. It can only be reached from here safely by a ship which sails once a year from this port to the Ebony islands. That ship has just sailed. The only thing for you to do, therefore, is to stay here with me till another ship is ready. I am gardener here and I need an assistant. Stay with me, I will give you one-fourth of the produce for your wages, and you will be safe."

Prince Camaralzaman could think of no better plan, so he went to work in the garden.

The time went on, and at last the old man said to him, "Stay alone here for a day or two. I am going out to ask about the boat that should sail soon for the Ebony islands."

So the prince stayed alone in the garden. And in the afternoon as he sat resting under a tree, hoping that he would soon be once more on his way to his father and his wife, he saw three birds struggling in the air above him. Watching them, he saw one drop down upon the ground dead, and when he went up to the dead bird he saw something shining in the feathers. He stooped down, and there, caught in the feathers, was his wife's jewel, the loss of which had caused all his present trouble!

Rejoiced at finding it again, he went back to his work, when suddenly his spade struck against something hard in the ground! Looking carefully, he beheld a trap door of bronze, with a great ring in it, and taking hold of the ring, he opened the door and went down into a small underground room, the sides of which were lined with jars filled to the brim with gold!

When the old man returned that night he said, "My son, I have good news for you. Your ship sails in a very few days."

"I, too, have news," answered Camaralzaman, and he led the old man to the storehouse of hidden gold, where they rejoiced together.

They decided that the treasure should be divided equally between them. The prince could not think of a safe way in which to take so much gold with him till the old man said. "My son, the olives of this country are particularly large and fine. They always bring a high price in the Ebony islands. Take jars of olives, fill the lower parts with gold, cover the gold with olives, and sail as an olive merchant. Your treasure will be safe, and as an olive merchant no one will question you as to your right to sail away."

So it was arranged. They packed the jars together, and the prince, deciding that the jewel of his dear wife would be safest among the olives, put that into one of the great jars, which were then fastened ready to be taken on shipboard and sent away.

But that night, when everything was ready for the prince to set out for the boat that was to carry him away, the old man who had befriended him was taken sick. The prince did everything he could to help him, and worked over him all night, but early in the morning, just before the men came to take the jars of olives to the boat, the old gardener died.

Telling the men that he could not desert his only friend now, and that the captain of the boat must wait for him, the prince set about the arrangements for the old man's funeral. He hurried as much as he could, but it was night before he was free to leave, and then another dreadful disappointment awaited him. When he reached the docks he found that the ship had sailed away to the Ebony islands.

The captain had waited as long as he thought proper, and then to please his other passengers he had sailed away.

What was worse, he had taken with him Camaralzaman's precious jars of olives and gold, so that the prince was as poor as when he first came to the city, for he had already given away the old gardener's share to his grandchildren. And, too, in one of those jars was the precious jewel of his wife, the Princess Badoura, the search for which had caused all his trouble.

The prince sat down upon the empty docks and wept. It would be a year before another vessel sailed for the Ebony islands, another whole year before he could once more start out in search of his wife and his father. But there was nothing to do but wait as patiently as possible, so the prince put as good a face on matters as he could and went back to his garden to work and wait for another year. It was harder than the first year had been because he missed the companionship of the kind old man who had befriended him in this strange country.

In the meantime the Princess Badoura had had strange and hard adventures of her own. She had naturally been much astonished when, on waking from her afternoon nap, she found her beautiful jewel gone and her young bridegroom missing.

She and the attendants waited a long time for Prince Camaralzaman to reappear. But at last, when they had decided that some dreadful misfortune had overtaken him, and they might never see him again, they prepared to continue the journey to the court of his father.

Fearful to travel as she was, without her husband, the princess, who was no shorter than he and resembled him, put on a suit of his clothes and took his name, and so as a prince started out upon her travels. She traveled day and night till she reached a city by the sea, named the City of Ebony, ruled over by King Armanos, who sent for this supposed prince to come and stay with him. Poor Princess Badoura was fearful of accepting this invitation, but she went, only to discover that her fears had been well founded.

THE TEENIE WEENIES

CAREFUL MOVERS

BY
WM. DONAHEY

"GENERAL, General," shouted the Cowboy, catching the General by the shoulder and shaking him out of a sound sleep, "there's a bird out in the front yard who wants to see you."

"What's up—what's up?" cried the General, bounding from the teenie weenie sofa.

"I don't know what's the matter," cried the Cowboy, "but the bird is greatly excited and wants to see you at once."

Snatching up his hat, the General hurried out onto the teenie weenie porch. In the front yard stood a chattering, weeping bird, surrounded by a group of wide-eyed Teenie Weenies.

"Madam," said the General, lifting his hat, "what can I do for you?"

"O, General, you can do much," sobbed the bird. "I-I-I'm about to be robbed—I have come to ask your help."

"The Teenie Weenies are always ready to help a lady in distress," said the General with a bow.

"I want you to move my eggs. Two boys happened to see my nest up in the tree, and I heard them say they were going to climb up and get the eggs. They said they would climb up right after lunch, so I want you to take my eggs and move them to another nest that the boys do not know about."

"We'll be glad to help you," cried the General. "Boys, get a spool of thread and some pulleys, quick."

Soon the Teenie Weenies hurried over to the tree and climbed to the bird's nest. The Dunce fixed a pulley to a branch of the tree just above the nest. The thread was then run through the pulley, and one by one the four eggs were lowered carefully to the ground. The Teenie Weenies quickly carried the eggs over to another tree, where they were pulled up and dropped safely into a deserted nest that the bird had found.

"O dear, but I am relieved," sighed the bird as she settled down on her eggs.

"Look," cried the Cowboy, pointing down through the leaves, "we got the eggs moved just in time."

Looking down at the ground, the bird and the Teenie Weenies saw two boys run out of the house towards the tree from which the eggs had just been taken. Putting a ladder against the tree, the two boys climbed up to the nest and peered into it.

"O gee, it's empty," cried one of the boys.

"I'll bet it's an old last year's nest," suggested the other.

"That's funny," muttered the first boy, "I was sure I saw a bird in it just this morning."

The Teenie Weenies and the bird smiled knowingly at one another, and the Dunce had to hold his hand tight over his mouth to keep from laughing out loud.

Princesse Outlines Are Favored for the New Season

Plaited Gown of Navy Blue Ondine Silk, Black Satin Sash and Sleeves.

NOT all the magic allure of "Paris fashions" has been able to impose the close fitting cuirasse form of corsage upon the well gowned American.

Those who are conversant with the means and manner of launching Paris fashions know full well that it is not by any means a fraction of the novelties that Paris presents that are adopted, or adapted, by American dressmakers and their clients.

Of course, it must be confessed that it is the American trade itself that is to blame for just this state of affairs. Ever and always they go to Paris with the one cry upon their lips: Give us novelties! Novelties!! NOVELTIES!!!

And Paris, being strictly businesslike, with all of her artistry, does her best to meet the demand. But it must be conceded that this demand comes at a time when the best makers of the mode are wearied after a prolonged season of attending to their European clients; when their best ideas have been launched, and when both the artist dressmaker and the client are satisfied to rest after a season of strenuous endeavor, the one in pleasure, the other in business.

Right in the height of the Les Vacances—the vacation season—descends the horde of American buyers. Things are dull, duller, dullest, in these United States in the matter of clothes. Our summer clothes have long been ordered and worn; most of them probably are almost passé at this writing. Therefore, with nothing doing at home, the dressmaker, the milliner, the specialty shop keeper, and the department store buyer hie themselves abroad to see what is new and novel in Paris.

With by far the greater number of leading dressmaking houses in Paris owned and managed by women—those that are under the control of the masculine sex may be reckoned today on the fingers of the one hand, albeit they at one time dominated the trade—every effort is being made to maintain all of the prestige of Paris in matters of dress. So many of these women have come into ownership through a long apprenticeship, many of them right in the same premises today as owner where once they served as saleswomen, perhaps, or designers, or as forewomen in the various workrooms—for Parisian workrooms are highly specialized, and the workers each has his or her specialty, and keeps to that. One does not find in Paris the worker who pretends to make a gown throughout. She is a waistcutter, or draper, or designer; or a sleeve hand, or a trimmer, or a skirt draper. But never does she claim to be all of these rolled into one! Not by any means, for she would at once lose prestige in her own particular line. Of course, from time to time, the ambitious turn their attention to the other lines in dress, and so get to have a complete knowledge of every part and item of the profession—for in Paris dress and fashion are distinctly reckoned as being a profession rather than a trade.

The latter part of August, when Americans are almost the only people left in Paris, is the time when all of the freakish novelties are tried out. From the first of the month the workrooms are humming like beehives with business. All France knows full well that this is not really a time to launch any especial novelty in the shape of materials, and that radical departures of any kind from the modes that established themselves in the summer time are likely to reap only their trouble for their pains.

As one leading woman in the dressmaking profession put it: "The American trade is a vital element in our success; we cannot and could not and do not want to get along without it. They look to us for novelty and artistry combined, and we knowing our powers, present it. But, unfortuunately, so often when it is presented to them, they reject it, and demand something else. If they would only give us a chance to get rested, have a vacation after the hard work of our own season, which, as you know, does not close until early July, they would get far better service and ideas from us. And the annoying part of this "visitation"—for that is what it really is—is that your people over in the United States are by no means ready the last of August or the early part of September to order new clothes, to adopt new fashions and fabrics and colorings. They are busy wearing out what they have got, and do not want to think about their late autumn and early winter costumes before it is really necessary to do so. So it would seem that all this hurry and rush and anxiety in August is thrust upon us to no great gain for either side, after all."

As this great premiere says, it is truly impossible to forecast at this date exactly what will be most worn.

And it may not be amiss to mention, en passant, that this same leader of the mode speaks of experience in this matter. It is on record that her house—which, incidentally, numbers more American millionaire women among its clientele than almost any other in Paris—presented more than eighty original models in street, house, afternoon, reception, opera, dinner, and ball gowns—those clever designers will tell you that there is a subtle something that distinguishes each of these catalogued from the other—and of these not 5 per cent commanded sufficient orders for reproduction to even cover their workroom cost! The other 95 per cent of those originals were dead loss. So much for the late summer business that is created especially to meet the demands for novelties on the part of the American retail trade.

Now, as for the real novelties, it must be confessed that Paris almost invariably retains those for presentation to its own particular trade on return from the villegiatura, as the imperative country sojourn is termed.

The silk factories that create the new weaves and designs in silks and satins, materials of many kinds, weaves and weights, and the dye houses that coöperate with them in colorings, do not maintain their staffs of expert workers through July and August. They are ready in September to work on novelties that shall be presented to the grand monde early in October, and by the time that October figures on the calendar the American professional buyer has long ago taken passage and departed for his own shores, with such semblance of novelties as he may have been able to gather together in the late days of August or the first ten days of September.

But, just the same, there are certain signs and indications present even at this writing of what may be expected when the social season starts up once more.

And chief among these is the princesse gown.

I do not for a moment imagine that the old time princesse form is to be brought back again. Far from it. It is just that the long, straight lines that characterize this mode will be the leading ones of the coming season.

The many pieces and seams that went to constitute the old time princesse are being tried out, and, I am glad to say, are meeting with but little acceptance among fastidious fashionables. The favored construction for those one piece frocks of straight, unbroken line is a two piece lining, corsage and skirt, cleverly joined just below the waistline rather than at it. The corsage lining shows a tendency to fit more closely to the figure than heretofore, and the skirt is closely fitted over the hips, gored to flare somewhat from the knee line down.

And, to support the necessary fluffiness at the foot of even a heavy broadcloth or a heavy silk costume, the Parisian tailors have resort to the old time balayeuse, or dust ruffle. In the boxes of finery that are just passed through the customs house are many of these ruffings in lingerie materials, in the soft Scotch crin, lace edged, to be sewn into dancing frocks, while for the heavier dresses there are some in taffetas, and even some in a silk finished sateen with a scalloped edge, shirred to a heading, and all ready to be tacked into place.

Doris Blake Says

If you were born this week you are

Artistic.

> Have you a perplexing love affair in which you need the counsel of a friend? Write to Doris Blake, care "The Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply send stamped and addressed envelope.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

WERE you born this week? Then you were born under conditions which make you a valuable member of society. You have great capacity for enjoyment of the blessings of life and the faculty of drawing them your way. You are not quick to take offense and you have a good understanding of the advisability of minding your own business. You have a desire to know everything, but that desire does not extend towards the affairs of others. Although you are always ready to give advice, you do not offer it at inopportune times.

Whether as friend or associate you belong to the class of people whom the world sadly needs and of which there are too few. You are a lover of nature, especially in its animate forms. You love to be out of doors. You are a tireless worker, deep thinker, and logical in your judgments and opinions.

If you were born on the 26th or 27th you have a great deal of literary ability. You are never at a loss for words. In fact, you are sometimes loquacious, but there is always good sense to what you say. You are not given to uttering platitudes. You are conscientious. Sometimes you are easily irritated, set in your opinion, and a little domineering and blunt, but there is always kindliness back of it all.

Somehow people make a confidant of you, but you do not always keep their secrets. You find them useful as illustrations and sometimes the name slips out without your meaning to let it. You are intuitive, psychic, farseeing, musical, and generally well informed. You are a great reader and go through a book, getting the pith of its contents, while others are reading the title page and preface. The best proofreaders of manuscripts in the world have been born under this sign. No error in grammar or spelling escapes you, but as a reviewer of books you are apt to be too caustic. You are generally successful in business, although you seldom conduct it on a large scale without some lawsuits.

If you were born on the 28th or 29th you love music, art, and poetry. You are a fine judge of painting, and you are earnest in your praise of fine work but merciless in your scoring of poor work. You have no patience with poor work in any form of art.

You are fond of the good things of life and you want everything you can get to make you comfortable. You want the best of everything in material ways. You'll wear silk if you possibly can afford it, and eat at the best restaurants sometimes when you can't. It isn't extravagance. It's just common sense, you feel. If your circumstances hold you down to a rigid economy, though, you can be cheerful and happy with a little. But you don't hold your nose to the grindstone because you like the sensation. When you do have plenty you divide with others. You'll share your last crust. You are a very desirable person on the whole.

Persons born this week should marry those born between Dec. 23 and Jan. 20 or between April 21 and May 21 if they wish to be happily mated.

She Has Love Affair.

"Dear Miss Blake: I have a love affair concerning which I would like to have the counsel of a friend. I have been away for a year and have written him several times. I just received a letter answering the second one. Now he wants me to write him. He will tell me all the news. What shall I do about it? J."

I shouldn't worry much about this affair, if I were you. Write him, if you want to, and find out if he has any sort of explanation as to why he has not written sooner. Perhaps he has a good one. Any way one can't jump at conclusions until the other side has been heard.

Should They Marry.

"Dear Miss Blake: Do you think a man with auburn hair and brown eyes should marry a blonde? Should two brunettes ever marry? Or does it all amount to nothing?"

This matter of opposites marrying is all a beautiful theory, but if you are a brunette and fall in love with one of the same complexion, you're not going to give her up because of this, are you? No, I can't truthfully say that this matter of type is such a serious one as many people would like us to believe. It's congeniality, after all, that lasts.

Likes Her Mother-in-Law.

"Dear Miss Blake: A situation has arisen involving me, and I find myself puzzled as to the proper course to pursue.

"The mother of my fiancé is desirous of my spending a week with her at her home, the family consisting of herself, her husband, and two sons. While I have known my fiancé several years, my acquaintance with his mother is of recent beginning. We have taken a great fancy to each other.

"I have seemingly no reason to offer for not accepting the invitation, and I hesitate seriously about hurting her feelings, yet would it be the proper thing to accept it?

"If you can help me solve my problem I will be most grateful. PUZZLED."

Don't be puzzled any longer about a matter like that. Of course it is right and proper for you to go. In fact, it is the duty of your fiancé's mother to invite you to her home. If this custom was followed more generally by prospective mothers-in-law I feel quite sure that happier relations would exist.

Worship on Different Days.

"Dear Miss Blake: If a boy and girl were engaged, and they each kept a different day for the worship of God, and neither wanted to give up their day, what would you advise them to do? Which do you think had ought to give up?

"B. D. T."

That's something that no outsider can help you solve. It is absolutely between you two to work out. It is not a question which one ought to give up. There are no sides in such a matter.

A Single Order for Two.

MY friend Gertrude, an American girl, was making her first trip through England.

On boarding the train at Windsor one day she found herself in a second class compartment with one other occupant, a well set up, well bred looking man of about 30. For three hours of starts and stops the compartment was silent, the man, apparently bored by the outlying scenery, contenting himself with a stony stare at the partition in front of him, or occasionally dipping behind a copy of a newspaper. Once during the afternoon Gertrude, glancing impersonally past him, thought that she detected his own glance stealing hurriedly from her face.

Finally, when the train was halting at a station, a waiter from the railway lunchroom came out to take orders for tea. Gertrude, who sat near the door, ordered a pot of tea and wafers. Her companion ordered his tea. As the train was starting up, the waiter rapidly returned, and, bending through the compartment door, thrust upon Gertrude's lap a tray bearing two cups and saucers, one creamer, one sugar bowl, one plate of wafers, and one large pot of tea. The car door was slammed shut from the outside and the train moved on.

There was silence in the compartment. Gertrude arranged the cups—no sign of life from the opposite corner; she poured one cup brim full of steaming tea—no movement in the corner; she poured the second cup full to its brim—no recognition, from the haughty male opposite, of the joint ownership of the tray; and Gertrude was wondering all the time how she was to bridge the chasm of reserve—how to break the ice before its chill had cooled the tea to unpalatable lukewarmness.

Then, with the vivacity that belongs strictly to the American girl and the glint of mischief wholly Gertrude's, she reached for the sugar tongs, clasped with its tip a cube of sugar, and with blue eyes dancing but red lips sober and serious, softly inquired: "One or two lumps, please?"

A moment later the compartment was filled with a volley of deep, hearty laughter from the man, mingled with the merry trills of Gertrude's voice. And for three years Gertrude has poured tea in a pretty Yorkshire home of which she is mistress.

ETIQUETTE

by ELIZABETH VAN RENSSELAER

> Any question on etiquette will be answered if you write to Elizabeth Van Rensselaer, "Chicago Sunday Tribune." If you wish a personal reply inclose a stamped, addressed envelope. Please write on one side of the paper only.

ABOUT one thing be punctilious if you wish to show good breeding, and that is, take great pains to return promptly anything you borrow, whether it be money, a pocket handkerchief, a book, or umbrella. I mention the four most commonly borrowed articles. You can not be too punctual in returning any of these—especially money.

J. C. B.: I think that it would be quite proper for you to ask the young woman in question if you might call on her and her family some evening. If she says yes, ask what evening would be agreeable. It is possible that she may be so situated that an evening caller is not convenient. There are young women unfortunate enough to be members of families who do not welcome callers. Let us hope, however, this is not the case with your friend.

* *

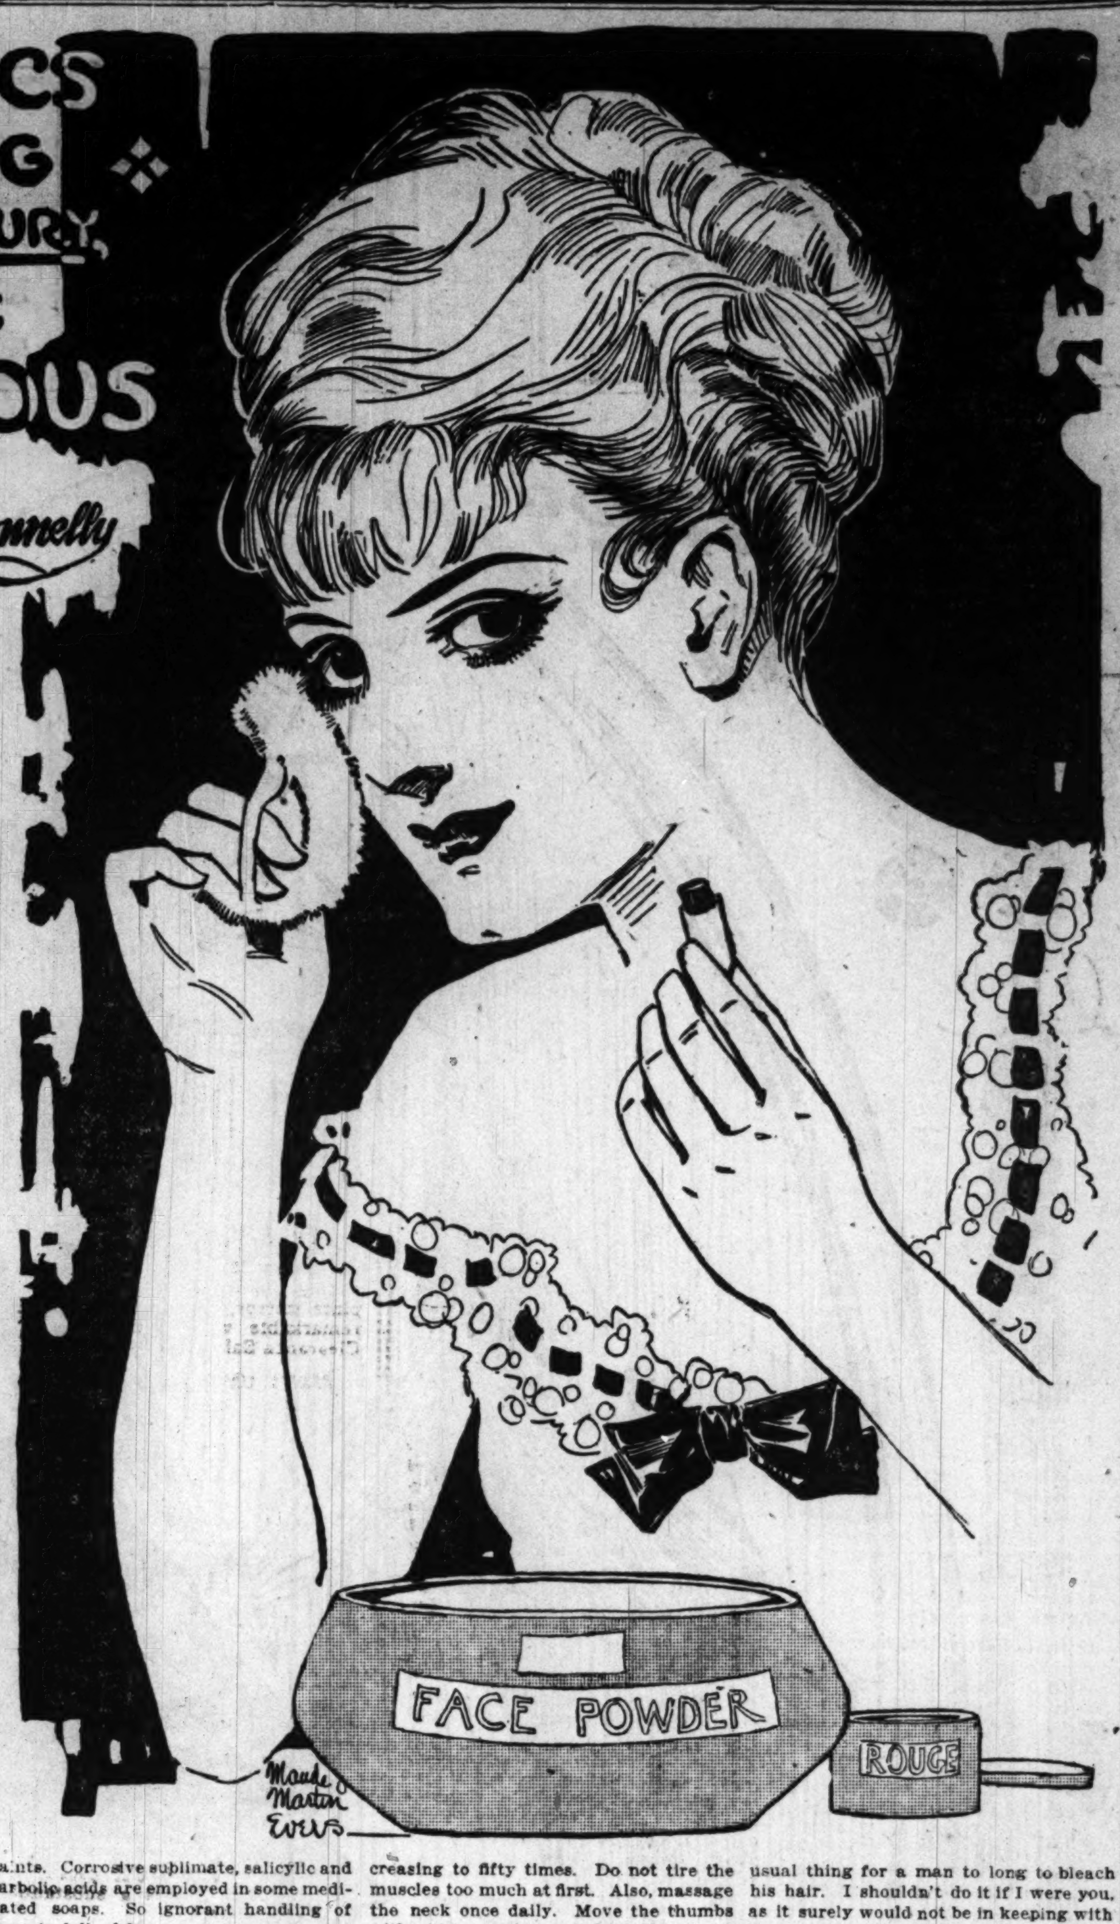
A. L.: It would be quite proper to ask the friend who borrowed your umbrella if she would be so kind as to return it. She could not take offense at the request if it were courteously made, but she ought to feel a little conscience stricken at not having returned it before you asked her.

* *

ALICE B.: I am afraid, my dear, that the only way that you can, with courtesy, decline to dance with the young man in question is to decline to dance that evening with any one. It is an unwritten law that a lady—to merit the term—must dance with whoever asks her at a private dance if he has been properly presented to her by some one she knows.

COSMETICS CONTAINING LEAD, MERCURY, and ARSENIC DANGEROUS

says Antoinette Donnelly



This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

[Copyright: 1915: By Antoinette Donnelly.]

IF women knew how much skin trouble is due to the use of cosmetics containing poisonous ingredients, they would be a lot more analytical in buying them. Know what is in the powder, the rouge, the cold cream, or anything that you apply to the skin of your face! And be sure there is no lead, mercury, or arsenic! Though bismuth is not as dangerous unless there is an abrasion in your skin, it is just as well to leave lone cosmetics containing this ingredient! In time it has an injurious effect. Corrosive sublimate is another name for mercuric chloride and something that should never be applied to your skin.

A moderate use of pure cosmetic powders is not harmful to the skin. Instead, they furnish protection to the skin against the ravages of wind and sun and thus preserve its texture. Unless your skin is exceedingly greasy or you use impure powders combined with a greasy application there is a danger of blackheads forming from the collection of powder and dirt in the openings of the fat glands. If you cleanse your face thoroughly every night before you go to bed, using a good cold cream or hot water, a scrubbing brush and a pure soap, you will not suffer any skin discomfiture because of the use of powder, provided, of course, it contains no poisonous substance.

Talcum and starch or rice powders are the most desirable bases for powders. Powdered starch and rice powder are the lightest and most absorbent. Talcum is equally good. It is highly absorbent and never changes. In case of greasiness a little calcined magnesia may be used.

Many powders on the market contain lead. I know a woman who had been using such a powder. Some friend recommended a cure for a pimple eruption on her face. It contained sulphur. The consequence was that after the sulphur application the woman actually turned black in the face. The discoloration lasted for nearly a week and she was a sorry creature. When sulphur comes in contact with lead on the skin the effect is disastrous to beauty. White lead is a deadly poison to the skin. A good formula for a toilet powder is boric acid, one part; starch, four parts; and talcum, five parts. Your druggist may perfume as you desire. Making powders at home is not a successful operation generally. They must be smooth and without the druggist's utensils it is difficult to get them smooth. A simpler formula and a very excellent one is boric acid, one part, and talcum, nine parts.

Liquid powder bought without thought as to what it contains has greater danger as a rule than the powdered form. It is put up primarily to bleach, and for that reason unscrupulous dealers are apt to put into their formula deadly ingredients.

Lip sticks and rouge preparations contain carmine. Carmine after long continued use turns the skin dry and yellow. Vermilion is an active poison. If you insist upon using rouge see that there are no harmful ingredients in it. And apply cream before you apply rouge and remove it thoroughly as soon as possible.

Some freckle lotions contain mercuric chloride in injurious quantities.

Numerous cases of eczema and other diseases have followed the use of injurious paints and freckle locations.

There is a skin application which is beneficial. It is called "Virgin Milk." It is a milky looking mixture, composed of tincture of benzoin and rosewater. It renders the skin soft and is said to prevent the formation of freckles. The formula is: Take of tincture of benzoin and glycerin each one ounce; mix well and then add two ounces of rosewater. Apply with your fingers after face and hands have been washed. Pure glycerin is irritating to most skins and should not be applied without dilution.

A word about the soap you use on your face. The natural color of soap varies from a dirty yellow to white. The natural color of the best quality of toilet soap is a creamy white. The dirty yellow of common laundry soap is the color of impure, cheap soap. Castile has a high reputation for superiority because it is made from olive oil. But there is no other soap so much imitated as castile soap. So you want to be sure that you are getting the pure article—not an imitation.

Green soap is a potash soap made with linseed oil and alcohol. Because it is irritating and useful to cut grease, it is too harsh to be used indiscriminately. Tincture of green soap is green soap dissolved in alcohol. Pure green soap, by the way, is not green at all. It is amber in color. When it is green it is colored. Medicated soaps should not be used without the advice of a physician. You must be as careful about using soaps as powders and paints. Corrosive sublimate, salicylic and carbolic acids are employed in some medicated soaps. So ignorant handling of them is full of danger.

The essentials of a good soap are that it is to be made from fresh clean fats, be free from an excess of alkali or coconut oil, not sophisticated with resin, and that it should lather freely. Avoid medicated soaps, cheap common soaps, and freak soaps which claim to produce special effect on the skin and confine yourself to soaps made by reputable manufacturers. If you want a soap for a curative quality you should get the advice of a skin specialist or expert advice of some kind.

Antoinette Donnelly's Answers.

WORKING GIRL: A daily bath of some kind is absolutely necessary for good health. You are the only one who knows whether you are physically fit to take a cold plunge. If your system is run down, your heart action weak, or if you are suffering from chronic indigestion a cold plunge is likely to tax your strength away beyond hope of any compensating reaction. If you feel chilly or languid, or if your finger tips become blue after a cold bath it would be much better for you to take a tepid bath. Sponge your arms and chest with cold water first before taking a cold plunge.

CONDUCTOR: Two of the causes of baldness are deficient circulation of blood in the scalp and dandruff. The scalp becomes tightened and prevents a proper flow of blood to the roots of the hair. The scalp should be thick and pliable and move freely over the bones of the skull. Try massaging your scalp at night for about ten or fifteen minutes. This will stimulate the circulation and the roots of the hair will get proper nourishment. I shall be glad to send you my instructions for scalp massage if you will send me a stamped, addressed envelope.

ANNA: Don't be distressed about your double chin. It may not show as much as you think. You are probably too self-conscious. This is a good exercise for the chin: Stand erect and twist the head first to one side, then to the other, stretching in each direction just as far as possible. Then drop the chin slowly on the collar bone. Follow this with a quick movement that is not a jerk. This brings all the muscles into play. Repeat ten times night and morning, gradually increasing to fifty times. Do not tire the muscles too much at first. Also, massage the neck once daily. Move the thumbs with rotary movement from the center of the chin to the ears. It requires untiring effort to reduce a double chin.

TIRED MOTHER: It is undoubtedly because your system is run down that you are subject to chills. When the blood forsakes the skin it clogs the heart and the internal organs and lays the train for diseases such as neuralgia, chills and congestion. Nothing is more effective for congested circulation than a ten minutes' bath at 85 degrees, covering the whole body, followed by a cold sponge bath, and immediate drying.

SARAH: Puffiness under the eyes and puffy eyelids are almost invariably due to some kidney trouble. Drinking lots of water frequently remedies the condition. It is necessary also to build up your general health with fresh air and exercise. It might be well for a physician to diagnose your case.

AMBROSE: I do not approve of bleaches for the hair, Ambrose. I have, however, a formula for a shampoo for blonde hair. This will bring out the pretty tints in the hair, and yet will not harm it in any way. It is such an unusual thing for a man to long to bleach his hair. I shouldn't do it if I were you, as it surely would not be in keeping with your complexion. If you wish the formula for shampoo, and will send me a stamped, addressed envelope, I shall be glad to mail it to you.

MISS ELSIE B.: If your red nose is the result of indigestion, you will have to be careful of your diet and get lots of exercise in the fresh air. See that your bowels are in proper working order, and do not allow yourself to become constipated. I think probably the redness of your nose may be caused from the pimple that is just wearing away. I shouldn't worry about it if I were you, for I am sure after all traces of the pimple have vanished it will be normal again.

* *

MISS BERTHA G.: Blackheads are merely pores which have become clogged with the day's deposit of dust. Scrub your face thoroughly at night with hot, soapy water, using a camel's hair complexion brush, and when perfectly clean rinse your brush and then use it to rinse your face thoroughly. Then massage with a good cold cream or skin food. I shall be glad to send you my formula for skin food and instructions for facial massage if you will send me a stamped addressed envelope.

All in Shallow Water.

My closest call came at a Chicago beach two years ago. My girl friends "dared" me to go in water up to my chin. I'd never been in before, therefore went where some boys were trying to play ball with an old sofa pillow. As I was gliding out serenely it hit me an awful one in the face.

I went over and down, down, until there didn't seem to be any bottom; then I came up, went down again, tried to yell, but inhaled about a gallon of pure water. On my second arrival at the top I clutched empty air, but didn't have time to take a breath—that's all I can remember.

The person who was nice enough to save me proved to be a man whose leg I had grabbed in my thrashing about. I've never learned to swim, and simply am a coward now. A. M. R.

The Sweets Were Cloying.

One Sunday afternoon I went to call on a girl friend whose sister had been entertaining several young men, one of whom brought chocolate creams. After she had passed them around she carelessly laid them in a chair. Had I but known. O, had I but known! But I didn't. Anyway, before the whole crowd, I sat down—remember I had on white trousers—in the soft, sticky chocolate creams. L. H. H.

Called Him "Skinny."

My boss is fat and he's sensitive about it. Behind his back we always called him "Skinny." Once, during the noon hour, when no one else was in the office, I was talking with my chum over the phone.

"Is the boss around?" she asked me.

"No. Skinny hasn't showed up yet." I laughed back at her.

But I was wrong. "Skinny" had showed, and when I looked up there he was, frowning at me, while I turned all the colors of the rainbow. MRS. M. L.

It Was No Mosquito!

A crowd of young folks had been playing tennis in the park, but it had become so dark and the mosquitoes so bad that we were obliged to stop. We were resting a bit before preparing to go home when I stepped up and killed a mosquito on the back of the neck of one of the boys. Imagine my embarrassment when I tried to remove the dead mosquito and found it to be a small brown mole. ORPHA.

"Gets-It" for Corns, SURE as Sunrise!

Any Corn, with "Gets-It" on It, Is an Absolute "Goner!"

Yes, it's the simplest thing in the world to get rid of a corn—when you use "Gets-It," the world's greatest corn-ridder. Really, it's almost a pleasure to have corns just to see them come off with "Gets-It." It just loosens the corn from the true flesh easily, and then makes it come "clean off." 48 hours ends corns for keeps. It makes the use of tape, corn-squeezing bandages, irritating salves, knives, scissors, and razors really look ridiculous. Get rid of those corns quickly, surely, painlessly—just easily—with "Gets-It." For warts and bunions, too. It's the 20th century way.

"Gets-It" is sold by all druggists, 25c a bottle, or sent direct by E. Lawrence & Co., Chicago. Doing for Others.

IN a large office building where many girls are employed there is a girl who is called the "Angel" by all the girls in the building. She is more widely known than any other girl, and is probably the quietest and most unassuming girl among the hundreds working in the various offices.

The "Angel" was given her title by a little 16 year old girl who fainted at her desk one day and was taken to the woman's rest room after being revived. While she was lying on a couch too weak and sick to stir, girls were constantly going and coming. Some of them, seeing the girl lying there, inquired what the trouble was and after expressing sympathy left her.

When she had just about made up her mind to ask one of the girls to get a glass of water for her, the "Angel" came in. Seeing the girl on the couch, she went over to her, and without waiting to be asked, brought her a drink and bathed her hot forehead and hands. She stayed with the little girl until she was able to go back to her office.

When it was time for the "Angel" to go home, she stopped in at the office where the sick girl worked, and told her she was going to ride home with her to see that she got there in safety. The little girl protested, as she felt she had been trouble enough, but her objections were overruled and she was accompanied all the way home.

On another occasion when this same little girl was ill, the "Angel" happened to go to the rest room while she was there and again took care of her.

This girl had never spoken to the girl who took care of her until the day she fainted, and she did not even know her name. She knew a girl who worked in the same office with the "Angel," and decided to find out all about her. When she met the girl she hastened to question her, explaining her reason for her interest. The other girl told her she was not the only one who was interested in Miss Lowe, which was the "Angel's" real name. She said she was wonderful to every one in trouble.

"When one of the girls in the office is sick," she said, "it is Miss Lowe who takes care of her. If any one has difficulty with her work Miss Lowe straightens it out. If there is a disagreement between any of the girls, Miss Lowe smooths things over. I don't know what we would do without her," the girl added. "The wonderful thing about her to me is that she does everything so quietly and without any fuss. When you try to thank her she says she has not done anything that any one else wouldn't have done. She is older than the other girls in the office, and thinks the older women in business should help the younger girls as much as they can. But she is wrong about others doing as much as she does. There are few of us who are willing to go out of our way to help others. If we can do something for a friend without inconveniencing ourselves we do it and feel that we have done something. I have worked with older women who seemed to resent the younger girls and would not think of putting themselves out to help them."

It is a real pleasure to hear of any one like Miss Lowe. I am afraid this girl is right when she says few of us are willing to help others if it means a little trouble. There is no question but that there are more "angels" needed in the business world.

Caught in the Act.

He was in the habit of smoking a cigar in the early days of our courtship, but as it caused me annoyance he readily promised to give up tobacco to gain my love. For many weeks after our marriage I never smelled even a whiff of smoke around him. One evening on going to the attic I suddenly came upon him, dressed only in his pajamas, seated on an old trunk enjoying a cigar. The look of confusion on his face caused me to shriek with laughter, and we then and there agreed that if he must smoke he should have a more comfortable place than a hot attic on a summer night. C. Calls Her "O, Skinnay" Now.

If there was one thing F— detested before we were married it was a fat person—in fact, he exacted a promise from me to jump in the lake if I ever became stout—he promised to do likewise. Now, after ten years he has gained at least fifty pounds and appears to be highly gratified with the fact, while I weigh the same as the day I married and he calls me "O! Skinnay." M. E. S.

Scorned Her Plea.

Before marriage my husband much admired what he termed my "fetching costumes," and said I was a "smart dresser." Five years after we were married I asked him for money for a new outfit before going back home to visit for the first time since our marriage. He replied: "Why do you want money for new clothes? You never have wanted any before!" MRS. J. G. M.

FOR THE SCHOOLROOM AGE:: PATTERNS by CLOTILDE DRAWN FROM EXCLUSIVE %% CLOTILDE DESIGNS

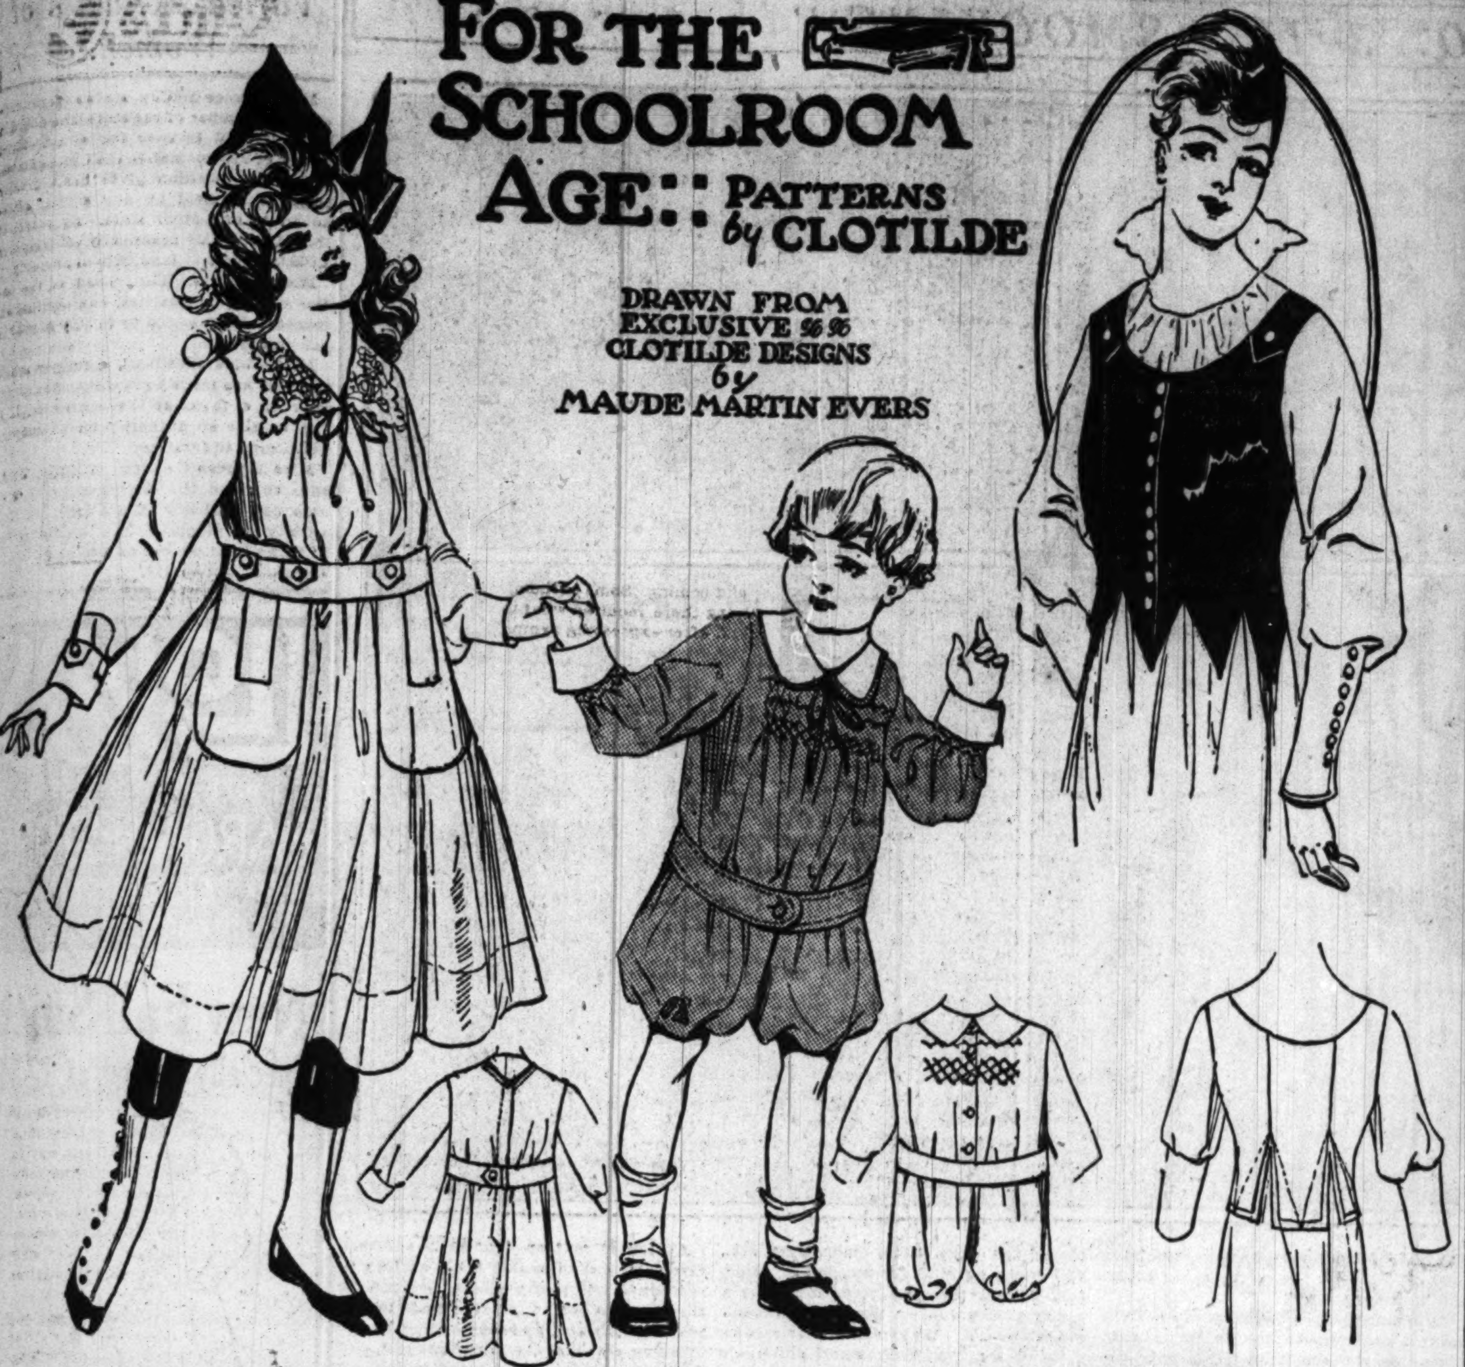
by
MAUDE MARTIN EVERS



1172—Rompers, 2 to 6 years. To be smocked or gathered. The fronts are cut all in one below the yoke. The knickerbockers are separate from body portion of back and joined to belt. For the 4 year size will be needed 3⅛ yards of 27 inch and 2⅜ yards of 36 inch material.

1173—Coat bodice, 34 to 44 inch bust. To be made with or without sleeves. When made without sleeves, to be worn over a separate guimpe or blouse. The neck can be finished low, with or without the tucker and flaring collar, or it can be cut half low or high with a stock collar. For the medium size will be needed two yards 36 inches and 1⅞ yards 44 inches wide, with 3⅛ yards 36 inches wide for tucker and ½ yard of lace 4 inches wide for collar.

1174—Girl's dress, 10 to 14 years. The plain bodice is closed at the back. The opening at the front is for effect only and is arranged over stay. The skirt is straight and gathered and joined to the bodice by means of a narrow belt, and tabs are attached to the wider belt that is cut with pointed ends. For the 12 year size will be needed 4 yards 27 inches, 3¼ yards 36 inches, and 1 yard of lace 3½ inches wide for collar.

THE question of dress for the small folks of the schoolroom is one in which good taste, or a vast amount of its opposite, may easily be displayed.

Those of us who have lived abroad, seen the school children of several countries, and enjoyed opportunity of observation as to their dress, their manners, their habits, and their education know full well that the higher one goes in the social scale the simpler is the dress of the children.

While resident in the south of France I oftentimes had opportunity to see the dresses and lingerie made to order for the (then) little daughters of the czar of all the Russias. The emperor of Russia is probably the wealthiest individual in Europe, but none the less his daughters wore but the simplest of wash dresses for every day use, and only the finest and sheerest of batiste and nainsook, with a wealth of hand embroideries, of course, for dress occasions.

Not a single silken frock was ever ordered for them while they were still in the schoolroom age. Since there was an English woman of prominent family at the head of their household—for the young princesses, or rather grand duchesses, as they are known, have their own independent entourage—the English sailor costume figured prominently in their simple wardrobes. This is the dress that we know here chiefly as a Peter Thomson, named for that clever English tailor who makes a specialty of English clothes for boys and girls both, and who, incidentally, has made a small fortune for himself in his New York shop.

The best of the shops, those catering to a wealthy trade, are displaying the little rompers, just like that of the illustration, made up in soft serge, which they declare will launder just like the proverbial pocket handkerchief. Several shades of a rather brilliant red seem to attract favorable attention; and these are smocked in black, or in navy blue, and occasionally in a soft tobacco brown that, besides being an unusual combination, is very attractive indeed.

At the women's exchanges one is always sure to find some excellent ideas in needlework; and there those same little rompers are shown in old rose and in several shades of pink denim, smocked with the scarlet embroidery cotton. They are to be seen likewise in white, old blue, and in navy blue linens of somewhat coarse weave, smocked with the several shades of blue that come in those inexpensive embroidery cottons and which have, too, the additional advantages of laundering excellently, even going through the clothes boiler without losing a particle of their soft and pretty coloring—a solid advantage this, when dealing with the play clothes of the small boy, or girl, either.

Now, while those shops and the women's exchanges likewise charge a handsome price for those little hand made garments—they simply must make some profit, you know—the woman who is at all handy with her needle and who likes to sew can make just as fetching a little romper for a mere fraction of what would be charged for them ready made. For pick-up work smocking offers many attractions, since there is no counting of stitches—no losing your place if you happen to drop it for a little while.

Besides the materials mentioned—the serge, linen, or denim—one can employ chambray, gingham, the darker outing flannels, the twilled cotton serges and cheviots, and a host of other equally inexpensive materials. The smartness of those little garments depends upon the cut and the workmanship rather than the expensiveness of the materials; and as the Clotilde patterns are the acme of smartness always one can achieve excellent results with the minimum of expenditure.

There is a certain quaint demureness about the dress that is shown today for the little maid. The years from 10 to 14 are usually rather awkward to dress, for the small girl is wont to take to herself several inches of growth quickly, and the designs that were both suitable and becoming just a few short months ago are suddenly too childish for her.

One does not want to put the growing child into adult fashions. The farther away one can keep her dress from looking too grown up, the better. There is nothing in the realm of clothes that is so ludicrous as to see a girl of a dozen years or so looking as though she were twice that age, and dressed in her mother's castoff garments at that. The more plainly and simply and inexpensively the small girl is dressed, the better. As a wise woman said one time, when speaking of her granddaughters, whose extravagant dressing she did not at all approve: "If we give them silks and satins and velvets when they are 8 and 10 years old, what will there be left to give them when they are twice that age and young women out in society? Let us try to keep them children just as long as we can. They will grow up all too soon, anyway, and have to face the world and all its problems and difficulties; so why hurry that day even by inference—why make them grown ups in dress before they have to be?"

The normal waist line is followed in this simple little frock, the waist and skirt portions being joined together by a belt or band and this concealed by the broader belt, upon which the pockets are hung. The fastening is down the center back and may be made either with buttons and buttonholes, the latter either worked or bound, or it may be done "blindly," that is, with concealed hooks and eyes or with snap fasteners.

The skirt is a straight length, applied with a single row of shirring, or it may be laid in plaits and pressed down for a brief length, just enough to make them hold the shape over the hips.

Although the design will develop well in wash materials, now that the cooler days are due, it might be well to suggest challis, Henrietta cloth (which is rapidly coming back into favor, especially the silk warp kind), a soft serge, or any one of those pretty plaids that are in for a long run of popularity. Plaids are always suitable for the little maid. Where they are used, a little softening touch is sometimes advisable, just a belt or cuff or both in black or navy blue velvet.

For the older schoolgirl there is one of those quaint, medieval looking bodices that are intended to be used over a blouse or guimpe, with long or short sleeves. As fashion favors the long sleeve more at present, perhaps it were well to follow that style.

Made up in black velvet, there will be many uses for this picturesque addition to the young girl's wardrobe, or it may be in black satin or taffetas, or made up in any of the silken weaves to match the coat and skirt suit of any of the later tailor made styles. The edges may be square tabbed or cut in points, according to the build and figure, and the fronts may be fastened invisibly, or buttoned, or laced together through worked eyelets. In making, it were as well to run a single row of collar featherbone in the front edges to hold the shape, and this same flexible cording might as well be run in the lower edges of this smart little garment.

HOW TO ORDER YOUR CLOTILDE PATTERNS.

In ordering a waist the size should be determined by the bust measure. Give the bust measure. In ordering a skirt the size of the hip is more important than the size of the waist, but give both the hip and the waist measure. Ten cents for each waist, skirt, or dress.

In ordering misses' patterns the age should be stated—12, 14, 16, or 18 years. Ten cents for each waist, coat, skirt, or dress.

In ordering children's regular patterns order them by the age of the child. Ten cents each.

Clotilde's patterns are made in New York exclusively for "The Chicago Sunday Tribune" and may be obtained through no other service. It is requested that customers allow one week before making complaint for nonreceipt. An extra 2 cent stamp will allow for letter postage and thereby hasten delivery.

What Feet Secrets Have You?

This department appears every other day in "The Daily Tribune."

Do you know a successful method of removing corns? Have you found a good way to treat aching, swollen, tired, or cold feet? Have you a good treatment for flat feet? Have you made your own feet light and airy? The Tribune will pay $1 for every letter published on personal experiences in the good care of feet. Address, Antoinette Donnelly, The Tribune, Chicago. No manuscripts will be returned.

Walking in the Dew.

There is nothing like a barefoot walk across a dew wet lawn to take all the aches out of your feet. If you can let the sun do the drying, so much the better. This has kept my feet in perfect condition, and at 35 I can walk and dance like any girl of 17. A. G.

She Hobbled Home.

For a number of years my feet were so tender and walking so painful that a day's shopping or a trip to the park was fraught with such racking torment that I hobbled home cross and irritable—a veritable nervous wreck. At the suggestion of a friend, I tried soaking my feet twenty minutes night and morning in cold salt water, followed by an alcohol rub, to harden them. I had my corn removed and was told my arches were badly broken down, almost to the point of causing flat foot. I discarded all high heeled shoes and supplied myself with common sense shoes and slippers of soft leather with rubber heels. I exercise by raising myself on tiptoe twenty or thirty times night and morning and now find walking a pleasure. I walk several miles each day and am regaining health, youth, and a comely figure. While I still envy people with pretty feet and fancy shoes, the comfort I have in walking is sufficient recompense for the loss. M. B.

Care of Tired Feet.

I am a man of 30 years and have suffered from aching, swollen, and tired feet. A year ago I was advised by a good friend of mine to use the following, which has helped me so that I feel like a new man:

Rubbing the soles of the feet with a cut lemon will freshen and ease them when fatigued, and in warm weather the following powder applied after the bath will correct a tendency to profuse perspiration or swelling: Alum, one dram; lycopodium, three drams; tannin, thirty grains.

The more the feet are bathed and rubbed the better their condition and the shapelier and the less their tendency to enlarge. A careful pedicuring should follow the hot foot bath semi-weekly and all callous places should be gently scraped with a file or pumicestone. If this treatment is followed and the affected parts are meantime protected by a chamois plaster having a hole in the center the feet will soon be relieved from affections and kept free from them. W. S.

WEEPING ECZEMA ON BOY'S NECK

Shoulders, Around Waist and On Face. Like Ringworm. Could Hardly Sleep. Well in 2 Weeks.

HEALED BY CUTICURA SOAP AND OINTMENT

"My little boy was troubled with eczema when about one year old. It started something like ringworm on the back of his neck, then on his shoulders, around his waist and at last spread to his face. He had what was called weeping eczema. Clear water would come out in drops most all the time. The skin would get red and the water oozed out of it. His clothes rubbed the places on his back and they stuck tight to his clothes. He could hardly sleep at night; he would roll and scratch.

"So I sent for Cuticura Soap and Ointment and he was well within two weeks." (Signed) Mrs. H. A. Brown, Atwood, Kan., March 26, 1915.

MARION HARLAND'S HELPING-HAND

By MARION HARLAND

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

"WILL you please tell me how to make rope portieres from chenille? And have you a formula for a permanent stove polish? If so, will it burn off if the fire is hot? I would like to have a recipe for bisque ice cream. I hope I am not asking too much at one time, but the Corner is a wonder. It seems to me that it can give anything one asks. "MRS. R. L. S."

I shall have to refer your question about the chenille rope portieres to some of our fancy work experts. I am sorry to say I cannot tell you how to make them. As to the permanent stove polish, I have never heard of such a thing. I have excellent directions for making stove polishes, but they all wear off or burn off in time, and I would be glad, for my own sake, to learn of any that do not. Can some of our housekeepers supply a formula for such a preparation? The following is the recipe for bisque ice cream: Dry half a pound of macaroons, using those that are a little stale, by placing them in a cool oven until they will crush readily with a rolling pin. They should be fine crumbs. Make a custard of two eggs and a pint of rich milk, heating the milk first with one cup of sugar, and when this is dissolved adding the eggs carefully. Cook until the mixture looks creamy—about three minutes in a double boiler—take from the fire and put aside to cool, putting with it a pint of cream. When cold pour it into the freezer and turn until about half frozen, add the crushed macaroons, freeze hard, and let it stand for a couple of hours before serving.

Offers Air Cushion and Truss.

"If you will kindly send me the name and address of the woman with the four children who asked for an air cushion for her invalid husband who is suffering from tuberculosis, I will see that she gets it. You may also send me the name and address of a person desiring a truss. It is for a person with a waist measure of about twenty-five inches. The truss is new and complete, with leg straps and a small pad. L. R."

The sufferer from tuberculosis has already been supplied with the needed air cushion, but I have no doubt the offer of this kindly Cornerite will be eagerly accepted somewhere else. So will her proffer of the truss be welcomed, and I am personally grateful to her for the generosity she displays.

Pictures for Invalids.

"Please tell me, if you can, how much a switch of natural curly auburn hair is worth. It is made on three long stems, weighs three and three-quarter ounces and is about thirty inches long. It has never been worn. I enjoy the Corner and often see things asked for that I could give, but I live so far away that it would cost more than they are worth to send them. I can send views of this part of the country to any shut-ins that would like to have them if you will please send me addresses. M. W."

A letter from far-off Alaska! I wish I could give the information about the switch, but I cannot. Who can help her? I am sure there will be applications for the post cards. We welcome M. W. to the Corner.

Calico Pieces Great Help.

"I saw in the Corner that Mrs. E. M. had calico and percale pieces to give away. I would be glad to receive some. As I have a family of small children, it would be a great help to me and I would be much obliged to her and to you. MRS. E. E. D."

Again I must say with regret that the pieces had been given away before the arrival of this letter. Has any one else similar pieces she would like to present to this correspondent?

Has a Poor Eye.

"I read the Corner and know the good it has done. I would like to ask the kind readers to help by prayer a baby that has a poor eye. The mother prays to God that many blessings may fall upon those who will help her in this prayer. "MRS. V. F."

I am sure that all of us who are interested in babies—and who is not?—will pity this mother and child in their distress and will do for them all that our prayer and helpful wishes sent towards them can possibly accomplish.

Making Portieres of Acorns.

"Will you ask Mrs. W. E. H. if she will not be so good as to send me some acorns? I am trying to make a pair of portieres, and if the acorns could be mailed to me by parcel post I would be most grateful. Perhaps there is something I could do in return. I can sew anything, and do stitching and all sorts of crocheting. I have to work for my living, but I would always take time to answer her letters, and would be glad of post cards or anything else like that. I am anxious to have a pair of portieres, and as I cannot buy the expensive ones I thought I would write and ask for the acorns if I could get enough of them to make the pair. MRS. M. G."

This correspondent lives in a large city, which in a measure explains her inability to collect acorns for portieres. Remembering the letter of Mrs. W. E. H., I do not question her willingness to do anything she can to cheer the lives of others, but I wonder if the Cornerite who makes this appeal has any idea of how many acorns it would take to make a pair of portieres, or of the labor which would be involved in the task. More than that, the nuts would be a constant temptation to mice and rats, and she might find that she had done an inconvenient thing for herself when she brought a collection of nuts into her house. I do not wish to appear discouraging, but I think there might be some other and easier way of securing the hangings she desires. Can some one else give a suggestion which may help her a little?

Value of Old Coin.

"Will you please advise me through your Corner of the value that is placed on silver dollars dated 1799? This coin is wonderfully preserved and I am of the opinion that a liberal payment would be offered for it. N. A. S."

I cannot tell the value of such a coin, but I am happy to lay the question before our numismatists in the hope that some of them may be able to answer this query. Unfortunately this correspondent was another of those who omitted to give her address, but I will print any replies that may come in the Corner.

Catalogue of Coin Values.

"Can you tell me where I can find a catalogue or price list of the values of old coins? If there is a demand for them I would like to know it, as I have many on hand. MRS. H. M. L."

Another inquiry to be referred to those learned in such things. I have the address of this correspondent, and will send it to any one who can give her the information she asks.

How to Can Peaches.

"As it is getting to the time to can fruit I write to tell you how I put up peaches. I peel them and cut them in halves and put them into a pan set on the stove. Then I let them come to a boil and keep stirring so that all may become heated together. They must not be allowed to boil a long time. When they strike a good boil pull the pan to the back of the stove and can the peaches at once. The juice from the fruit will be as clear as crystal and really thick. I put up a lot of fruit every year and a great many peas and beans, and they always keep fine. "MRS. P. C."

A recipe that is the result of personal experience is always more valuable than one based on theory alone. Let me add to the foregoing instructions that the jars should be at hand, clean and hot, the tops and the rubbers in good order, and the cans should be closed as soon as the fruit and the juice are in them. Then, when the fruit has cooled, another turn should be given to the tops to tighten them.

To Piece a Quilt.

"I am a little girl 12 years of age and I am trying to piece my first quilt. I have a few flags that have come as premiums with tobacco and I would very much like to have some more. If you know any one who would give me some I would be much obliged if you would speak of me. You can put my address in the paper if you wish. B. D."

Can some one help this child with the flags she asks? It is impossible to comply with her request and put her address in the paper, but I have it on file and will supply it to any one who wishes to be represented in the little girl's first bedquilt.

Sandpaper Shiny Cloth.

"I see that N. W. asks in the Corner for the remedy which appeared some time ago for the shine on one's clothes. The method is to rub the shiny places gently with fine sandpaper. The shine is caused by the wearing off of the nap on the goods and the rubbing with the sandpaper raises enough nap to remove the shiny look. I enjoy reading the Corner very much. I am old and I seldom see a new idea put forth, but this is one, and I am glad to remember it and to pass it on. C. M. E."

Many of us will be grateful for this suggestion as to how to take away the shiny appearance of worn cloth. Let me emphasize the correspondent's advice to use the sandpaper gently. If it be applied too vigorously it will roughen the surface of the material too much and make a thin spot which will give way readily. Moreover, the sandpapering cannot be continued indefinitely. The cloth will seldom stand more than one treatment and then there is no more nap to raise. The finer kind of sandpaper must be selected, not the coarse, heavy sort, which will be more likely to tear the goods than to raise the nap.

Wants Belgian Hares.

"Can you give me the address of some one who raises Belgian hares? I would like to get a pair if I can, and thought you could perhaps help me through the Corner. We have some old music to give away if any one cares to send postage for it. J. W. H."

This query I shall have to refer to the Corner. I cannot answer it myself. It is impossible to give addresses in this department, but I will file the name and address of J. W. H., and if any one writes for it who can supply the desired information I shall be happy to send it. I have no doubt that there will be requests for the music.

Coincidences I Have Known.

"The Tribune" will pay $1 for each letter published on "The Most Striking Coincidence of My Life." It may be sad or funny, but it must be real. Write on one side of the paper. No manuscripts returned. Address Coincidence Editor, "The Sunday Tribune," Chicago.

Born to the Tripletts—Triplets.

An odd coincidence took place last month in my home, which is in a small Illinois town. Triplets were born to a Mr. and Mrs. Triplett, who are neighbors of mine. To complete the coincidence, they were born on the third of the month. M. W. A.

Here Comes the Sport.

Two or three years ago a coincidence occurred which makes me laugh every time I think of it. A friend and myself were visiting a seventh grade class of a public school. A sentence of the grammar lesson gave trouble, so the teacher asked a boy named Charles to read the sentence again. In a loud, clear voice he read:

"Now comes the sport!"

Just then the door opened and admitted the principal, attired in a new spring suit of a large check, tan shoes and a gay checked necktie.

The pupils were not punished for laughing, because the teacher was blessed with a sense of humor. E. L.

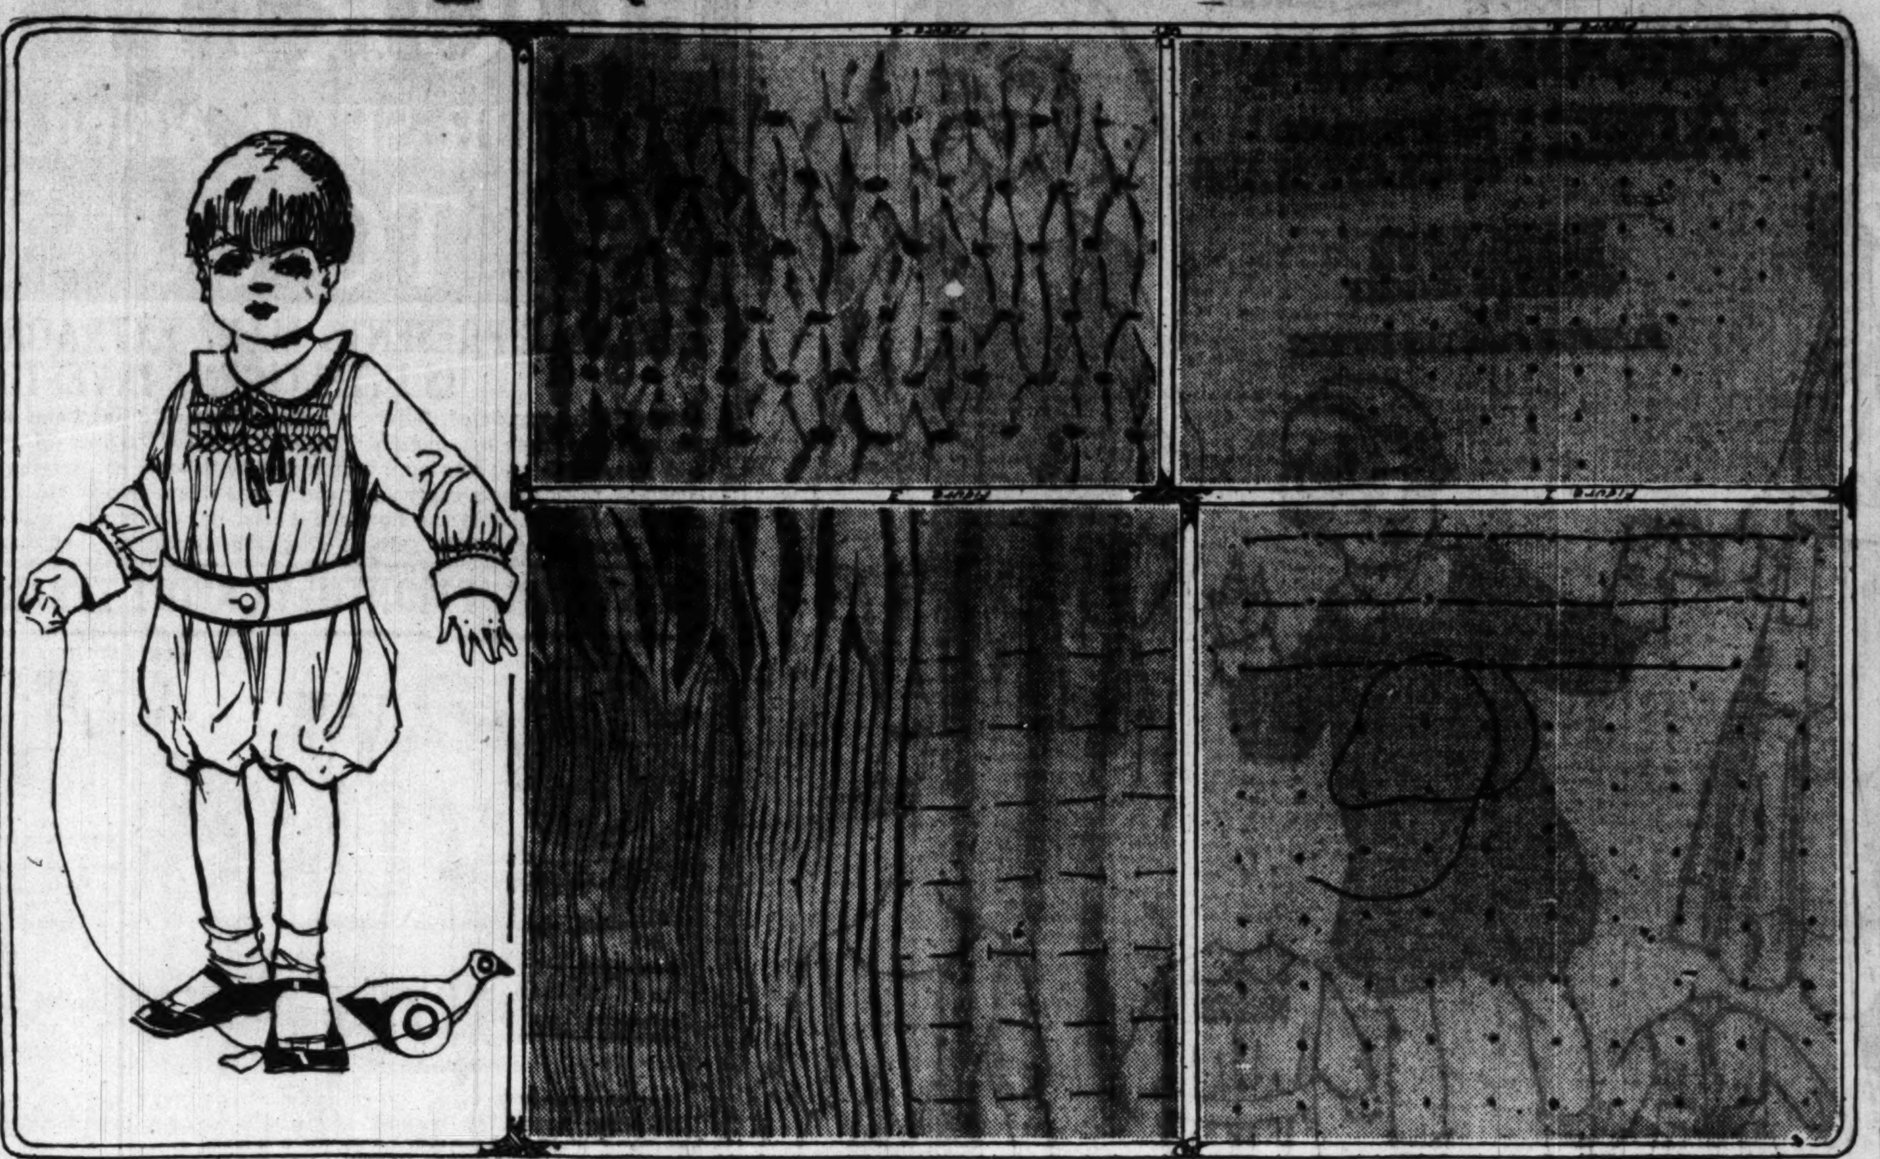
Killed in Battle.

In October, 1913, I left England to come to America. The day I was leaving my friend and I had our pictures taken. In due course a copy of the picture arrived, and as is often the case, was thrown aside.

Last week while tidying up a little, I came across this picture, which immediately revived old memories. I began to think, "I wonder what John is doing now; I suppose he's in the army now."

The same day I had a letter from my sister saying that he had been killed in battle. W. R.

DESIGN NO. 3 IN "SMOCKING."



This is the third and last of the series of designs for "smocking."

Mark off the rows of dots with a pencil and ruler, or use the pattern as above. The steps in preparing the material are clearly shown in illustrations numbered 1, 2, 3, and 4. Taking a short stitch under the dot and a long one between gives best results. A No. 6 to No. 8 needle and any of the colored cottons will prove best in work.

The pointed design shown in figure 2 makes a most effective finish used for yokes, sleeves, etc. In arranging this make your dots so that they are of a number divisible by four, with none remaining—20, 28, 32, etc. Leave the space of one dot between points.

In arranging the shirring to fit a pattern leave a long thread at the end of each row. Then place the shirred goods upon the pattern you will cut by and ease the shirring threads to suit. Fasten off at once.

The wash cottons that are usually employed for cross stitch, embroidery, etc., will make up well for smocking. Blue, tan, brown, red, and green make for a pretty contrast when used on white and tan materials. Wash silk is not recommended for smocking small children's wear, since such garments usually require rather strenuous laundry proceedings.

A Clotilde pattern—No. 1,172—has been especially cut to enable those wishing to reproduce this pretty design to complete the garment correctly. It is made in 2, 4, and 6 year sizes, and may be had by addressing Clotilde, CHICAGO TRIBUNE, and inclosing 10 cents, price of pattern. A 2 cent stamp additional will insure an earlier delivery.

The GARDENER AT WORK

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

BED FOR SHOW PLACES.

FLOWER beds for decorations in public grounds are in a class by themselves. The scarlet cannas, pink geranium borders, yellow hedges of coreopsis, or barriers of rosy hollyhocks, banked with vivid greens, are intended to paint pictures in color for the passing automobilist, or to attract the attention of the wandering tourist on a distant path in the parks.

At close range the fanciful shaped beds and brilliant ribbon borders are not companionable. One can enjoy them far away more than close by. Scarlet geranium beds, vivid masses of golden glow, and flaming cannas in formal order trim private grounds. But when framed in perfect turf, with backgrounds of emerald lawn, the real home gardener feels that he is looking at a picture or a painted canvas. The art of arrangement has run to the extreme and parted from nature.

Formal gardening is a science by itself. There are conditions in parks and public grounds on a large scale in which it is the best way to plant. The floral adornments at San Francisco and at San Diego are designed to contribute to color the architectural scheme. Secondary is the intention to display California flora.

When masses of color are used in informal gardens, good taste recommends that the values of blues (delphiniums), reds (bee balm), yellows, and rosy hues should be of similar intensity. If, for example, there is a splendid stand of larkspur and pale pinks, and orange calendulas of vivid tones, the blue will make a spot by itself, the yellows another, and the pinks fade. The blues will be duller than if there were intermediates of green and white leading to the warm pink hollyhocks, or a thickt of coreopsis. Color questions are worth study.

In the Parks.

"Is this a public garden or a flower show?" asked a stranger near a perennial border in one of the parks. He had two women amateur gardeners with him, and they were in search of information. They were looking for a gardener to answer questions.

The attitude of the inquiring visitors suggests the possibilities of public gardens to inform city gardeners. The city born have not had experiences in home gardens in the country. The new wave of garden enthusiasm has opened unexpected visions in yards, vacant lots, porch boxes, and window planting. Suburban life is more artistic than it used to be. Trees are planted and cared for, perennial borders established, and color effects created by annual flowers.

In late August the visitor to the Humboldt park gardens, the hardy borders on the Wooded island or Grandmother's garden in Lincoln park bids good-by to the festive midsummer phlox, rudbeckias, centaureas, and coreopsis, and looks for the lobelia cardinalis, liatris, golden rod, and asters. The summer bloomers linger on, their season extended, but the fall flowers of yellows, whites, purples, and violet blues take the front of the stage.

Borders of mixed plants give thrills of surprises. Not far from the Shakspeare monument there is a rich group of Sedum spectabile, old fashioned stone crop, and across the strip of lawn is a group of snowy tuberoses. In the thicket that waves its margin on the western border is an interesting company of asters, turtlehead, meadow sage, rudbeckias, sneezewort, tickseed, snake root, and cerastum.

FRIENDS OF TREES—The white marked tussock moth has begun its seasonal work. The winged moth attracted no attention when it was abroad. When the larva or caterpillar hatched on the under side of leaves it might have been known by its bright red head, velvety black back, and trimmings of yellowish stripes. It had a pair of black plumes on its head and four conspicuous tufts of cream colored hair on its body. The young caterpillars eat the green matter of leaves and, their mischief done, migrate to crevices of the tree trunks, fences, walls, or porches and spin cocoons of silky thread to cover themselves while they are being transformed to the next stage of their career. It is easy to discover these cocoons by the hundreds on city trees. The eggs remain dormant all winter and begin to hatch in May or June. Insect pests and birds prey upon them, but every one who has an infested tree can destroy the larvæ now, and the egg masses later in the fall. Poke sticks against the cocoons, brush them out of the crevices in the tree bark, and burn them. A band of cotton batting around the trunk will prevent others from crawling from the ground. A stiff brush can clean the bark. Spraying young foliage in the spring with a liquid of four pounds of arsenate of lead to fifty gallons of water is a preventive. It must be used carefully.

READER—Salix viminalis is the osier or basket willow. It is profitable for basket making.

MRS. L. H.: Shepherd's Purse and Lambs quarters have the reputation of being dens of thieves. You may trace the aphis, green fly, and other pests of your garden to their breeding nests in the weeds. It is a unique idea to encourage a border of them next the fence. If you wish to keep them spray also with kerosene emulsion and nicotine preparations.

JANE D.: Black plant lice are harder to kill than the green sort. A spray of strong tobacco water or nicotine preparation will destroy them.

A READER: Morning glory vines or wild cucumber wilting must be pulled out. You cannot restore them. Planting the seeds of wild cucumbers this fall will give vines next spring.

READER: No, it is not necessary "to keep a drug shop" to have enough insecticides for the pests in your garden. It is a good plan to have a small closet under a porch or a box out of the way where one can keep strong tobacco dust, hellebore, slugshot, a powder gun, and a sprayer. Arsenate of lead may be added to this stock.

* *

MRS. HASTINGS: A group of hardy plants may die without any apparent reason. Insects and fungus are always on the warpath. When your handsome sweet williams are attacked by the enemy dig them out and, after working the soil, plant something else there. Start sweet williams in another place. By so doing the fungus, or whatever disease it may have been, may vanish for lack of the right sort of victims.

DISGRUNTLED: Every business of life has its setbacks. The earth would be smothered in flowers and fruits if insects did not keep them back. The fight against garden pests is a righteous combat and the rose bush you save is worth it. Do not give up against a few pesky cutworms.

ROSE GROWER: Flowers of sulphur are used on the mildew that appears after the midsummer shoots of the roses are grown. Keep the soil broken with the hoe or cultivator, feed with bone dust, and after a while dilute liquid manure until it is the color of tea and use that as a tonic. Scattering bone dust increases the root fibers near the surface. It is best to have a deep rich bed under the roots.

* *

MISS G.: Prepare the soil for the perennial seedlings now. Veronica longifolia subsessilis, trollius, phlox decussata, lupins polyphyllus, and heucherua should be included in your list.

Does Woman Ever Propose?

He Dreamed It.

When I was young I had to work in a store all day, and at night when I went to see my girl I would sometimes grow sleepy. One evening, when I was especially tired, I began to nod. My girl wanted to marry me, and thinking this was an opportunity, she softly said, "Will you marry me?" In my sleep I was nodding and when she asked the question I gave what seemed to her an affirmative nod. We are married, but she denies ever having proposed to me. G. A. H.

Leaving a Note for Mother.

Jack was calling one evening and suggested that we go for a stroll. Mother had gone out for a while, and I said, "I'll leave a note for mother saying we're gone." Just then his eyes happened to meet mine and I foolishly blushed and added "for a walk." Jack said, "Yes, maybe you'd better add 'for a walk.'" Now when Jack, my husband, wants to tease me he declares that I not only proposed but proposed an elopement! L. F. M.

Gave Him First Choice.

I once knew a girl who went with a fellow steadily for nine years, and no matter what the weather was, he always came to see her every Wednesday, Saturday, and Sunday night. But after nine years she grew tired of having him come up without saying anything of marriage, although he always told her he loved her, so she asked him abruptly the next time he called, "Do you want me or don't you, because there is another man who is willing to marry me tomorrow if I say the word." He answered that he was perfectly satisfied the way things were and didn't care to marry, so she rang up the other fellow and told him to come to her house. He came and she told him that she would marry him in two weeks if he still wanted her. He did, and after five years of happy married life she says she never regrets that night when she asked the other man of his intentions and gave herself to this one. C. S.

Two Words Did the Work.

I had called on the favored one about six months and could not get up courage to say the words I wanted to say.

One day I said, "You will get married one of these days."

She laughed and looked so shyly sweet as she said, "I don't know; I'm almost 30."

"That's not too old," I answered.

"For you," she murmured.

Those two words did the work. D. T.

Used to Like the Squint.

Before we were married she used to tell me she never tired of looking into my eyes, which seemed to reflect my very soul. The other day while dressing our youngest hopeful she looked at him sadly and said, "I do believe Jee, he's going to have squint eyes like yours." J. R.

The Tribune Cook Book

by JANE EDDINGTON

All recipes have been scientifically tested by Miss Eddington with current market materials and are indorsed by her.

This department appears every day in "The Daily Tribune."

WE have reason to believe that the early wines, the wines of history, were vinegars, that is, that the makers did not know how to prevent them from going on to the vinegar stage. Our present word for vinegar comes from the greatest wine making country of the world and means simply sour wine (vin aigre).

If the same prejudice could be aroused against vinegar that already exists against wine the world would unboubtedly be infinitely better off in health. If we might banish vinegar for everything but flavoring purposes the gain would be incalculable.

But many people will ask, "How can we get along without pickes?" We may answer that the world has learned to get along without various stimulants and is the better for it. A stimulant does not need to be morally or instantly degrading to be bad.

The great bulk of commercial pickles probably are used as a condiment when the food of a meal is so badly cooked and so horrid of flavor that the piquancy of the pickle is the only thing that makes it tolerable at all. Pickles are the worst sort of a garnish with a sandwich, for it is much more harmful to eat pickle with bread than with meat. A constant diet of beans and catsup is as bad. Look out for anæmia in any of these cases. Harmful in any case, the pickle from an open jar in a cheap eating place is positively destructive.

The relish, which is a pickle of a sort, is a worldwide institution, but so are alcoholic drinks. The relish or pickle is more necessary usually to the drinker than to other eaters, for such people rarely chew their foods. Any gratification they get from tastes must be foods which give taste instantaneously like pickles and drink. However, the relish that is eaten but a few days after it is prepared, like the "tourshou" of the Turks and Greeks, is not as worthless a food as one in which the vinegar has had time to stiffen every bit of cellulose in the vegetable used. The "tourshou" is in many cases either made or served with olive oil, so it has that much food value and is much less harmful than the chutneys of England and India, which are so highly spiced.

The boiling of vinegar destroys the minute forms of life in it, which ultimately make cloudy films and mother, so that it is best to boil it even when it is to be poured plain and cold over any pickle material, as in the making of quick relishes or what is sometimes called "lazy wife pickle." This latter is the easiest of all the pickles to make, and the cucumbers, which should be of medium rather than gherkin size, are soon eatable and safer than when older, but they will keep for months.

The proportions for this pickle are: To one gallon of vinegar, one cup each of salt, mustard, and sugar and a horseradish root. Wash cucumbers well and drain them, then throw them into the mixture and cover, not seal. The "lazy wife" does not boil the vinegar, but others will.

Celery Relish.

The following is a "tourshou": Take any number of the tenderer stalks of celery, wash and cut up into inch long pieces, put in a stone jar or deep bowl, cover the whole with vinegar and a tight cover. In a few days, two or three, this will be ready to use. Some salt should be added, and any other seasoning to taste may be. A few cloves of garlic are commonly added. Garlic may be pickled in the same way, even the whole bulb without peeling. Dry onions are prepared in the same way, and covered with cooled boiled vinegar, but cooled salted water is also used. For pickling fruits tourshou style, wines and sugar are used, and they are left in the sun.

Corn Relish.

A great many people think a corn relish one of the best. The following recipe was given me several years since by a fine housekeeper: Part 1—Four large onions, one large cabbage, eight red peppers, twenty ears of corn, one and a half cups of sugar, one-half cup of salt, one quart of vinegar. Bring these to a boil. Part 2—Three tablespoons of mustard, one tablespoon of turmeric, one-half cup of flour, one level tablespoon of celery seed, one scant quart of vinegar. Dissolve mustard, flour, and turmeric in the vinegar until there are no lumps, add to the other ingredients, and cook all for thirty minutes. This makes six quarts.

Red Cabbage Relish.

The following relish is one I adapted from the French and tried cooking it, in which fashion it was agreeable, though on the whole perhaps less wholesome, yet with the added food value of a fat. Take off the outer and imperfect leaves of the cabbage, wash and cut up as for cold slaw. Put into an earthern crock, powder with fine salt, and leave in a cold place for two days, stirring several times in order that the salt may thoroughly penetrate the cabbage. By using more salt one may shorten the time. If but one small cabbage is used there will not be any liquid to drain off, but there will be if a larger quantity is used. When it is ready slice one or several onions into the bottom of the crock, tie up some whole peppers, a clove or two, and whatever spices you choose, in a bit of cheese cloth, and cover the whole with either cold or boiling vinegar, then leave for twenty-four hours.

Garlic may be used instead of onion. The sliced onion, which will be as red as the cabbage, may be served separately as a hors d'oeuvre. To cook this put two or three tablespoons of bacon fat in the frying pan, then put in two cups of the cabbage relish, adding for each cup used one-half cup of cold water, and cook until the cabbage is soft. Any one who likes cooked cabbage will like this.

Beet Relish.

There are a great number of beet relise, some made for the day and some for the can. Here is one made to be used at once, although it will keep if due precautions are used: One quart of boiled beets chopped fine, one quart of raw cabbage chopped fine, one cup or less, according to taste, of grated horseradish, one cup of granulated sugar, one even tablespoon of salt, and pepper to taste. Vinegar enough to mix well.

WARNING TO USERS OF HAIR REMOVERS

Don't experiment with so-called superfluous hair removers.

If you use a simple toilet preparation and it proves to be worthless you only lose money. It is a very serious matter, however, when you use a doubtful hair remover, because it will either result in permanent disfigurement or cost you many dollars and take months or possibly years to gain control of the growth after it has been stimulated by the use of such preparations.

It is a waste of time to use pastes and rub-on preparations which merely remove hair from the surface of the skin. To rob hair of its life sustaining force, you must devitalize it by attacking it under the skin as well as on the skin. Nothing but DeMiracle, the original liquid depilatory, can accomplish this result.

Imitations of DeMiracle are as worthless as pastes and rub-on preparations because they lack certain ingredients that DeMiracle alone contains which give it the power to rob the hair of its vitality. Remember, DeMiracle is the only depilatory that has a binding guarantee in each package which entitles you to your money if it fails. Insist upon the genuine DeMiracle and you will get the original liquid hair remover. Others are worthless imitations—refuse them.

DeMiracle is sold at all good stores, including the Public Drug Co. and Buck & Rayner's five stores. The truth about the treatment of superfluous hair mailed in plain sealed envelope on request. DeMiracle Chemical Co., Dept. E, Park Ave. and 129th St., New York.—Advertisement.

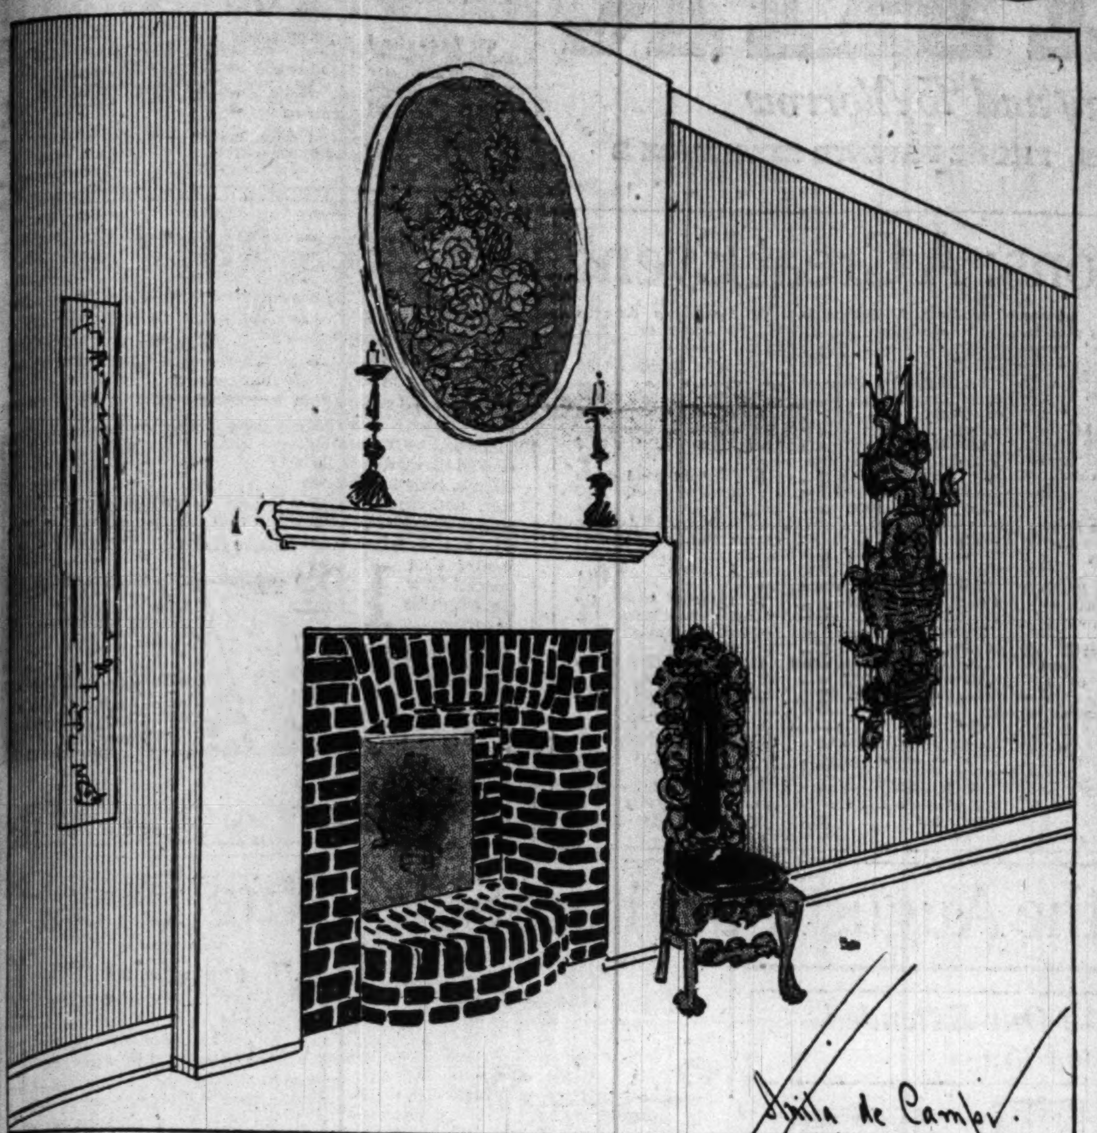
The Home Harmonious

"Crowding" Pictures Robs Each of Individual Merit.

Anita de Campi



IN no department of home decoration undertaken by the untrained home maker is good taste more commonly violated than in the selection, framing, and hanging of pictures. Pictures in the average house are poorly chosen, poorly assorted, atrociously framed, and wretchedly hung.

It is the first thing that the professional decorator when called in consultation "gets after." "Nearly all of those pictures," he almost invariably declares, "must go." This mandate is usually in accord with the tendency towards good taste in all things that sums itself up in one word—"simplify."

Do away with all but the essentially lovely. You will find after judiciously discarding a number of things of doubtful beauty that the decided beauty of those that remain will be tenfold intensified. It will be like the weeding of a flower bed. The right will be garnered and the destruction of the wrong must not be regarded as waste but as wisdom. Don't be afraid to discard things that you no longer like. Give them away, sell them, burn them up, or put them in storage; but don't let them stay to cloy the things that you know are really good.

A few simple suggestions may serve to guide against the most prevalent mistakes. First of all, few pictures are better than many (some modern decorators aver that none at all is better than any). One to a wall space is really quite sufficient. A conglomeration of pictures blunts susceptibility to the appeal of each individual picture. A subject that might elicit admiration if seen alone, when seen in a crowd passes unnoticed.

If the space is large and the pictures small a group of pictures may be used instead of a single one. But care must be taken that all of the pictures in the group are related. They may be all silhouettes, for instance, all etchings, all photogravures, prints, or whatever you choose, but not a mixture, and the space between them must be narrower than the width of the smallest picture.

It is advisable to have but one sort of picture in a room. The effect is dignified and reposeful. Have oil paintings in one room, watercolors in another, etc. It is as well to have no pictures in the dining room or the bedrooms, though few people adhere to this arbitrary rule. Don't hang pictures on flowered or large patterned wallpaper. You might as well take them out and hang them on the flowering bushes. If the wall is already decorated there is no need of further decoration.

Some sorts of furnishing seem to call for a particular style of picture as a part of the decorative scheme. This is especially true of period decoration. The pictures form a necessary part of the whole scheme.

A colonial room would hardly be complete without one or two family portraits of some dear deceased ancestors to give a sense of reality to the whole effect. Apropos of this, a certain young artist has lately made an unusual success in a new departure of portrait painting. He has made a study of colonial costumes, and he paints quaint portraits of some imaginary family ancestor, using as a guide the composite likeness of the existing members of the family. Sometimes the people who buy these portraits acknowledge that they are really just the artist's deduction of what the original may have been, and sometimes they say nothing. But it is always amusing to listen to guests analyzing the likeness. "What a splendid old family portrait!—strong likeness to Gracious—no, I think it looks more like Martin—John's chin, though—how beautifully it goes with the rest of the room!" This last remark always seems like a justification of the harmless deception in having had a fine forefather or foremother (is there such a word?) made to order.

It is good to remember that the pictures in the home are to be considered as decorations and not as works of art. If you must have a collection of works of art set one room aside for use as an exhibition gallery. What must be considered is the relation of this bit of decoration to the shape and size of the wall space it is to fill and to the color of all else in the room. Don't buy pictures because they are expensive, but because they harmonize with each other and with all the other features of the rooms they are to grace. They may be very inexpensive and accord with all good decorative principle.

I have seen lately a room that illustrates the point. It was a children's room. The mother had bought a picture calendar, printed in subdued colors, by the well known illustrator Magineel Wright Enright. The subjects were all children, dressed in old fashioned clothes—colonial children, really, with poke bonnets, flowered frocks, and pantalettes. They were too pretty, the mother decided, to hang one over the other, so she separated them. She framed them under wide, white mats in narrow gray frames, matching the gray furniture of the room. The monthly calendar part was cut off, but it was tucked into the corner of each frame outside of the glass and discarded as the months passed. If hundreds of dollars had been paid, nothing more attractive nor more suitable could have been found for that room. The calendar cost $2, and the seven frames cost fifty cents apiece. So it isn't always a matter of price, but of judgment.

Decorations done directly on the walls, individual decorations, panels, motifs, etc., are really better decoration than portable pictures. Artists abroad who are going in for mural decorative work declare that painted canvases have no longer a place in the modern home. This may be a prophecy, but in this country it is one that will probably remain long unfulfilled.

Now that pictures have come to be recognized as decorations it has become the fashion to emphasize their decorative quality by making them seem to be actually a part of the wall. This is done by means of framing. The accompanying picture shows the manner of arrangement. An oval canvas has been selected and instead of being framed it is adjusted directly to the wall by means of a white enamel molding matching the white wall space above the mantel. The remainder of the wall is dull green, and the tiles in the fireplace are green.

There is a decided tendency to do away with ornate gilt frames. They are thrown in the discard along with all other showy things the merit of which lay in the circumstance of their having been costly. When gilt frames are used they should be dulled so that they become secondary in importance to the pictures they inclose. Gilt frames, so subdued, will do for oil paintings. Water colors are usually put in plain wood moldings, stained dull gilt with the grain of the wood showing. Japanese prints look well in narrow, black frames or in gray unstained wood. Etchings may have brown or black frames, according to their color, but the frames must not be heavy. Photographs must be framed close. The color to select is the deepest tone of the photo, slightly grayed.

Oval or round pictures should not be on the same wall with square or oblong ones nor dark oak wood framing used in grouping with gilt.

In arranging a room it is best always to place the pictures last, as the height of various pieces of furniture changes the shape of the wall space. Any picture that is longer than it is wide should be placed in wall space corresponding in shape. This insures harmony of form.

Answers to Queries.

MRS. J. HILL: With as many colors as you describe in your upholstery fabric and floral rug I should advise the use of draperies in monotone. A strip of brocade would be effective for your library table. For your light yellow bedroom have chintz draperies with white ground, sprigged with conventionalized yellow flowers.

* *

MRS. W. A. S., Galena, Ill.: I would suggest that you advertise the walnut pieces that you have for sale in the advertisement column headed "Household Goods." Doubtless you will be able to dispose of it in this manner.

Iron bedsteads are not dangerous, as they are excellent conductors. Metal—keys, and the like—are dangerous, because they offer inducement to the lightning to take them in its path.

MRS. O. R. B.: Are you so bent on having a marble pedestal and statute? They are really not as popular as they have been heretofore. For your mantel I would suggest simple treatment, a clock, perhaps, or a pair of candlesticks or vases. This is the most approved style. I am sorry that I am not able to be of more assistance to you.

Miss de Campi will be glad to assist the home maker in any problems pertaining to interior decorations. Address your letter to Miss Anita de Campi, "Sunday Tribune," Chicago. Inclose a stamped, addressed envelope if you wish a personal reply.

A. M. C.: There is a new finish being made called "kaiser gray." It is a delicate stain and is used for tinting either oak or bird's-eye maple. If you prefer the natural gray wood silver ash is lovely. Have your carpet a dull shade of grayish blue and give a touch of rose color in either lamp shade, curtain linings, cushions or table scarf.

* *

MRS. G. E. B.: With weathered oak, grayish tan would be an excellent choice of color for your living room. If you use pink in the bedroom, see that it is not a crude pink, but neutralized by having a little of the tan used in the living room mixed with the pink calcimine. Then, in the dining room, use the tan again. It is a good idea to keep these two rooms alike, and this shade will go well with the draperies that you plan using. The rugs and English tints on the porch and in the sun room will be excellent. Have the spare room, to be furnished in wicker, tinted a delicate ivory.

MRS. F. B. KLEIN: If possible, change your light gray Tiffany paper for a pale buff color, as buff reflects more light than gray and will make your room seem less dark than it is at the present time. The chairs that you describe, with the velour pads, seem attractive. Since all of the pieces in your living room are of one style, I would by all means keep to that style in selecting an extra chair. A green rep silk strip would be nice on your table. Since you have so much mulberry color in the room you cannot do better than to select a dull shade of green, matching the green of the real mulberry leaves

I do not understand why the rose lining of your lamp shade should be too deep for the fringe; but you neglect to mention the color of the fringe. If it is tan color, like the outside of the lamp, would it not be a good idea to have an extra strip of fringe of rose color inside of the tan fringe, matching the lining of the lamp?

If the opening into the hall is a real door, I would not suggest portieres, especially during the hot weather. For my part, I have a preference for doors. Do not sacrifice your library table for the sake of an extra chair. Yes, the piano and table are all right to use in one room. It would be nice to get a little bench or stool instead of another chair. Benches are used at the piano in preference to stools.

Last evening, being the anniversary of my youngest child's fifth birthday, I gave him a dollar to treat a few neighbor children. They were on the point of starting to town when our next door neighbor asked William E. Jr. where he was going. He promptly said: "I and Mildred, Eileen and Clifford are going to the movies." His mother, overhearing him, rushed to the door and told him that he should always place himself last when speaking. To my utter amazement he briskly turned and, swelling up his chest, replied: "Well, mamma, ain't I treating?"

I used to run a candy store in a small town near here and so, of course, on all occasions such as family parties, picnics, etc., I was expected to have a bag of "goodies" for the little ones. Once, on a picnic to a near by lake, I had forgotten and left the large bag of candy on the buggy seat, and didn't think of it until I saw my little nephew busily feeling the lumps and bumps of the bag's outside. I paid no attention to him until finally he climbed down, came up to me and said: "Uncle, when are you going to open up the candy bag?"

"How do you know I've got any candy?" I replied.

"Don't you s'pose I got feelin's?" he said.

A small boy was visiting in the suburbs and when his father came to see him he was surprised to see his son coming to meet him with his cheeks broken out with poison ivy and much swollen.

"Father, will you please take me away from here?" asked the boy.

"Why, what's the matter, son?"

"If I stay in the house they teach me," he complained. "If I go out I get this," pointing to his face, "and I don't know which is worse."

No written invitations had been issued for Robert's party, but little Douglas came home very much elated over the fact that he had been asked. Sister felt very hurt that she had not been included in the invitation, but was soothed when brother told her that only boys were asked. While sister was out playing on the day of the party she met Robert, who said:

"Don't forget to come to my party, Frances."

"Me? Why was I invited?"

"Why sure; didn't Douglas tell you?"

So Frances went home and told Mother. When Mother questioned Douglas, he answered:

"Mother, dear, I knew that Frances' white shoes were worn out, and I knew that she would have to have a new pair if she went, so I thought that I would save you some money."

MISS MIZZI HAJOS IN HUNGARIAN COSTUME

THIS Hungarian costume is worn by Mizzi Hajos in the operetta "Sari," which comes to the Illinois theater tonight.

There are fifty yards of cloth in the entire dress, and it weighs forty-six pounds. Fourteen yards of cotton backed satin was required for the overdress and thirty-six for the petticoat, which is made of one piece of heavy white linen cloth gathered in tucks at the waist. It has the appearance of four petticoats, but is in reality only one. The satin is decorated with a lively field flower pattern with a bright Yale blue background, with flowers in rose, white, and green.

On the bottom is a broad band of yellow Hungarian ribbon flowered in rose, blue, and green. Around the bottom run two rows of spangled silver braid.

An apron of black satin gorgeously embroidered in gold and various colors, a shawl of soft wool in bright scarlet with cerise roses, and stockings and slippers of red silk complete the costume. The dress falls only to the knees.

There is a headdress of blue and crimson artificial roses wired into a coronet, edged with gold velvet, silver, and red tinsel balls, and with a shower of Hungarian ribbons on each side at the back. It weighs eight pounds.

It is the national Hungarian costume for gala occasions. Girls are taught to do the embroidering and decorating while they are mere children. By the time they are 15 they are expected to be able to make the entire dress themselves, and many of the middle class Hungarian girls make their own dresses.

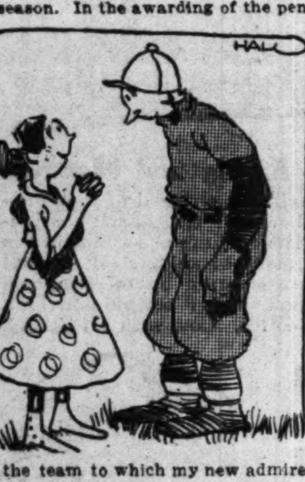
The Married Man Problem!

Have you in your experience ever faced the married man problem? How did you face it? Were you brought to your senses, and how? What was the outcome? "The Tribune" will pay $1 for every letter published on the subject of the Married Man Problem. No manuscripts returned. Address Doris Blake, "Chicago Tribune."

She Told His Wife.

I was a high school girl and enthusiastic over athletics. The baseball season was on and while attending one of the games I was introduced to one of the visiting players. He proved to be interesting, and I permitted him to call on me that evening. That was the beginning of a little flirtation which I was enjoying very much and which might have developed into something more.

We had been writing letters for some time, and my baseball hero had made another trip to our town just to see me. He did, indeed, seem older to me than the average high school boy, but I was entirely unprepared for the news that reached my ears at the end of the baseball season. In the awarding of the pennant the team to which my new admirer belonged was disqualified because it had been discovered that one player was not even a member of the high school. In fact, he was a married man who had been hired by the school. That player was none other than my acquaintance.



Of course, I ignored any further attentions from the man, and I wrote a letter to his wife in which I told her frankly what had happened. E. B.

She Can't Keep Pace.

Being the man's wife, I may say I have had experience with the married man. We were married as soon as we had graduated A. B. from a small college. Later my husband took a Ph. D. degree in an American university, and we afterward spent a year in Berlin, he in study, I mostly in worrying about the health of our baby.

We were poor and in debt, so we both felt when he secured a university appointment, with a chance for promotion, that we had nothing left to wish for. We took a young woman to live with us as a means of helping out the family income. This woman, a subordinate member of the faculty, was the first of several who have lived in our house. They have been a big part of my husband's pleasure in his home. They seem to fill a need in his life which I cannot. I have almost come to dread their absence during the regular college vacations, for at such times my husband is restless at home, always suggesting that we go somewhere. It is absolutely impossible for him to spend an evening at ease alone with me. Though the young women have never encroached upon what might be called my preserves, yet I am increasingly in rebellion against this state of affairs.

I analyze the matter thus. For my husband's happiness, physical comfort, and intellectual companionship are necessary. I furnish the former; the young women who live with us, the latter. At the time of our marriage I was a complete companion for him—that is to say, we were mated not only physically but intellectually. I have been obliged to sacrifice intellectual development to the demands of domestic life.

My husband has continued to develop. No matter what I may do in the future, I can never recover the ten years I have lost. What I would like to do is to turn the present young woman out of the house, and force my husband to find his happiness in me. But I know it would be the means of making him conscious, as he seems not to be with her here, that I am not a complete companion for him.

Mrs. Faculty Wife.

Became Type He Hated.

I am rather proud of the way I met the married man problem. Several years ago in a small town I met a young man who seemed to find me interesting. I was lonesome, as most small town girls are, for the young men must go to cities to find work, and so I was flattered by the attentions I received.

He (my admirer) had occasion to visit the town frequently, and our friendship grew rapidly. He protested much love for me, and I at least listened to his words. After several months he told me that he was married—unhappily, of course—and subsequently I discovered that he was the father of two little children.

All my advice and pleadings that he forget me seemed vain, and I faced a problem more serious than if I really had been in love with the man. For his unhappiness was real. A total lack of sympathy between him and his wife, who was his inferior mentally, explained his attitude in a measure.

He vowed all sorts of terrible things if I withdrew my friendship. But this I had to do, since he honestly believed himself truly in love with me. Knowing his fastidious nature I decided to "shock" him into a state of indifference, if not dislike. And so I began a unique campaign. It was not difficult; I knew colors he detested, as well as slang phrases—in short, I knew the type of woman he hated, and gradually I assumed that character when in his company.

It took some time and a lot of tact and courage, but I won. For in time I felt the "discord" as it touched him. His ideal was shattered at last, and he finally was transferred into new territory, at his own request, I believe. He wrote me a formal note thanking me for past kindnesses, and "wished me well."

I often wonder if he found some one else or if the little children finally filled the empty rooms in his heart. I hope they did. R. B.

A COMPARISON OF NAPOLEON'S INVASION OF RUSSIA WITH THE PRESENT CAMPAIGN

By HERBERT CAXTON.

[Copyright: 1915: By Herbert Caxton.]

FOR the first time in 103 years Russia is waging a war really within its own borders. The Crimean war took place upon an outpost, and the czar's forces were defeated, as they were when his huge armies went to the far east in this century to battle with the Japanese on alien territory. Now the Germans through Poland are aiming a blow at the heart of Russia. Moscow, although far distant from the present seat of operations, is their objective, as it was in 1812, that of Napoleon.

Will they be able, where he failed, to gain their goal?

Or, gaining it, will they find their victory a barren one, with ultimate defeat and a ruinous retreat the sequel? Or digging themselves in after each success, will they, by means of their splendid organization, be able to keep up their supplies from the rear, and by repeated victorious advances, approach until not only Moscow but Petrograd are theirs and the czar's army is brought to its knees?

Is the Russian retreat the sign of a failure of its army, or is it the precurser of a coup such as that by which Alexander's generals drew Napoleon into a trap and then overwhelmed him with disaster?

The Germans have great advantages over Napoleon. Nearly thirty railways carry troops and supplies to them. The country through which they advance is the same through which he went, but agriculture has greatly improved it, and manufactures have raised the miserable towns to rich and powerful cities.

Rely on Grand Duke.

The Russians are in many respects still a primitive people. Their life in peace or in war still shows traces of their nomadic origin. Adopting modern arms, they yet fight much as did their ancestors. Their strategy may be at fault, but no one doubts the bravery of their overwhelming forces.

When they retreated before Napoleon in 1812, they left nothing in the territory they evacuated for his troops to live upon; crops were destroyed, supplies carried off, towns laid to the ground, and even when he reached Moscow it was only to see that ancient city in flames.

Reports today show that something of the same tactics is in fashion. While they did not destroy Warsaw, Kovno, and other cities which they abandoned to the advancing foe, they left no wealth to seize, no advantage which would accrue to the Germans when they came up.

What is there up the capacious Russian sleeve? The nation, the court, the diplomats, and the general staff rely on Grand Duke Nicholas for the ultimate victory of the Russian arms. He has displayed magnificent generalship. The vast resources of the country and the people appear animated with a patriotic unanimity to win. There has been a year in which to prepare even for defeat on Russian soil. Observers of events cannot believe that back of the Vistula, Russia is not prepared for any eventuality. The next few months will tell whether or not this belief is well founded.

The readers of THE TRIBUNE need no recapitulation of the part Russia has played in the war of the last twelve months; of the advance into East Prussia, into Galicia, and of the gradual beating back of its forces and the loss of the gains they had made until now the aggressive foe is pushing back the former invaders into their own territory. The war and the territory in which it is waged suggests an analogy with the Napoleonic campaign of 1812, the first serious blunder of the French emperor and the one which knit his enemies into a common determination to put an end to his military aggression.

As Napoleon after he got into Russia offered Alexander peace, so, too, has William extended terms to Nicholas. Alexander replied that rather than accept peace from the invaders he would move eastward to Kamchatka. Nicholas has only offered to retreat, still fighting, to the Urals.

It may be well, therefore, to examine briefly the Russian campaign of Napoleon in its chief features for the purposes of comparison.

Napoleon's demands on Russia of an embargo on England having been refused by the czar, the latter entered into an agreement with Great Britain and determined to oppose the dictatorship of the French emperor. The Polish question, the annexation of Oldenburg, and the frustration of Russian designs on Turkey, together with the alliance of Austria, Prussia, and the other German states on Napoleon's side showed Alexander that it was up to Russia to fight if French domination was not to be coexistent with the boundaries of all Europa.

The Position of Armies.

In May all negotiations for peace ceased, and Napoleon, who had made his plans of campaign, went to Dresden. His forces numbered 600,000. He had 1,300 cannon, 18,000 horses, and siege trains had gone on to Riga, Duneburg, Magdeburg, and Dantzig. The allies had their work cut out. Not only were they to supply men and munitions, but were to aid in supplying food and in transporting it. Oxen drew wagons of flour and rice. Dantzig held provisions for 400,000 for two months, and at various other points were vast stores of food. The campaign was not started until the country through which the army was to pass could supply green fodder for the horses and oxen.

Napoleon arrived at Posen on the last day of May and then pushed on to Königsberg. His army was divided into three groups, he commanding the first, Eugene the second, and Jerome the third. The main body, comprising the guards, had as corps commanders Davoût, Ney, Oudinot, and Macdonald. Included in this were several bodies of Wurtembergers, Prussians, and others. Murat had two corps of cavalry reserves. This main body, the flower of the army, totalled 250,000 men.

Eugene's force included French cavalry, Italian and Bavarian reserves, in all 80,000 troops. Jerome commanded Poles, Saxons, Westphalians, and a body of cavalry. In all it was about equal to Eugene's. The conscription, by which a large part of this huge force had been obtained, caused great dissatisfaction, and many of the soldiers were totally untrained in war.

Napoleon's forces were stretched over a line from Elbing and Königsberg along the river to Novo Alexandria, and down in Galicia Schwartzenberg stood ready with an Austrian army.

Opposed to this huge invading force, the Russians under De Tolly, 110,000 strong, were north of Vilna, and under Bagration, 66,000, south of the Pripet, while back in Volhynia Tormassoff was assembling a third division. Bagration left 30,000 of his men with the latter to oppose the Austrians, who intended to wage war independently of Napoleon. The Russian campaign drawn up by Gen. Phull was to fall back to the Drissa intrenchments and there give battle, a second army meanwhile attacking in the flank and the rear. Hopes were held that troops, not yet ready in Finland and Wallachia, might also be brought into action.

Napoleon, not knowing his numerical advantage, planned to march by Kovno on Vilna with his own command, Macdonald with the left wing meanwhile crossing the Niemen at Tilsit with his Prussians and working north to separate De Tolly and Bagration. The other two armies were to follow and complete this breach, after which the two Russian forces were to be defeated separately.

Russ Retreat Frustrates Plan.

The hugeness of the French army spoiled this plan, for De Tolly, unable to give battle, fell back, as did Bagration, and the joint retreat across the waste country frustrated Napoleon's design, while at the same time it led his pursuing army further and further into new territory, where the emperor's supply trains could not follow. Towards the last of June Napoleon crossed the Niemen, but found practically no enemy in front of him. He proceeded to Vilna, but was greatly disappointed at the lack of enthusiasm with which he was received.

The Russians had evacuated the town some days before, leaving nothing worth while for the French to take, and no chance for a battle. The advance had been made in wretched condition over muddy roads and in rain. The whole country had been stripped bare by the retreating enemy, the French supplies were days behind the army, and there was neither food, fodder, nor shelter. More than 10,000 horses had already died, 100 cannon had to be left in the mud, and word came that the ships bearing flour and other provisions were aground in the Baltic.

As they retreated, the Russians burned mills, grain, and stores of all sorts. The fields were devastated and the country as bare as a bone. The French army was in such straits that not a few died of starvation, many of sickness, and some of suicide. And all this before a battle had been fought.

Without definite campaign plans and with a much inferior force than that of its foe, the Russian army, nevertheless, continued to avoid conflict, partly by strategy and partly by luck. De Tolly retreated to Drissa, scraping the country as he went of all on which the French could subsist. Bagration could not join him because Davoût's forces stood in his way waiting to attack the second Russian army retreating before Jerome. Bagration struck south and eluded Jerome, greatly to the annoyance of Napoleon, who gave the command to Davoût.

Oudinot, Ney, and Murat were pushed on towards Drissa in July to attack De Tolly in front, while Napoleon, a part of Davoût's force, and Eugene's troops smashed him on the flank, but again plans went wrong, for Bagration, not being able to come up, De Tolly moved farther back. The French were suffering as if they had been in battle. The heat and dust were terrific, and lack of food and water caused them to fall by hundreds in exhaustion. Dysentery killed whole regiments. Horses dropped dead by the score.

The Russians crossed the Dwina, the idea being that Bagration would join them at Vitebsk. Murat, on July 25, forced a fight and drove them back on that place. Meanwhile, Bagration, finding Davoût had reached Mohiler before him, gave battle, but had to retreat south. All hope of aid from him being gone, De Tolly, too outnumbered for battle, retreated in a heavy mist. The failure of Napoleon to attack with full force before the coup was accomplished has never been satisfactorily explained. Now, one-third of his army was destroyed and no real battle had been fought. Depleted by 130,000 men, his force was far into a hostile and barren territory, without supplies and suffering from hunger and disease. The main body and the wings were far apart.

Determined to secure a battle, Napoleon planned to advance on Smolensk and then Moscow. He brought Davoût's army in and with 200,000 he passed the Dnieper, Aug. 10, and four days later crossed the old Russian frontiers at Krasnoi. The united Russian armies, under great pressure at home, now had to give battle, and hurried to Smolensk. Aug. 16 the French attack on the town failed, and while Napoleon waited for more troops the Russians strengthened their position and prepared to block the way to Moscow. Half the town was destroyed by the French fire, and, although the Russians retreated, the engagement was a barren victory for the French.

Napoleon Errs Again.

Then, as before, Napoleon's judgment went wrong.

He had started out believing that the success of his campaign depended on which side had the greatest patience. Murat, before the battle of Smolensk, warned him that a battle with the Russians could hardly be hoped for, and after Smolensk was taken his other aids had told him that it was a mistake to pursue. The reports of the inroads made on his troops by disease, by desertion, and by the warfare of the peasants on the way did not move him. He now forgot his plan of patience and hungered for decisive battle. He would defeat the Russian army and compel the czar to accept his terms. He was ignorant of the spirit of the Russian people, of its patriotism inspired also by an almost fanatic religion, a spirit which would compel them to burn their cities and fight to the last man.

He was encountering a wholly new mode of warfare, something not in his plan of campaign. He became rattled, apparently, and disregarding the advice and requests of his generals, he neglected, at least, two first class opportunities by which he might have crushed one or both of the Russian generals.

He made a fatal mistake in waiting for the guards and the Poles to come to his aid, for during that wait the two Russian armies came up and assumed a strong position on the Moscow road. Then, too, Napoleon came up along the right bank of the Dnieper, when he might have attacked the Russians in front, beaten them, and entered the city. But as it was he was again eluded by the Russian commanders. These latter, with their vastly inferior forces, were showing consummate tactics to inflict losses on the French, which, however, were as nothing compared with those which the elements, disease, and lack of provisions were accomplishing. The privations were almost unbelieveable, and there is no doubt that the reports of his staff did much to contribute to his indicision at this time.

In the dilemma in which Napoleon found himself he determined to drive the enemy on and force a battle which would open the way to Moscow. On the 1st of September he made Gshazk, and there he became convinced that Kutusoff, who had succeeded to the command, would make a stand. The Russians had 127,000 men, but at least 17,000 of these were not in the fighting force at all. Against these 110,000 men was a French army of 135,000. Kutusoff had the advantage of position, his troops being across the Moscow road and were sheltered by earthworks behind the Kolotza. By sharp fighting the French carried some of these works not far from the village of Borodino, from which the battle takes its name. Then Eugene threw back De Tolly's division and took the village. The Russian center under Bagration was then attacked by Davoût with the aid of Ney and Murat, while Junot occupied himself with the left.

The fight was a desperate one, both armies displaying the greatest valor. Back and forth victory swung, the Russians gradually retreating, and this only after they had lost 44,000 in obstinately holding their ground all night. At that, they claimed the battle as theirs, and it was so regarded by the government. The loss on both sides was 70,000. It has been said that at Borodino Napoleon gained not a battle, but only a battlefield. But he pressed on now along the road to the city of his desire.

The day he came in sight of Moscow, the Russian army evacuated it. When the French entered the town it was discovered to be on fire. All provisions were destroyed and only one quarter of the city was untouched by the flames. The army tried to subsist by foraging on the country, but this did not suffice to feed the troops. Three thousand foraging troops were captured in one instance. Garrisons left by Napoleon were surprised and killed, and roads held by the French were lost to them. But worse threatened, for Kutusoff, who led the Russian retreat from Moscow, assembled no less than 80,000 infantry, 600 guns, and 20,000 Cossacks south of the city, while another force of 40,000, under Wittgenstein, was heard from on the Dwina, and 64,000 was moving on Schwarzenberg's Austro-Saxon army.

Retreat Becomes Necessary.

In this situation Napoleon tried to treat with the czar, but the latter ignored him. His position was further made precarious by the approach of winter, news of gathering trouble in Prussia, and the return to the czar of 20,000 Russian troops which had been helping Bernadotte in Sweden. At the czar's elbow was Stein, whom Napoleon had driven out of Prussia, one of the shrewdest statesmen in Europe.

Advance was now out of the question; retreat the only thing possible. This he accepted and the withdrawal began Oct. 19, 108,000 men marching on the famous retreat. Napoleon in the lead, the Grand Army started west, while Kutusoff simultaneously sprang to block his way. If nature hindered the advance on Moscow, she did more to obstruct the retreat. All that the French suffered in the first instance was multiplied ten fold now. Rains and bad roads made progress slower than before.

Everywhere lay the unburied dead, and as the retreating army passed the battlefield of Barodino, the victims' bodies still remained stark and fearful monuments of the fiasco of Napoleon's campaign.

At Marojaroslavetz the van guard of the French gained a partial victory over the enemy, but at a loss of 5,000. Turning north, to avoid the main body of Kutusoff's army, Napoleon made off in the direction of Moshaisk in full retreat. His idea was to reach Smolensk where he expected reinforcements from Marshal Victor, and also provisions for his army. Between the two rivers the army was to winter and rest. By November the suffering became almost unbearable. The provisions brought were exhausted, fuel was scarce, and death by freezing common.

All this time Kutusoff had been harrying the retreating French. By forced marches over a shorter route, he was at Viasma and cut off the rear guard, killing 4,000 and capturing 3,000. With more determination he might have smashed the entire army. The French, now thoroughly demoralized, broke into rout. All discipline was cast to the winds. With the cold at 10 degrees below zero and in a blinding snow storm, it became each one for himself. Exhausted, they sank to freeze to death. Around one camp fire, Fournier says, 300 were found frozen. On the rear and on the flanks pressed the Cossacks, killing wherever they could. The Russians did not stop to take prisoners. They went on, leaving winter to attend to the fugitives who had offered to surrender.

When the French arrived at the place where the winter was to have been spent Napoleon learned that Victor and Saint Cyr had both been defeated by the Russians under Wittgenstein, and that he could not hope for aid from that quarter. Worse, a large force had advanced on Minsk from the south. He, therefore, ordered the withdrawal from Smolensk, the town being blown up at his command, without regard for thousands of his sick and wounded there. Stragglers who fell behind were set upon by the enraged peasants and slaughtered. The snow of Russia was reddened by some of the best blood of the French and their allies.

Russians Fear Napoleon.

More than once the fear of Napoleon caused the Russians to lose the chance of annihilating a French army corps, although they outnumbered the French on one occasion three to one. In such straits Ney was left behind, and after a battle, lost 2,100 out of his 3,000 men. The retreating army, directly under Napoleon, now numbered but 25,000 and some of these cast away their muskets. There was little attempt to carry away the artillery; most of it had already been abandoned. At Orcha the main body of the fugitives totaled only 18,000. There they obtained some food and got a rest.

There Napoleon heard that Tchitchagoff, with the force from Minsk, had marched so rapidly that he had reached the Beresina river, where the

NEWS of the THEATERS

MISS MAIDEL TURNER in "KICK IN" at the OLYMPIC

Julian Street, ex-Chicagoan, is coauthor with Booth Tarkington of a play called "The Ohio Lady." Klaw & Erlanger, with George C. Tyler, are to produce it soon in Columbus, O. Mr. Tarkington has not of late been active in writing for the theaters, where he had great success with at least one work, "The Man from Home."

Playgoers hitherto lacking in knowledge of "Pollyanna" as a novel have been reading up on it, and have learned that it is another treatment of the eternal Cinderella theme, wellnigh always effective and sure in the theater. "Peg o' My Heart" and "Daddy Longlegs" are prosperous recent examples. "Pollyanna," which is to open the season of the Blackstone on the 30th inst., will be acted for the first time tomorrow evening in Detroit.

"Blow Your Horn" is the name of the review in which Mr. Dillingham will exploit Mlle. Gaby Deslys in this country. The tunes will be by Irving Berlin, who has run his one fingered talent for syncope into a superb reserve at the bank.

George M. Cohan has footlighted Billy Sunday in a play written for Fred Niblo, his brother-in-law. It is called "Hit the Trail Halliday." Niblo, in it, will be a bartender turned preacher.

Edward Peple has written a play called "The Girl." The same title was not long ago used for one by George Scarborough, produced by David Belasco. Mr. Peple claims priority; but, as it is understood that the Scarborough piece was a bit gamey when shown on the stage at the tryout, it is not likely that there will be a contest. Henry Kolker is to act in the Peple play.

Victor Herbert will conduct next Sunday evening's performance of "The Only Girl." That piece will be followed in the Garrick by "The Passing Show of 1915."

Persons fond enough of movies to spend $3 for a seat may sit in a select circle of loges to be known as "The Diamond Horseshoe of the Films" in one of the New York theaters. This $3 venture is one of the innovations of the Triangle concern, which has subleased the Studebaker.

Fiske O'Hara's next vehicle is called "Kilkenny." It is by Augustus Pitou.

"Search Me!" the new farce by the author of "Officer 666," is not liked in New York, where it was staged a fortnight since.

Al Jolson is to appear without burnt cork in the next Winter Garden extravaganza.

Miss Olga Petrova is to star this season in "The Hawk," in which William Faversham acted many weeks last season in New York. He is busy with the movies.

John E. Kellerd, of whom little has been seen in recent years, thinks that the new season will be a good time for him to go through the country in Shakspeare. His argument is that with Mantell in the movies he will have no opposition other than Forbes-Robertson's occasional Hamlet.

William Norris, Felix Adler, Harry Fern [he was in "A Trip to Washington" two seasons ago in the La Salle], and Miss Lucy Weston are to be in "Miss Tootsie," a musical piece soon to be produced by Klaw & Erlanger.

Sir Herbert Tree has abandoned his plan for producing a play based on Hall Caine's novel of "The Woman Thou Gavest Me."

Miss Florence Smithson, popular in London musical comedy, has been asked by the Shuberts to come over here at $500 a week.

The American theater, West Madison street and Ashland avenue, will open its season tomorrow under the direction of Marcus Heiman. The attractions will be provided by the Western Vaudeville Managers' association. The opening program includes Paul Conchas and several other acts of similar standing. The latter half of the week Sarah Padden and Winona Winters will head the bill. Three performances will be given each day and new bills will be provided on Monday and Thursday.

"Maid in America" will bring its successful run at the Palace Music hall to a close this week. The final performance of this Winter Garden revue will be given Sunday night, Aug. 29.

The Palace Music hall will be closed for one week for decoration and renovation and will reopen with vaudeville Monday, Sept. 6.

◆

The engagement of Joseph Santley in "All Over Town," at the Garrick theater, will be brought to a close on next Saturday night. On the Sunday following the company will begin a tour of the cities of the middle west, opening in Milwaukee. An entirely new version of this lively musical fantasy is now being presented at the Garrick. Four new musical numbers have been added and several new scenes have been introduced.

At the Garrick theater, beginning Sunday evening, Aug. 29, for a limited engagement, will be seen a musical comedy, "The Only Girl," the newest work of Victor Herbert and Henry Blossom, its first presentation in this city. Many years have elapsed since these writers have done anything in collaboration. The company includes Wilda Bennett, Grace Edmond, Gene Luneska, Vivian Wessell, Louise Kelley, Thurston Hall, John Findlay, Ernest Torrence, Jed Prouty, Richard Bartlett, and all the others of the original cast.

Miss Wilda Bennett, the young prima donna discovered by Victor Herbert, and who sings in his latest musical comedy, "The Only Girl," is a native of Asbury Park, N. J. It was only once before her present engagement that she appeared on Broadway. That was when she played the rôle of Conscience in the Henry W. Savage production of "Everywoman." When Arthur Collins presented that play in London Miss Bennett was the only member of the American company to be taken to London.

Comparison of Napoleon's and the Present Invasion of Russia.

French had expected to cross, and that Wittgenstein had defeated both Oudinot and Victor. Pursued by Kutusoff and harried on the flanks by Wittgenstein and Tchitchagoff, the French position was most precarious. Napoleon ordered Oudinot, with 8,000 men, to hold off Tchitchagoff and to take the Beresina bridge, and Victor to repel Wittgenstein on the river. Then word came that the Russians had burned the bridge.

Only the military genius of the French generals extricated their armies from the situation. The meticulous Russian commanders played into the foe's hands. None had marched far enough, through fear of the Corsican fox. Commanding a situation where they could have destroyed the entire French army and probably have captured Napoleon into the bargain, each commander delayed, hung back, and finally was outwitted, outgeneraled, and beaten by the inferior French force. By a ruse Oudinot deceived Tchitchagoff and built two bridges almost under the Russian's nose. Across these a force of 12,000 men marched. The next day Napoleon and his force followed. Three times one bridge fell, drowning hundreds, but at last Eugene's and Davout's men passed over, leaving 11,000 under Victor to cover the retreat.

With the reinforcements which had joined Napoleon he now had between 30,000 and 35,000 men, with as many more unarmed stragglers. Victor was suddenly confronted and held by Wittgenstein with a much larger force, the French rear guard having been taken by the Russians, and Tchitchagoff, joining forces with Wittgenstein, attacked Victor's 7,000 men on one side of the river and another force of 10,000 on the other side. In spite of the disparity of numbers, the French won out, defeating the Russians signally in one instance and escaping across the river in the other. Thousands of stragglers perished on the bridge and in the river in the panic following the battle, and no less than 5,000 were made prisoners. Fournier says that 24,000 bodies, frozen or drowned, were found on the battlefield, in the river, on its banks, or in peasants' cottages.

Napoleon and the fragment of his army escaped, but their condition was of the lowest. Only 9,000 men attended the emperor, and these, hungry, ill with typhus, half clothed, and often shoeless, gaunt, and desperate kept dropping in the snow under the merciless cold, which now was 20 to 30 degrees below zero. Early in December he ordered Murat to lead the army to Vilna, where the Bavarians under Wrede were waiting. He himself started in disguise for Paris.

Indoor Shows of the Week.

Illinois Theater—"Sari," with Miss Mizzi Hajos. This is the operetta of Hungarian make which was sung seven weeks last season in this theater. Miss Hajos is, in it, a sort of Hungarian Sis Hopkins. It is a good thing of the kind. Return engagement of two weeks starts this evening.

Olympic Theater—"Kick In," with Richard Bennett. This is a story of Broadway folks—a forger, a cocaine sniffer, a shoplifter, a wicked policeman, et al. It is as good as any of its kind since the first of 'em, "The Deep Purple," and makes for a pleasant evening in the theater. Miss Maidel Turner and Miss Clara Joel are with Mr. Bennett. Second week.

Palace Music Hall—"Maid in America." Its prosperous run ends Saturday evening. The Palace will then be restored to its uses as a theater of variety.

Garrick Theater—"All Over Town," with Joseph Santley, will enter this evening on the final week of a run which started May 30. "The Only Girl" follows.

Grand Opera house—"The Lady in Red." Final fortnight of this imported operetta. "It Pays to Advertise" follows Sept. 5.

Cort Theater—"The Lie," with Miss Margaret Illington. Well made melodrama of the domestic emotions, with two "big scenes" for Miss Illington. C. Aubrey Smith and George W. Anson are excellent. Third week.

Majestic Theater—Miss Kitty Gordon will be the bill topper of the week starting tomorrow.

MUSIC AND THE MUSICIANS

VIOLENTE FRANCELE, BALLET DANCER at BISMARCK GARDENS

By Ronald Webster.

The Chicago band will conclude its summer season of park concerts on Wednesday evening with a concert at Grant park. During the seven weeks Mr. William Weil, the conductor, has directed thirty-five concerts. The band association is pluming itself over a letter received from Havana, the writers being the International Brokerage syndicate. The letter contains a request for sample copies of the Chicago band program. It is convincing testimony that the band advertises the city.

From the composers of rag time music, the kind that you are advised by publishers to try on your piano, comes the news that Louis A. Hirch of "Follies" fame has written the score to "Molly and I," which will open at the La Salle. He has ten or more successful musical shows to his credit, or otherwise.

Probably the most ambitious of the "morning musicales" attempted in Chicago will be that of Rachel Busey Kinsolving. She has run a series in Evanston for two years, and now she is preparing to fight her way into Michigan avenue.

Since the extremely unpleasant experience of some of Chicago's most generous patrons of music last season there has been doubt about the inauguration of another series at the Congress hotel. Miss Kinsolving evidently had the "Tiffin Musicale" scandal in mind in getting up her prospectus. It is noted that she "refers by permission" to Charles Dawes and Harrison B. Riley. Several managers testify on the back page to her integrity. Her list is one of the best possible to offer. On Tuesday, Nov. 23, Mary Garden, with unannounced assisting artists, is booked. The others are Anna Case, soprano from the Metropolitan; Clarence Whitehall, Moriz Rosenthal, the pianist; Mischa Elman, violinist; De Gogorza, famous for his phonograph records; Louise Homer, contralto; Pablo Casals, the cellist, and Emmy Destinn, the soprano.

Robert W. Stevens, the organist of the University of Chicago, will give a piano recital at Leon Mandel hall Friday evening.

Felix Weingartner is at his summer home in Geneva working at a new comic opera. He has finished one year as director of the Ducal theater at Darmstadt.

Richard Strauss' new "Alpine Symphony" is, as was to be expected, a work of excessive instrumentation and intensely "programmatic." His orchestra for the work numbers 130 and will include a concealed group of twelve horns, two trumpets and two trombones. Some of the special instruments which he demands are the heckelphone, the thunder and wind machines, and cowbells. Night, Sunrise, The Ascent, Hunting Horns in the Distance, At the Glacier, Dangerous Moments, etc., are some of the subtitles of his work.

Early Season Plays in New York.

By Burns Mantle.

According to Roi Cooper Megrue, who has written the first of this season's crop of war plays and called it "Under Fire," the real reason the German crown prince failed to go through to Paris at the outset of the European war last fall was because William Courtenay was in the way.

It was William, pretending to be an officer in the German army when he really was none other than Capt. Redmond of the Irish guard, who warned the English troops of Von Kluck's flanking movement. It was he who told Gen. Joffre what to do and when to do it. And, by implication, it was he who turned the tide of the battle of the Marne and made the success of the allies possible.

"Under Fire" would be a more thrilling success if it did not appeal to you as a sort of planted echo of the very recent past. You have the sensation of sitting in the ante-room of a physician reading last September's newspapers, the while you watch the photogravure sections of the Sunday papers in animated illustration on the stage.

It has its thrills, but they are the thrills of the Lincoln J. Carter melodrama and not more convincing than the first pages of the evening screams. But the dear public has so far approved and the business has been excellent.

And some of the scenes are pictorially fine. There is one in a small inn at Courvoisier, Belgium, the day the Germans started through. The proprietor, a genial sentimentalist, is quite sure there is no danger of invasion. He likes the Germans and he likes the French, and both are fond of his people. Besides there is the famous treaty.

Still the Germans do come. You first hear the music of their bands in the far distance, growing gradually louder. Across the street at back a stream of prospective refugees flows past. Inside the inn Frank Craven as an American newspaper correspondent who has started out from Paris in search of a war, as did Irvin Cobb and our own "Jimmy" Bennett that same month, and finds it as unexpectedly as they did, discusses the immediate prospect of trouble with the proprietor and an English lady spy who happens to be Violent Heming and the heroine of the proceedings.

Suddenly the gray clothed legions begin to arrive. They march in by fours with the modified goosestep working perfectly. There are not a great many of them as stage mobs go, but they are so skillfully employed as to seem to be but the forerunners of thousands on thousands. So long as the doors of the inn are open you see them filing by in close marching order.

The pro-Germans in the audience were not the only ones to applaud this scene. Those who appreciated the work of the stage director, Edgar Selwyn, added to the racket. Then the friendly allies began to hiss and a small riot seemed imminent until the neutrals broke in with an impressive shushing, quieting both camps.

The Germans demand accommodations for all the officers and men the hotel will hold. If there are guests they will have to be put out. The plot then begins to thicken. English and French spies have hidden a telephone in the fireplace. The Germans discover it and accuse the hotel man of being in league with the enemy. To make an example of him they take him out and shoot him.

There is another scene in an English trench. The war already is an old story. Four men are playing cards at one end of the trench, their flippant comments filling the spaces between the hiss and dulled explosion of the bombs flying overhead. The villain, a German spy, of course, has made his way through the lines and been taken in. In the dramatic batting order Sister Susie Suspense is substituting for Old Lady Coincidence.

Then Mr. Courtenay arrives to complicate the situation. And with him an aeroplane bomb. The trench is blown up. All the English save Courtenay are killed. And he is sorely wounded. Von Kluck and the crown prince are free to take Paris as they will. But William drags himself to the trench phone and warns the fighting men in time and the day is saved.

Next scene the heroine finds William in a field hospital, "somewhere in France." The battle of the Marne has been fought, the Paris drive stopped, and the invading Germans turned back to the trenches they have held ever since.

The first farces of the season are hardly worth discussing. One is called "Mr. Myd's Mystery." It proved also a mystery to the audience. The only explanation we can offer for it is that its production was paid for by the lady who wrote it, Lillian Trimble Bradley, and not by Joseph Brooks, the manager who produced it. Playwriting under these circumstances is rather a costly experiment, for Mr. Myd will very shortly cease to be.

Another farce is called "Search Me," and was written by Augustin McHugh, the author of "Officer 666." Something was expected of this one, but nothing was realized. It proved rather a thin imitation of Cyril Maude's "Grumpy." At an English house party the guests are dared to steal a ruby of great value, which the host has hidden in a closely guarded safe. There is a dark change, the ruby disappears, and each of the men of the party is suspected. The hero, a flip young American dramatist, with the manners of a Sixth avenue bouncer, seeks to analyze the situation and thus discover the robber, who in the end turns out to be the Scotland Yard man sent to guard the jewel. He is not, however, a real Scotland Yarder, but a famous crook masquerading.

There is a rumor—this being the open season for such—that the Messrs. Shubert, hand in hand with their allies, the Hammersteins, Oscar and his son Arthur, will this season start a vaudeville circuit to rival that of the present "big time" syndicate, operated directly under the auspices of the United booking offices.

The Messrs. Shubert are interested, so it is whispered, because the arrangement would permit them to be rid of something like thirty theaters which they are under contract to supply with attractions, and which, under prevailing conditions, do not promise well as either picture houses or legitimate theaters.

Mr. Hammerstein holds a New York franchise entitling him to book vaudeville attractions through United offices. This he has turned over to the Shuberts and William Morris, and it is to be used to keep the Forty-fourth Street theater supplied with vaudeville bills this winter.

If the Shuberts are free to go into this scheme it will surprise a great many people. They are linked in a business way with Klaw & Erlanger, and this firm is under bond never to go into the vaudeville competition. It was a part of the settlement of their "advanced" vaudeville fight several years ago, just as Percy Williams was bonded to keep out of the field when he sold his interests to Keith two years ago.

COURT SCENE? MOB SCENE!

YOO-HOO! Gir-r-rls! Hist! List! Read! At sharp 8 to'clock tomorrow morning the Essanay company wants 400 girls about 20 years old to work in a court scene which will be shown in a big production. All that is required is—that you be the right age and bring a pair of light satin slippers and—report on time. Wishing you luck—!

Selig is bursting with pride over the fact that to it belongs the services of two of the youngest stars in filmdom—Wheeler Oakman and Miss Grace Darmond. "And both of them can act!" announces Mr. William Lord Wright, scenario editor—who should know.

The Metro company announces in an advertisement that in the persons of Francis X. Bushman, William Faversham, Madam Petrova, and Mary Miles Minter they have a group "consisting of the most formidable quartet of stars ever offered as permanent attractions." Whaddytheymean, "formidable"?

On the same theory that New York would be full of vacation tourists in August, producing managers long ago planned to begin this year their experimental season two weeks earlier than usual. As a result there are eight new plays scheduled for production the week of Aug. 9, with nearly that many to follow the week of the sixteenth. By the first weeks of September practically all the Broadway playhouses will be open.

Carely L. Hastings of the Thanhouser company has a garden she declares to be just as lovely—if smaller—as John D. Rockefeller's.

Helen Holmes is a vurr busy woman, indeed. She is writing, co-directing, and acting all the time, and she owns that she forgets things occasionally. Upon arriving home one night she found that the authorities had cut off her telephone—she had forgotten to pay the bill. That was not so bad, but two days later she found that the mean old electric light people had cut off her light and she had to go out to supper. "Hereafter," Miss Holmes said, "I'm going to paste the bills up on the wall where I will be bound to see them."

When Maurice Costello, who recently purchased a country place at Bayside, told Pat Mahoney, his new gardener, in answer to a question that a lake on the place was one he had had sent over from Killarney, Mr. Mahoney looked sympathetic. Mr. Costello left him after a moment and went to help one of his children mount a pony. As he walked away Pat spoke softly in the ear of Van Dyke Brook, friend and director of Mr. Costello: "Whisper, Mr. Brook," he said, "an' don't I know the lakes of Killarney are green, and ain't this one black? But don't tell Mr. Costello, as I wouldn't hurt his feelin's for the worruld!"

"The first day I went to work at the Balboa studios," said Paul Gilmore recently, speaking of his reintroduction to motion picture acting, "I was set upon by a bunch of hoodlums—in the course of the play, of course. The director showed them how to hit me with the open hand. Notwithstanding, I was covered with black and blue marks.

"The next day I rolled over a cliff, with the result that my teeth were loosened. Then came the prize stunt. With my hands and legs bound, I was to be thrown into the sea. The binders were only rubber, to be sure; yet, strong enough at that. I protested mildly; but the director said that was nothing."

When he finally regained consciousness, after having been fished out, Mr. Gilmore began to make inquiries concerning his director's identity. He learned that some years before the man had been lightweight champion of California, prinze sprinter, and an all around athlete. Frank Cooley is his name. Since reforming he has become one of the best known motion picture directors.

Bessie Eyton, the Selig star, who is nothing loath to wrestle with wild animals, who makes great dives into the water without a flutter of the pulse, who falls from cliffs with the ease of a debutante going upstairs, and who thinks nothing at all of entering an automobile race, says that she cannot dance the new dances because they "make her dizzy."

"All for Old Ireland," the first of a series of made in Ireland comedy dramas that were to be directed by Sidney Olcott, will be released shortly by the Lubin company. But the rest of the series will be forthcoming under difficulties. Since the beginning of the war the island of Valentia has been put under martial law, and it was here that the scenes of the play were laid.

When May Ward gave up vaudeville for the movies the "Dresden doll comedienne" discovered one compensation. She could mother her pets the whole year round. "May Ward and Her Eight Dresden Dolls" would no longer shine in the headliner's lights outside the theaters. But nothing on earth could now prevent the star of the new feature film, "A Continental Girl," from taking proper care of her thirteen dumb pets. So Miss Ward hired a handsome old colonial house in Germantown, Pa., not two blocks from the Continental studio, and installed the whole family. There they live a contented, united life of ease—seven dogs, two canaries, one parrot, two tomcats, and a horse. There is only one difficulty. It's jealousy. The horse has a part in "A Continental Girl."

"Gee, you must have been a servant yourself wunce," writes a servant girl to Pauline Bush, after having seen her in one of the photoplays in which she took the part of a character slavey, a pathetic and noteworthy performance, which has brought her lots of letters from those in employment as maids and cooks. The girl goes on to say, "You know jist how they feel, don't you?" The letter was quite a compliment after all.

FEATURE FILMS OF THE WEEK

"A Double Identity"—Kalem two act episode in series "Mysteries of the Grand Hotel." The thief in this case was addicted to pajamas.

"A Species of Mexican Man"—Lubin three reeler, featuring Romaine Fielding and Vinnie Burns. Sounds promising.

"Drawing the Line"—American two part drama featuring Vivian Rich, Walter Spencer, and Jack Richardson. A blind girl, an erring lover, and a "wise guy" from the underworld figure in a story that is full of pathos and action.

"Hearts and Roses"—Essanay drama featuring Darwin Karr.

"Mister Paganini"—Biograph two reel drama featuring Jack Drumers and others. You'll love "the blind violinist from God knows where."

"The Barnstormers"—Kalem four act drama of the stage featuring Myrtle Tannehill. If the theater has a lure for you this picture will be something you'll like to see.

"The Dawn of Understanding"—Vitagraph two part drama featuring Maurice Costello and Leah Baird. A baby's picture acts as peacemaker between a couple long separated.

"The Wheels of Justice"—Vitagraph four part drama.

"The Woman Hater"—Essanay three act comedy drama featuring Henry B. Walthall, Edna Mayo, and Bryant Washburn.

"When a Woman Loves"—Metro feature with Emmy Wehlin—you pronounce it "vellin." Guarantee to give you a heartache.

Stationary Photoplays.

Studebaker—THE TRIBUNE'S Russian war pictures.

Colonial—"The Birth of a Nation."

Fine Arts—"The Melting Pot."

Strand—"Sarah Bernhardt at Home."

Ziegfeld—"Helene of the North," five part Famous Players production featuring Marguerite Clarke. Also "The Fall of Przemysl," four reels of pictures showing views of the German-Austro-Hungarian activity against the Russians.

Chicago Band Concerts.

The Chicago band, William Weil, conductor, will give a concert in Grant park on Wednesday. Following is the program:

"The Star Spangled Banner"	Key-Arnold
March, "Semitol"	Daniels
Overture, "Der Freischuetz"	Weber
Valse, "Arc en Ciel"	Waldteufel
Excerpts from "Lady Luxury" [Finale to Act. I. "Dream On, My Princess," "Don't You Really Think I'll Do?" "Longing Just for You," "Pick, Pick, Pickaninny," "Hoop La," Finale]	Schroeder
"Collocation of Favorite Melodies"	Tobani

[b] "Three Blind Mice"—Humorous variations	Lotter
Melodies from Chauncey Olcott's new production, "Paddy Whack"	Ball
Selection "Lohengrin"	Wagner
"America."

Music at Summer Parks

Midway Gardens—Max Bendix conducts his National Symphony orchestra. Mr. Bendix has been somewhat hidden this year by the succession of pageants and dancers. This week's program is reported by Mr. Erlanger to be the most satisfactory of the season. It is supposed that Carlos Sebastian and his company are still there.

Bismarck Garden—Mr. Eitel, who manages this florid but pleasant garden, still pins his faith in dancers. A ballet claiming to come from the Vienna Royal opera will be staged three times each evening, twice outside and once in, weather permitting. "Dance of the Sylphs," "Spring Songs," "Happy Hours and Dances of Love" are some of the titles of the pantomimes. Carl Mahl conducts his excellent Philharmonic band in light programs of good quality. As at the other two parks listed there is outside public dancing at intervals during the evenings.

Ravinia park—Grand opera every evening and orchestra concerts every afternoon except Monday. The schedule: Monday, "Tales of Hoffman"; Tuesday, "Faust"; Wednesday, the first production of parts of "Lucia," including the notorious sextet, and "Cavalleria Rusticana," given entire; Thursday, "Aida"; Friday, parts of "Thais" and "Manon"; Saturday, "La Boheme," and Sunday, Balfe's "Bohemian Girl." The company which sings these abridged operas is adequate to its purposes. The symphony concerts are not too difficult for summer weather. There is also at Ravinia dancing and dining.

ECONOMICAL WOMEN must have THE TRIBUNE—because much of its advertising—merchandising news—is not in other papers.

CHAS. A. STEVENS & BROS.
17 to 25 N. State Street, Through to Wabash Avenue

To the Women Who Like New Things of Good Quality:

OUR new store is now filling up with thousands and hundreds of thousands of dollars' worth of the finest of new merchandise.

If you will but see these garments, try some of them on, you cannot fail to experience to some degree that glow of pride that went through the heart of the designer when these splendid models were created, also the great degree of satisfaction to us when we successfully produced them at such pleasing prices.

Within a few weeks our new carpets and fixtures will be installed. Meanwhile the merchandise is here, and although with our temporary equipment the surroundings are not so pleasant as they will be later, the merchandise in which you are most interested is here for your choosing just the same.

Ladies' Suits

The strong point in our stock is the unusually large showing—the variety in the styles and the representation of all the desired materials—wool velours, velour checks, duvetynes, peau de peche, broadcloths, velveteens, whipcords, gabardines and poplins—the standard colors of navy blue, black, African brown and greens. In addition, exclusive individual suits in the more distinctive shades—as beetroot, blackberry, wistaria, field mouse, gray. A great many of the coats are fur trimmed with beaver, fox, flying squirrel, mole, muskrat, Hudson seal, skunk and skunk opossum. Then there are a lot of suits without fur trimming for the woman who wishes to use her own furs. The skirts are fairly short and of average fullness with a great variety of smart new girdle effects. Some coats are quite long and some are fairly short, some are embroidered in silk, some in wool and some are braid trimmed, some are fitted with a pronounced flare at the hips and others are more in the new box effects—but all have features which stamp them indelibly as entirely new. The price range is from $25.00 to $150.00. Fourth Floor.

Ladies' Dresses

The dresses which are most in demand right now are for street wear and for afternoon wear.

For street wear the best things are serge dresses, or serge in combination with taffeta, or satin or georgette crepe. Dresses of taffeta or the heavier crepe de chines or charmeuse are also good. Blue, brown and plaids seem to be the most favored. Our stock is very complete and different from the ordinary stock, in that we realize that good workmanship is most necessary in this type of dress. The price range is from $15.00 to $75.00.

For afternoon, the softer silks in the rich shades are in demand—dresses not necessarily at the lowest prices but carefully made and possessing individual touches not found in the ordinary dress. The comment which we are receiving on our dresses of this sort is most satisfying. The price range is from $22.50 to $100.00. Fourth Floor.

Misses' Garments

This section is showing for smaller women the same general assortments as those to be found in the ladies' sections. The coats run a trifle shorter and the whole appearance of the suits and dresses is more youthful.

For the college girl and the school girl we are especially prepared. Suits that are smart in material, color, workmanship, but practical and girlish. The sort of suits a mother would be glad to have her daughter wear on the train, or with friends in another city. The price range is from $20.00 up to $150.00.

Serge dresses for street, travel and school wear have never before received such careful attention. We have been very particular to buy only all wool, fast dyed serge, and have developed in addition to the usual blouse sailor type dress a number of attractive smocked middy styles and several splendid new coat dresses. In the misses' sizes the prices run from $10.00 up, in the juniors from $5.95 up, and in the children's from $3.50 up.

We have coats in all materials, but right now the young ladies are calling mostly for white chinchillas in both the short and longer lengths. We have a large stock of these in a fine quality cloth running from $10.50 up. Third Floor.

Comment by Mme X.

News of Chicago Society

By Mme. X.

APROPOS of nothing at all, the weather hit Prof. Cox below the belt last week. It took him unawares on Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday, and while he prophesied rain and clouds, it turned out the bluest sky and brightest sunshine of the season. Keep on prophesying rain and clouds, Prof. Cox! We like your brand of both.

The guests that assembled for the Wednesday and Thursday evening performances of the Lake Forest Players at the Aldis playhouse, coming from Chicago, Lake Bluff, Winnetka, Glencoe, and Hubbard Woods, as well as from Lake Forest, traveled under starry skies and over dry roads, a novel experience this summer.

The entertainment offered by these now famous players was, as always, distinguished, original, and interesting. The first playlet was a clever dialogue by Mrs. Arthur Aldis called "The Letter." It was acted by Charles Atkinson, Ernst von Ammon, and John Root. The theme was the discovery by a man after her death that his wife had loved another. The idea was worked out subtly and briefly, leaving the audience at the end with the impression that of the two men her husband was the better.

The second play, "The Opened Door," was adapted by Charles Mather, and acted by him, Wiley Phellis, and Jack Milton, all of the Lake Forest university. It was extremely vivid and striking.

The evening concluded with a diverting little farce, "The Helpmeet," translated by Mrs. Aldis from the French of Georges Courteline and acted by Miss Isabelle McBirney and Martyn Johnson, both of whom did the skit justice by their presentation.

Mrs. Aldis will join the growing list of Chicago authors in the autumn when a collection of five of her plays, with a preface by her describing the origin and work of the Lake Forest Players, will be published in book form by Duffield & Co. It is to be illustrated by THE TRIBUNE protographer, "Jack" Palmer, whose capital flashlight pictures of those of the plays that already have been presented in the Aldis playhouse will vivify the collection.

The five drama-ettes are "Mrs. Pat and the Law," "The Drama Class" (in which Mrs. Jesse Moss aided Mrs. Aldis), "Extreme Unction," "The Letter," and "Temperament." The last named has yet to be acted—a perfomance promised for next month when Benjamin Carpenter plays the chief rôle, that of an inspired musician, whose piano interpretations form the basis for the dramatic situation.

The light of the Lake Forest Players shines far out on a darkened world where appreciation of the possible cultural effects of amateur drama is slowly dawning. Hardly a week passes when from somewhere, far or near, Mrs. Aldis does not receive requests for suggestions as to plays, or how to get up a troupe like hers, or how to present pieces in nonprofessional setting. All of which shows a slowly rising tide which bears on its surface a finer, keener appreciation of art in its various forms, pictures, music, literature, drama, sculpture, and other forms of creative expression.

Among those present on the first of last week's two performances at the playhouse were Mr. and Mrs. Morrill Dunn, Mr. and Mrs. Rosecrans Baldwin, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Haines, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. McCormick, Mr. and Mrs. Laird Bell, Mr. and Mrs. Orville Babcock, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh McBirney, Mr. and Mrs. Willoughby Walling, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Bennett, Miss Persis Kirmse, David Jones, Thomas Jones, Delavan Smith, Capt. Howze, and David Adler.

Of course, the event that occupies the largest part of the horizon at the moment on the north shore is the country fair next Saturday on the horse show grounds at the Onwentsia club at Lake Forest. Each one of those working for this undertaking feels that his or her department is the most important one of the whole show—an idea deftly fostered by the general manager and chairman, Allen Haines.

The exhibit of livestock and all farm products will of course be the largest and most prominent feature of the show. Louis Swift has charge of this, with an efficient committee to back him. Mrs. George McLaughlin's garden exhibit promises to be most extensive and complete. All the housekeepers and cooks on the north shore are planning to compete for the blue ribbons to be distributed for culinary triumphs in the domestic arts exhibits in charge of Mrs. William P. Martin and Mrs. Orville Babcock.

What the Midway was to the Columbian exposition, Uri Grannis proposes to make the Midway zone to this country fair. He has a snake charmer, a wild man of Borneo, a trained horse, a dance pavilion, a well for young fisher folk, a shooting gallery, and a dozen other attractions.

Perhaps the most notable feature of the Midway zone will be the fortune teller's tent, where Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, attired in the costume of a veritable Roumanian gypsy, will read character and destiny by palmistry. She has made a particular study of this occult science and does it with exquisite skill and ability. She had great success in Washington last winter, when she read palms for one or two charitable affairs.

A paper, the Midway Zone Eagle, will also be a feature of Uri Grannis' side shows. Various celebrities—international, national, and local—will contribute to it, among whom are Hobart C. Chatfield-Taylor, B. L. T., Mrs. James Keeley, Mrs. Kellogg Fairbank, Mrs. Laura McAuley, Percy Hammond, Martyn Johnson, and Willard Kitchell.

It is to be hoped that Prof. Cox will prophesy rain and clouds for next Saturday in order to make a basis for possible fair skies and soft breezes, so that the highways and byways, the trains and trolleys, may be thronged with multitudes going to the fair.

While society is busy locally with golf and tennis matches, with the country fair, and the Lake Forest Players, many of its well known lights and leaders are wandering far afield. Mr. and Mrs. William G. Hibbard, who went on the great cruise gotten up by Harvard men to go on the Kroonland, via the Panama canal, to the Panama fair, are on the last lap of their tour, and will be at home again this coming week. They were accompanied on the trip by the artist, Joseph Linden Smith, so well known and well beloved in Chicago. He was appointed master of revels on the ship, and made the excursion a memorable and delightful one for all the passengers.

A grat contrast to the tropical cruise of the Kroonland and its band of Harvardites is the summer outing of Miss Harriot Houghteling, who in June went to far away Labrador to visit her former school friend, Mrs. Wilfred Grenfell. It took her between two and three weeks to reach her ultimate destination, the Grenfells' home at St. Anthony. By many changes of train and boat she went to Exploit, a lonely part of Labrador, where the Grenfells met her on their famous hospital ship, the Strathcona, known up and down that desolate, storm beaten coast for the succor it brings to the sick and injured fisher folk, who form the main part of the population there.

Dr. Grenfell's work among these people is widely known, but it is not out of place to call attention to the fact that it is suffering, as are all other charitable enterprises, from the war stringency. The hospital at St. Anthony is an old weather beaten wooden structure through which the arctic blasts whistle grimly. Dr. Grenfell has been trying to collect funds to build a brick hospital, but the European conflict cripples his efforts.

Miss Houghteling's summer has been full of icebergs, flashing pinnacles of splendor, which have reflected the sun's rays and the moon's beams with great effulgence. A summer among the icebergs may appeal to poetic fancy, but after the last three months in this part of the world a summer 'neath the palm trees seems more alluring.

The George Higginsons are visiting Mr. Higginson's father in the quaint old family home at Lenox, Mass. The house is nearly 150 years old, a colonial structure with low ceilings and queer, unexpected stairways and curious rooms. It has preserved its atmosphere of other days as probably no other house in that region has. It was built by Higginsons and has been lived in by them for all these generations—nearly five, if you allow three to the century.

The George Higginsons have taken for five years the house in Astor street formerly occupied by the Henry Porters and are doing much to make it charming and habitable.

The Chauncey McCormicks are moving in this autumn to the house in Rush street that the Higginsons occupied for three years, the old William McCormick home where Chauncey McCormick was born. He has much sentiment for and many associations with the house, which is in a neighborhood which might properly be called McCormickville, as Mrs. Cyrus McCormick, the R. Hall McCormicks, the Cyrus H. McCormicks, the Robert H. McCormicks, the Hamilton McCormicks, and Mrs. Emmons Blaine [nee McCormick] all live within a stone's throw. It is "the return of the native."

MISS KATHERINE MEEKER
PHOTO MONFORT

Notable among the early fall weddings will be that of Miss Katherine Meeker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker of 3030 Lake Shore drive and Arcady Farm, Lake Forest, who will be married on Oct. 16 to Dr. Horace Gray, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Gray of Marlorough street, Boston. Miss Meeker met Dr. Gray in Berlin two winters ago, when she was visiting Count and Countess von Bernstorff, and her engagement was announced last spring. This summer Miss Meeker visited for several weeks at the home of Dr. Gray's parents in Boston and later joined her parents at Beverly Farms, Mass., where they took a house for the season. She has been active in the many house parties that her father and mother have given aboard their yacht Arcady, and was one of the young women taking part in the large charity fête given at Beverly last month for the benefit of the French ambulance fund. Her wedding will be one of the largest and most fashionable of the winter season.

WEDDINGS.

Announcement is made of the marriage of Miss Grace Morton Clagett, daughter of Mrs. Mary E. and the late Judge William H. Clagett, to Frederic Garner Ranney, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frederic G. Ranney of 5140 Dorchester avenue, which took place at noon on Saturday, July 24.

Dr. and Mrs. Charles C. Beery of 4544 South Michigan avenue announce the marriage of their daughter, Mary Charlotte, to James Gilbert Shaw, which took place on Wednesday evening, Aug. 11.

Miss Carrie Louise Wilson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Paynter Wilson of Grand Beach, Mich., will be married on Tuesday to Royal Clark Dickson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dickson of Evanston. The wedding will take place in the Wilson cottage, "Sunset View."

Mr. and Mrs. Henry D. Levy announce the approaching marriage of their daughter, Josephine, to Sidney R. Beiersdorf on Monday, Sept. 6, at the Blackstone hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Vanderpool of 4144 Colorado avenue have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Grace Vanderpool, to Harold Leslie Reeve next Saturday morning.

An interesting wedding of Monday evening was that of Miss Rose Klein, the daughter of Mrs. Marie Klein of 4332 Indiana avenue, to Harold Ward of Michigan City, Ind., which took place at the First Presbyterian church, Grand boulevard and Forty-first street.

Miss Ellen Augur, daughter of Mrs. Wheaton Augur of 46 Cedar street, will be married in October to Robert Orr, son of Mrs. Arthur Orr.

The marriage of Miss Eva Mae Duffy to William J. Bryan Jr. will take place on Sept. 8.

Wednesday is the day set for the wedding of Miss Grace Van Osdel, daughter of W. Clarke Van Osdel of 3738 Wilton avenue, and Clarence E. Trickel, son of Mr. and Mrs. William A. Trickel of 931 Dakin street.

Mr. and Mrs. William Howard Aldrich announce the marriage of their niece, Miss Mae Osborn, to Samuel Carothers of Pittsburgh, Pa., to take place on Wednesday, Sept. 1, at 8:30 o'clock at 4519 Greenwood avenue.

Of unusual interest to society is the announcement made on Tuesday by Mr. and Mrs. George E. Marshall of 574 Hawthorne place of the marriage of their daughter Gertrude to Charles Laidlow Williams of New York, which took place Aug. 14 at Fort Collins, Colo. Mr. and Mrs. Williams came to Chicago following their wedding and will pass the rest of the summer with the bride's parents before going to New York to live. Mrs. Williams is a sister of Mrs. Chauncey B. Blair, who was formerly Miss Mildred Marshall.

ENGAGEMENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ericsson of 326 Center street announce the engagement of their daughter, Florence Winnifred, to Fred Vogel Prather, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas B. Prather of Columbus, Ind. The wedding will take place in the spring.

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph M. Browarsky, 5420 Michigan avenue, announce the engagement of their daughter, Myrtle, to Elmer H. Mahler, son of Mrs. Edward Mahler of Milwaukee.

Miss Aurelia Treuhaft, 4733 Lake Park avenue, announces the engagement of her sister, Josephine Helen, to Harry Edward Greenhouse, son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Greenhouse of 1442 North Kedzie avenue.

NEW YORK SOCIETY

Small Entertainments the Vogue in Newport This Season.

by Mme. Y.

NEW YORK.—[Special Correspondence.]—The present Newport season differs from previous ones in two particulars. First, there are to be no large entertainments. That is to say there are entertainments a-plenty which every one else in the world would consider large, but these are small for Newport. The diminutive is here used to denote merely a life sized party, and nothing that involves the importation of a theatrical company, nor the rehearsal for weeks by the members of the smart set, to say nothing of the purchase of thousands of dollars' worth of costumes.

The late Mrs. Stuyvesant Fish gave the last party of this kind which, so seemingly authoritative statements have it, will never take place in the summer capital. She said as she was getting up that she expected t discourage every one else from going in for anything so elaborate. It lay Newport open to severe criticism to have its colony devote such hours of time and large sums to mere entertainment.

This is the first summer that the greatest of its entertainers has not been there. Her cottage, with its famous new French ball room looking over the ocean, is for sale. But her dictates still prevail. In accordance with her decision, no large entertainments are scheduled to take place. There are, on the other hand, scores of little ones, where the Newport colony, smartly and prettily dressed, assemble and by their own wit and personalityy entertain one another.

They say no season has ever passed in which there has been so little expenditure for festivity. All of the spare money has been collected in one way and another for the relief of the countries at war. To be sure the one way to raise money is to give entertainments at which people think they are getting something for what they spend. Newport has followed this device of luring the reluctant dollar from trousers pockets, but it has spent only mild sums in so doing.

The other particular in which this season differs from those past is that it promises to prolong into the autumn. Customarily the horse show comes in September, and as the frost starts the swallow, so this event shoots the smart set off to their various fall resorts. Mrs. Fish used to take to Garrison-on-the-Hudson, where she gave a barn dance amid frosted pumpkins and cornstalks. The barn never saw a horse and was built for the purpose of housing the big fall entertainment of smart society. Usually in one night it housed a party the expense of which would endow a horse hospital for the aged and infirm.

MISS JANET SHEARSON

Miss Janet Shearson was one of the many New York society women who took part in the Sportsman ball at Narragansett Pier. All those attending the ball attired themselves in costumes representing some form of indoor or outdoor sport. Miss Shearson appears to represent one of the greatest of indoor sports, poker.

This year, this and like expensive entertainments are also to be abandoned, but people are going to stay at Newport late. Smart society is "getting on to" the fact that the loveliest season of the year in the charming old port city is the fall season, and now on Bellevue avenue any day you hear this conversation:

"Where are you going this autumn?"

"Why, we think we'll stay here until time to go right to town. It's so sweet here."

One of those scheduled to remain at least until October is Mrs. Hamilton Wickes Cary. She and Mr. Cary have one of the four Pinard cottages, and they find it very agreeable indeed. Newport in turn seems to find it agreeable to have them—Mrs. Cary all the time and Mr. Cary at week ends, as well as for two weeks consecutively.

Mrs. Cary is pronounced the best of hostesses as well as one of the most charmingly costumed women of the home of fashion. The other day at the Casino she appeared in a striking costume which has been talked about a good deal since. It consisted of a blazer coat of king's blue and in a new material of heavy knitted raw silk. It was fastened with square blue buttons and was sashed with silk. A dainty white embroidered collar fell over the neck of it. Her skirt was of blue and white awning cloth laid in wide plaits. In length it was two inches above her ankle. She wore a panama hat with a high crown and a rolling brim, which had for garnishement a simple ribbon band and a rosette. To be sure it was elaborated somewhat by a beautiful lace face veil. Her stockings were of white silk and her pumps of white buckskin. In one hand she carried a crook cane and from the other swung a white leather envelope shaped bag.

Since Newport has become simpler and Narragansett Pier more complex in its entertaining and its robberies, one frequently turns to this neighboring resort for its thrills. Last week it furnished decidedly novel entertainment. Mr. and Mrs. John Henry Hanan were the hosts and Gov. and Mrs. Livingston Beeckman the guests of honor The function was a dinner dance, and was decidedly the principal entertainment of the year at Narragansett. Vari-colored electric lights illumined the lawn of Shore Acres, the ocean place of the Hanans. The governor and Mrs. Hanan received in the elaborate hall of the house.

At the dinner the governor's table was built to represent an immense bird cage, in the shape of a hollow square, which was nothing more nor less than a sunken garden, contrived and elaborated right in the Hanan dining room. There were flowers growing all round him and high foliage. Also there were singing birds on perches. There were thrushes, canaries, parrots, and doves. Over the tables was a high gilded net, which created the effect that the guests were eating in a huge cage. The favors for the women were small willow bird cages containing toy birds. From the center of the governor's table rose the shield and coat of arms of Rhode Island, fashioned of blue and yellow flowers and illumined electrically. A toast to the governor was sung by a quartet during the dinner.

NEWS OF CHICAGO SOCIETY

Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Davies of New York announce the engagement of their daughter, Elinor, to Eugene H. de Bronkart of Chicago. The wedding will take place in January.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Meyers of 5840 South Park avenue announce the engagement of their daughter, Ruth, to Manuel Schochet.

FUTURE EVENTS.

Mr. and Mrs. Alvin H. Sanders have issued invitations for a week end party at their cottage at the Midlothian club, to follow the woman's golf tournament finals, to be played on Friday. Several other cottagers at the club have also issued invitations for the week end.

PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregory White, 3119 Flournoy street, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Hunter of Pasadena, the latter formerly Miss Gwendolyn Mitchell, will arrive next week to visit Mrs. Hunter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John J. Mitchell, at Cleylon Court, Lake Geneva.

Mrs. Bruce D. Smith of Lake Forest, after spending several weeks with Mrs. Solomon Smith at Charlevoix, has gone east to visit Mr. and Mrs. Charles Edward Brown on Long Island, and Mr. and Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson, who have taken a house at East River, Conn.

Dr. Anna Dwyer and the Misses Ethel and Esther Dwyer arrived home last Sunday morning from a ten days' visit at Lake Geneva.

Mr. and Mrs. William V. Kelley of 1550 North State Parkway gave a dance for the young friends of their sons Wednesday evening. They have been occupying the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Meeker at Lake Forest for the summer.

Mrs. Marshall Field is expected to return to Chicago this week from a trip to the California fairs. She will come by way of Vancouver and the Canadian Rockies. She is spending several days at both Lake Louise and Banff.

Mrs. James B. Waller, who has been spending the summer at Magnolia, Mass., has as her guest, Mrs. Charles Deering of New York. Mrs. Deering spent the earlier part of the summer as the guest of her son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey McCormick of Evanston. Later she will visit her daughter, Mrs. Richard Ely Danielson, who is at the seashore.

From Honolulu, where so many Chicagoans have visited this season, comes the news of a large dinner dance that was given for the members of the visiting polo teams at Heine's tavern, when Mr. and Mrs. Walter Dillingham, formerly of Chicago, who arranged the affair, presided.

Following the weekly after dinner dance at the Moraine hotel Tuesday evening there was a Mardi Gras frolic in the ballroom.

Mr. and Mrs. Everett Chase Brown arrived home Monday from a month's visit to California.

Mrs. W. A. Alexander was in charge of the women's golf luncheon Tuesday at the Onwentsia club, Lake Forest. There was a semi-final match play and a four ball match for players not in matches.

Among the most active committees, of which there are many working for the success of the Lake Forest country fair, which is to be held at Onwentsia club Aug. 28, is that headed by Mrs. Edward I. Cudahy, who has charge of the program of the day and the many details that go with it. Assisting her will be many of the younger group of Lake Forest maidens, who are to sell the programs in costume. They include Miss Emily Russell, Miss Grace Tuttle, and Miss Margaret Thompson. Mrs. Rosecrans Baldwin, Mrs. Donald Ryerson, Mrs. Bruce Borland, Mrs. Charles Counselman, Mrs. John De Koven Bowen, Mrs. Frank Wilhelm, and Mrs. Paul Gardner are also assisting Mrs. Cudahy.

Mrs. William P. Nelson of Lake Forest gave a luncheon last Sunday at her Lake Forest home and afterward the guests played tennis.

Miss Harriet N. Winchell and her niece, Mrs. Frank W. Montgoery, left last week for Washington and Atlantic City. They were accompanied by Mrs. Harriet N. Brady of New York, and will visit her at the latter's home, 210 West Seventy-first street, before returning to Chicago.

Mrs. Vincent Walsh and her sister, Miss Elizabeth Cudahy, who have been at Virginia Hot Springs for nearly three mohths, have returned to Chicago.

Mrs. Edward I. Cudahy will entertain a number of friends at a golf luncheon at her home in Lake Forest tomorrow.

There are a number of Chicagoans spending August at Green Lake, Wis. Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Willoughby and family have one of the Oakwood cottages; Mr. and Mrs. Philip Elting of Bellevue place also have a cottage at Oakwood; Mr. and Mrs. James H. Channon, who have one of the new cottages of the Oakwood group, gave a large fish fry for the Chicago contingent.

Mr. and Mrs. David R. Forgan of Evanston will be in New Brunswick until September.

Dr. and Mrs. Philip Schuyler Doane and their children of Winnetka will spend several weeks at their camp at Trout lake.

Mr. and Mrs. Angus Hibbard left Monday for a fishing trip in northern Minnesota. They have been stopping at the Glen View club.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wentworth of 51 Bellevue place left on Wednesday for a tour through the east.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Wells of 5428 Kimbark avenue have returned to the city after a cruise with Arthur Shattuck on his yacht Dion.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Woodston Schofield of the Hyde Park hotel have returned from a three months' trip to the Pacific coast.

An announcement came by cable on Tuesday from Scotland, from Mrs. Will Hartwell Lyford, of the birth of a daughter last Sunday to Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Ruthven Boyd. Mrs. Boyd was formerly Miss Gertrude Lyford, the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyford, and her marriage to Mr. Boyd was one of the brilliant events of the autumn two years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. C. K. G. Billings of New York left the Blackstone on Wednesday for the east. Mrs. Billings has been stopping at the hotel and Mr. Billings joined her, coming from the west, where they both attended the expositions. Mrs. Billings has been spending a few days quietly visiting her many Chicago friends

Mrs. George A. McKinlock has gone east for a few weeks' visit.

Joseph Winterbotham of the Virginia hotel will leave shortly for Charlotte, Vt., to visit his daughter, Mrs. John Alden Carpenter, at her summer home.

Mrs. Robert F. Carr of Highland Park entertained a number of guests on Wednesday at luncheon at her home, followed by bridge.

Mrs. Clifford Leonard of Lake Forest has her mother, Mrs. John Gray of New York, visiting her. Mrs. Gray formerly resided on North State street, but after the death of Mr. Gray three years ago removed to the east. She has many friends in Chicago.

J. Ogden Armour has gone east to visit his mother, Mrs. P. D. Armour, at Briarcliff Manor, N. Y. Mrs. Armour, whose health has not been good, has improved rapidly since she went east some weeks ago.

Mrs. Betty Hamilton Pope and Miss Virginia Pope, 62 East Oak street, have gone east for the rest of the summer.

News of the Religious World

By the Rev. W. B. Norton.

THE Rev. Thomas E. Burke, C. S. P., is the new pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church. He will preach his first sermon in the church next Sunday morning at 11 o'clock. The church, which is the oldest church organization in Chicago, is located at East Ninth street and South Wabash avenue. The stone building now occupied was purchased from the Plymouth Congregational church, but the original frame church in which the St. Mary's congregation first worshiped was erected in 1833. The church is now ministered to by the Paulist Fathers, whose special mission is preaching to non-Catholics and seeking to win converts from among their ranks. The clergy house adjoins the church.

Father Burke comes to Chicago from Toronto, Canada, where for two years he has had charge of establishing Catholic work among the students of the University of Toronto. He organized the Newman club, named in honor of Cardinal Newman, who came into the Roman Catholic church from the established church of England.

Father Burke was equipped for his ministry by special study in the Catholic University of America at Washington, D. C. He has traveled in the far east and recently completed a trip to the Pacific coast. The Rev. John J. Burke, a brother, is the editor of the Catholic World.

Father Burke succeeds in the pastorate of St. Mary's the Very Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan, C. S. P., who was pastor of the church for twelve years and was one of the best known Catholic priests in the city. He preached his farewell sermon in the church Aug. 1. A farewell reception was given him the following Wednesday evening.

Father O'Callaghan is president of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America. During his pastorate at St. Mary's he established several branches in which social work is being done. These organizations will be in readiness for further extension under the pastorate of Father Burke.

The social agencies include the Paulist Settlement at 1122 South Wabash avenue, the Day Nursery at 919 South Wabash avenue, the Paulist mission of Our Lady of Victory at 845 South State street, and the Paulist hall at 804 South Wabash avenue.

The design of the mission of Our Lady of Victory is to do rescue work among men who have gone far into sin. The Paulist hall is designed as a preventive. It is patronized and maintained by a class of young men who are in business and in various forms of honorable occupation. Entertainments and social gatherings such as would be suitable in the parlors of good homes, are provided. Classes for study and lectures are also a part of the winter's plan.

One of the ways in which St. Mary's has adapted itself to the needs of the downtown situation is in holding mass at 3 o'clock in the morning. Night workers in the trades and in newspaper offices have thus been provided for. As mass is always a morning service night workers are obliged to forego necessary sleep unless furnished some such opportunity as this.

The Rev. Edward T. Mallon, S. C. P., has been the priest in charge since Father O'Callaghan's departure, while awaiting the arrival of Father Burke.

There are several transfers among the priests of the Jesuit order which will bring new pastors or assistants into their fields of labor today and next Sunday. The changes are:

The Rev. Joseph E. Kennedy, S. J., of Kansas City, Mo., will become pastor of the Holy Family church, Chicago. The pastor of the Holy Family church, the Rev. J. F. Neenan, S. J., will go to St. Xavier's church, Cincinnati.

The Rev. John Masterton, S. J., of the Holy Family church, Chicago, will go to St. Aloysius church, Kansas City, Mo.

The Rev. Thomas O'Malley, S. J., of St. Ignatius church, Sheridan road and Devon avenue, will also go to Kansas City, Mo.

The Rev. Patrick Murphy, S. J., of Marquette university, will take the place of Father O'Malley at St. Ignatius'.

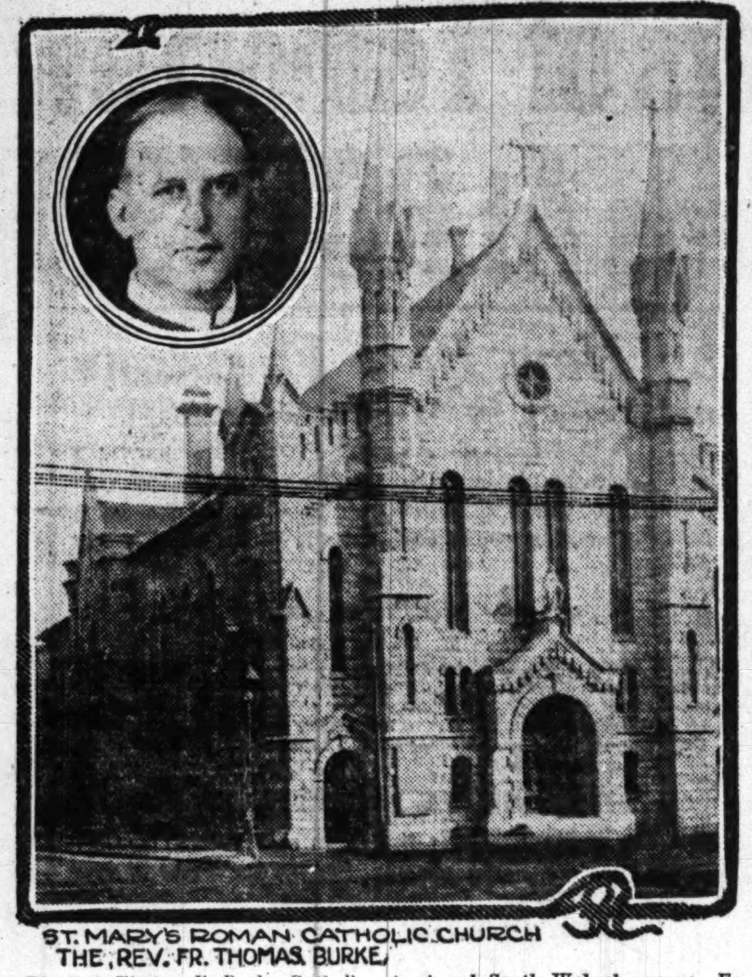
The Rev. James McCarthy, S. J., of Cincinnati will come to the Holy Family church.

The Rev. Andrew Cook, S. J., will go as a missionary to the Indians in South Dakota.

The Rev. John Assmann, S. J., appointed as one of the chaplains in the Cook county hospital.

The Rev. R. Spring, S. J., of St. Mary's college, Kansas, will take the place of the Rev. Father Martin, S. J., who goes as professor at St. Xavier's college, Cincinnati. The Rev. Father Senn, S. J., will also go to St. Xavier's college, Cincinnati.

The Rev. Father Schuler, S. J., goes to Campion college, Prairie du Chien, Wis.



ST. MARY'S ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH
THE REV. FR. THOMAS BURKE.

The Rev. Thomas E. Burke, C. S. P., will preach his first sermon next Sunday morning as pastor of St. Mary's Roman Catholic church, East Ninth street and South Wabash avenue. Father Burke succeeds in the pastorate of the church the Rev. Peter J. O'Callaghan, C. S. P., who was pastor for twelve years.

Best Sellers in Music.

Columbia records which have been the most popular during the week are:

"Classic One-Step" ["Toreador," "Melody in F," "Anvil Chorus," etc.] and "Snappy One-Step," played by violin and piano.

"Ragging the Scale" [Claypoole], fox trot, and "Kinky" [Bernard], one-step played by Princess band.

"There's a Long, Long Trail" [Elliot] tenor and baritone, and "There's a Little Lane Without a Turning," tenor and orchestra.

Among the Victor records three have had the largest sale in the last six days:

"Schön Rosmarin," Fritz Kreisler.

"Depuis le Jour" [from "Louise"], sung by Alma Gluck.

"Kentucky Babe," sung by "That Girl Quartet," and "Knee Deep in June" [Riley], sung by Henry Price.

The Edison company reports the three following:

"The two Grenadiers," with explanatory talk, sung by Arthur Middleton, bass.

"Chant sans Paroles" [Tschaikowsky] and "Orientale" [Cui], played by Albert Spalding, violin.

"Moonlight on the Lake" and "The Old Oaken Bucket," sung by the Knickerbocker quartet.

Sheet music numbers which have had the largest sale during the week at a leading music store are:

"The Magic Melody," from "Nobody Home," by Jerome Kern.

"Today"—song—by Carrie Jacobs-Bond.

"Hello, 'Frisco," from the 1915 "Follies," Irving Berlin.

New Street and Evening Gowns

In Silks, Chiffons, Nets and Combinations

Styles made to sell at $35.00, $40.00 and $45.00, just from the workrooms of one of the best makers, at $12.75
(Also 25 Black Mourning Gowns.)

On account of the limited number—only 100 street and evening gowns and 25 mourning gowns—and the great values these Dresses will not go on sale until 9 O'CLOCK MONDAY MORNING, and only ONE DRESS to a customer—and no orders by mail or telephone.

All new fall styles and in perfect condition. We wish to specially impress this fact on your mind for fear you might think, on account of the low price, that they were not new and perfect. Two-thirds of these dresses come in size 36.

We will not tire you with a long explanation as to how we can offer fresh, new $35.00, $40.00 and $45.00 Fall Gowns at so low a price other than to say it is one of the most advantageous deals we ever made.

This lot contains a miscellany of smart styles in taffetas, silk voiles, poplins, novelty silks, chiffons, crepe de chine, allover nets, velvets, marquisettes, laces and taffeta combination, crepes and fancy velvets. They are new in every line, featuring jacket effects, quaint bodices, ruffles, high, regular and low waist lines, novel collars and numerous other style points brought out this season.

All Evening Gowns are suitable for the most formal occasions, having low necks and short sleeves. The Street Dresses are cut high at the neck, with long sleeves, and show all the new ideas. They come in light and medium shades and are most elaborate in design.

The Dresses Illustrated Are Typical of the Attractive Styles.

No. 1—Dress of changeable flowered taffeta, combined with Georgette crepe. Flesh colored vestee of chiffon; lace trimmed collar. Price, $12.75.

No. 2—Evening Dress of medium blue taffeta; trimmed with gold lace and butterfly sleeves of white net. Price, $12.75.

No. 3—Evening Dress of brick colored soft taffeta with overdrape of dotted voile; effectively trimmed with black satin girdle and ribbon. Price, $12.75.

BARRETT

Institute of Shorthand

Cheapest in Cost—Best in Results

Young men and women interested in a stenographic or secretarial course, day or evening, will appreciate the advantages of this institution. It offers the shortest complete course in the best systems of shorthand and typewriting, and a thorough course in all forms of business correspondence. In the matter of time and money, the cost of success is no more than the cost of failure. It is just a difference in course and methods—the difference between theoretical and practical training. Inquiry and investigation will prove this to be the best equipped and most reliable institution of the kind in the United States. Positions for graduates. Day and evening sessions, beginning Sept. 1. Call, write, or telephone (Central 474) for catalogue. Majestic Theater Building, Monroe near State Street.

The Higgins Auto Institute

WHAT IT IS—AND WHAT IT WILL DO

The Higgins Auto Institute is a new school for the teaching of automobiling. It is founded on a new principle, and will be conducted along new lines—based upon sound common sense.

The purpose of the Higgins Auto Institute is to teach proper automobiling—to teach "SAFE" automobiling.

It will be for the man who plans to drive his own car; for his son; or his daughter. And it will be equally for the young man (or woman) who plans to earn a living by driving and caring for the cars of other people.

The method will be new. It will consist in teaching each student the way to drive his or her car with absolute safety. Those who will finish the Higgins course will have learned how to handle a car in every circumstance which means danger. And as a basis for this, of course, will be taught a knowledge of every part of the car.

The idea is a thoroughly practical one—it has been worked out and proved, many times, by men who have been identified with automobiling since the birth of the industry.

Classes, terms and all other details will be arranged with care to give the greatest benefit to each student at the least cost. There will be night and day classes—individual instruction for every person attending. Every part of the study will be done in a practical way—using modern cars.

All details given in catalog, which you may have for asking.

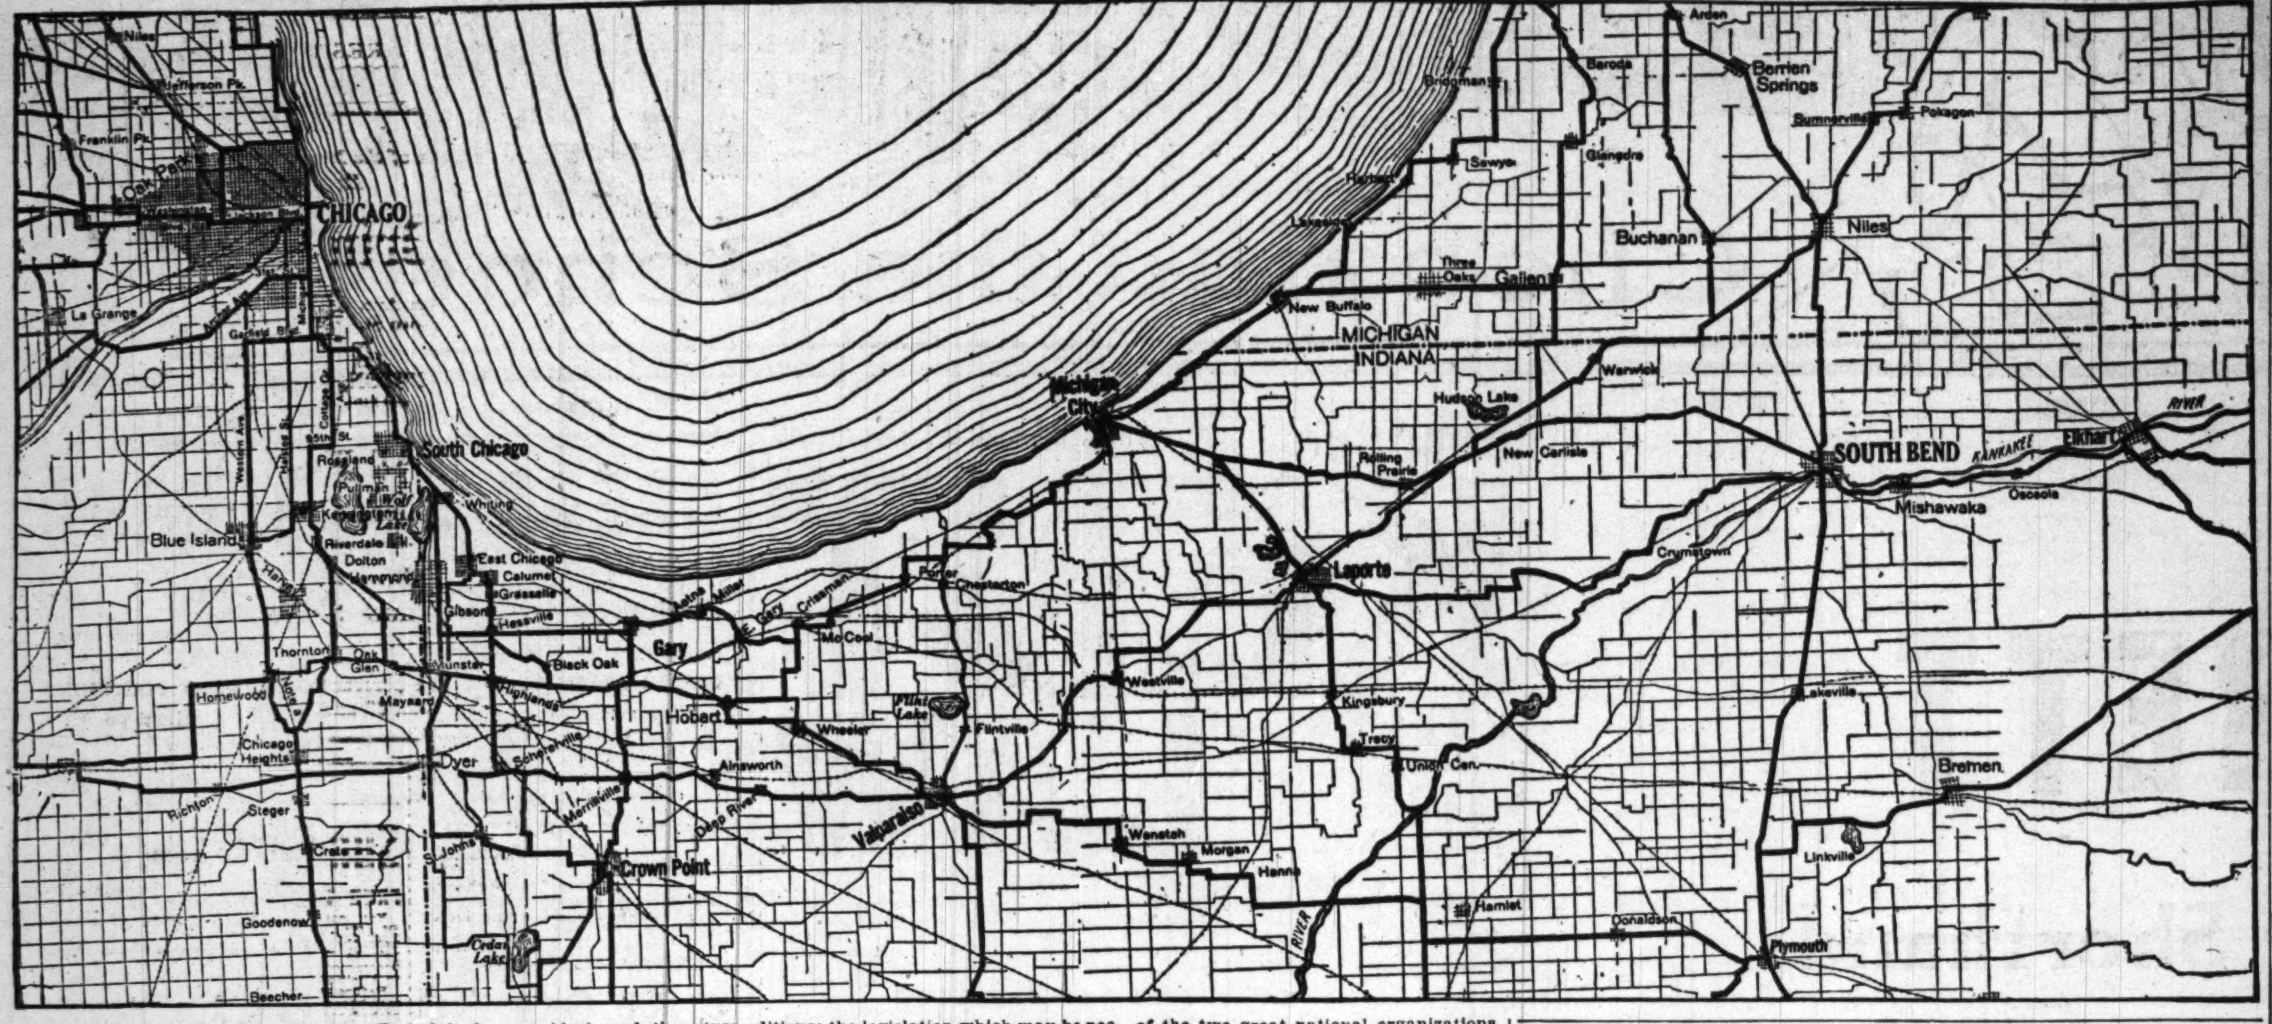
MOTORING TO MICHIGAN THROUGH HAMMOND.



By L. M. Steffens.

HAMMOND, Ind., which is twenty-two miles from Chicago by road, serves as a route center for all the trunk line automobile roads that leave Chicago for points in the east and southeast. Due to the fact that the shore route through Whiting and Gary is in poor condition, the majority of the motorists who have Michigan for their destination, have been been going through Hammond and thence east through Hobart, Chesterton, and Michigan City.

In leaving Chicago for Hammond, the most favorable route that will afford good roads all the way is via Ewing avenue and Green Bay avenue. This route eliminates Indianapolis avenue, which is in poor condition, due to the heavy travel of the past year without being improved.

From Jackson and Michigan boulevards the route goes south in Michigan avenue to Garfield boulevard [Fifty-fifth street], and then turns left through Washington park, continues south to the end of the park and then turns left across Cottage Grove avenue, entering in the Midway and following this to the entrance of Jackson park. At Jackson park turn to right and follow the main drive, and then turn right in South Shore boulevard, passing the South Shore Country club on the left. Continue south to Seventy-first street, turn left for two blocks and turn right in Bond avenue to Eighty-third street, then turn left with trolley and turn right in Burley avenue, following this to the end of the street, which is Eighty-seventh street; turn left with trolley and take the next right turn in Buffalo avenue to Ninety-second street, turn left for one block and then turn right in Ewing avenue.

At the mileage of 14.1 Indianapolis avenue is passed on the left. Continue south in Ewing avenue to One Hundred and Sixth street, turn right for four-tenths of a mile and then turn left in Green Bay avenue. Following Green Bay avenue south turn right and left with the road and again turn right with road across railroad tracks, passing the General Chemical company on the right, turn left in Carondolet avenue, crossing small wooden bridge and railroad to One Hundred and Thirty-second street, turn left for one block and then right in Baltimore avenue through Hegewish, nineteen miles. Follow Baltimore avenue to the end and then curve left in Brainard avenue through Burham, paralleling with railroad on right, turn left at the end of the street, Goslin avenue, and turn right in Sheffield avenue across trollay and railroad tracks, continue to the end of the street and then turn left in Hoffman street for one block and take next right turn in Hohman avenue, crossing railroad tracks and bridge over the Calumet river to the center of Hammond.

The route leaving Hammond for Indianapolis and points south goes south in Hohman avenue to the end and then turns left in the Ridge road. For Gary turn left after crossing the Calumet river in Michigan avenue.

The dominating problem in connection with highway building at the present time is unquestionably that of finance and indebtedness. This applies both to country roads and city streets, and involves the questions as to whether direct taxation or bond issues are preferable; the proper term for bonds; the amount of bonds which may be judicially issued for road and street construction under given conditions; the legislation which may be necessary in reducing these essential factors from the haphazard to a basis which shall be scientific and economic; the questions of sinking funds, and bond retirements; all appeal directly to the best financial sense of all citizens, when road or street improvement is contemplated.

The fact that probably one-half of the counties and cities in the United States are now at some stage of the agitation for highway betterment makes the financial problem one of paramount importance. The subject will be presented and discussed in all its phases at the Pan-American Road congress, which will assemble at the Municipal auditorium, Oakland, Cal., on Monday, Sept. 13, and continue five days.

While steady and regular advancement has been made during the last ten years in methods of road and street construction, maintenance, and administration, it has been through the annual conventions of the two great national organizations, the American Road Builders' association and the American Highway association, that the knowledge of the various lines of improvement has become general, and the whole world enabled to profit. This year the two associations have joined their forces to organize the Pan-American Road congress, and secure the presence of delegates from practically every country in all America. They will be aided on the Pacific coast by two organizations with memberships in California, Oregon, and Washington, the Tri-State Good Roads association and the Pacific Highway association.

Twenty-seven subjects will be considered at the congress. Six of these are educational; the other twenty-one are open to discussion, not only by those selected by the program committee to prepare papers and lead discussions, but by any one, delegate, member, or visitor, who may be present, so that all known facts may be brought out.

Early Gray Days.

PERCEPTIBLY the days shorten. The sun, south bound, calls the loans of longer hours so freely extended to the summer and payment is begun in earlier twilight and lengthened evening. The small conditions of life change and the mood with it. Expectancy has a growing value.

A gray day comes and that is prophetic. Summer may have rainy days and muggy days, days of drizzle and days of storm, but these are not gray days. A gray day is spiritual and suggestive, not merely disconcerting or disagreeable.

A true gray day is one which has the aspect and the suggestion but not the uncomfortable material qualities of inclemency. It is akin to and sometimes accompanied by a wind which bends the trees and complains in the eaves with the suggestion of elemental force, but without the use of it.

Considerable human values are afforded by contrasts. One contrast is that between man made comforts and nature made discomforts. The wind in the eaves suggests the log in the fire place. The gray day, of which this wind may be a part, suggests, if it have the tonic quality of autumn, the approach of conditions which require human thrift and precautions for the maintenance of human comforts.

As the sun calls its loans of longer hours, the gray days come prophetically now and then into late August and early September. They are set strangely in the still luxuriant green of summer, but they start the feeling of expectancy. The outdoors approaches the edge of change. A touch of color in the Virginia creeper, the reappearance of a warbler, the budding wych hazel blossoms, reveal it. Expectancy is in the early twilight, in the chill of evening, and its voice is that of the katydid.

Gossip of the Auto Trade

By Reed L. Parker.

The McDuffee Automobile company, at Twenty-fifth street and Michigan avenue, will handle the Dort Motor Car company's product for the coming season. The new 1916 Dort is scheduled to arrive in Chicago within the next week or two. It is a four cylinder car and at its new price should prove an excellent addition to the McDuffee present line.

An announcement has been received that the Herff-Brooks Automobile company of Indianapolis has located a new dealer in Chicago. The car for 1916 will be handled by G. L. Brandeis, 1436 South Michigan avenue.

One of the new model National Highway sixes is being displayed by the McDuffee Automobile company. This new National was announced at the time of the 500 mile race at Indianapolis and is attracting considerable attention because it is the lowest priced car ever produced by the National Motor Vehicle company. J. R. Buck, head of the McDuffee Automobile company, claims that this Highway six is the most classy of all Nationals. He stated that it incorporated all the power, stamina, and good looks that have characterized all previous Nationals. Buck calls attention to the fact that the National factory built the first American six cylinder cars and that its Highway cars are now offered in both six and twelve cylinder cars. "The name 'Highway,'" said Mr. Buck, "as well as the type of this new National, immediately suggests a cross country trip. In fact, the car is designed to give motorists all the comforts and luxuries they are accustomed to at home while traveling in their car."

According to the best available statistics there are nearly 2,000,000 motor cars in active service in the United States. Despite this immense number of cars, it is the opinion that merely the surface of possible buyers has been scratched and that in time every family will be able to own and operate a motor car. The trade is watching with interest the plan being presented by the Motor Car Sales company, 2329 Michigan avenue, which is offering Briscoe motor cars on an easy payment basis. It seems to be the general opinion that this plan will meet with great success, inasmuch as it will not cost the prospective buyer anything additional to buy on the installment basis.

Three branch houses of the Oldsmobile company have recently been purchased from the company and in the future will be operated as independent agencies for the Oldsmobile cars. They are located in Buffalo, N. Y., Los Angeles, and San Francisco, Cal. A high premium was placed upon these branches, which have been distributing cars as fast as they could get them, and many offers were made the management of the company to take them over. The new distributors will handle substantially the same territories and occupy the buildings formerly owned by the branches.

The announcement of the Willys-Knight car was substantial proof of the fact that the sleeve valve motor is coming to its own in this country as it already has done abroad. In Europe engines of the sleeve valve type have been almost universally adopted by the leading manufacturers. According to those familiar with Knight motor construction, the numerous advantages of the sleeve valve motor can be summed up in the two words "absolute dependability." Paul Daimler, mechanical director of the Mercedes company, Germany's leading automobile concern, and son of Gottlieb Daimler, inventor of the internal combustion engine is a firm believer in the sleeve valve engine. In a communication to the Allgemeine Automobile Zeitung of Vienna, he once stated: "If any one came to me from the farthest end of Russia and asked my advice, declaring that there was no repair shop within miles of his residence, I would advise him to take a sleeve valve engine."

The Anderson Electric Car company, builder of Detroit Electrics, has been forced to extend its production plans for this coming season to provide for more than twice as many cars as it built in 1915. Although a few years ago electric cars in the main were looked upon as only town cars, this feeling has disappeared from the minds of those who have kept in touch with the marvelous advances in electric car construction and design. The modern electric has plenty of power to climb steep hills and speed enough for every ordinary need. It is no uncommon thing nowadays to see numerous electric cars on country roads making interurban trips. Paved streets and smooth boulevards no longer mark the limit of an electric car's usefulness,

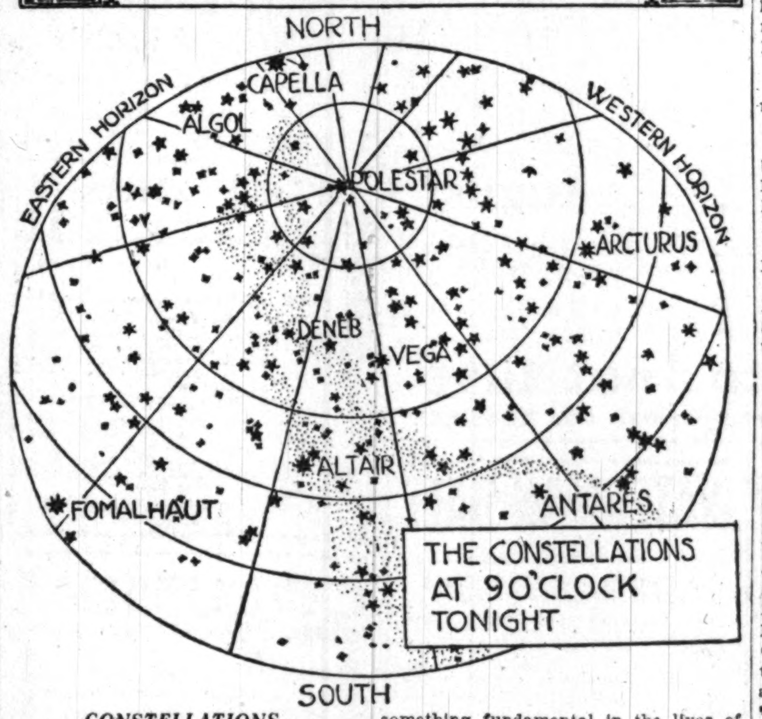
"Kindly advise me in the column of THE TRIBUNE the best motor route from Chicago to La Crosse, Wis.

"C. J. M., Chicago."

Leaving Chicago go west on Lake street, through Addison and Elgin, thence turn north through Dundee, Crystal Lake, Woodstock, Harvard, Walworth, Darien, Janesville, Edgerton, Stoughton, Madison, Pleasant Branch, Ashton, Sauk City, Prairie du Sac, Baraboo, Abelmans, Reedsburg, Lavalle, Wonewoc, Union Center, Elroy, Kendalls, Ontario, Cashton, Portland, Middle Ridge St. Joseph, and La Crosse. The mileage is 297.6 miles.

ASTRONOMY



CONSTELLATIONS.

CONSTELLATIONS represent merely the play of man's imagination among the stars. What the fancy saw of old and expressed has been retained by science for convenience, but the person just learning to look into the skies with some hope of identifying a star need not feel nonplussed if the figuration of which he has heard does not appear at all to his eyes.

Some of the works of the imagination which are represented in the accompanying sky map are so illusory that much looking would fail to reveal their actual outlines. Others are so definitely outlined that they were known to Assyrians at one end of the world and Peruvians at the other.

There was a definite suggestion which seemed inevitable. The Great Bear, Ursa Major, is a constellation which has taken the form now of a bear and now of a wagon in the imagination of men the world over.

As a bear it will enter the comprehension of any person who will give the skies a few moments' attention each clear night. It can be seen striding across the heavens, and when the imagination first sees the stars which form it suddenly taking the ancient shape for which it has been known from Palestine to Peru, there will be a quick sense of having grasped something fundamental in the lives of men.

The Great Bear is the obvious constellation of the heavens, having in its flank the one cluster of stars which every one knows and every one can find, the Big Dipper. Observation of the Dipper will be followed by a sudden comprehension that it is a part of another figure, and this figure, to the astonishment of the observer, will take form and dominate the heavens.

Other constellations are less fortunate or less favoring. In the Milky Way now is the Swan, with Deneb as its chief star, but the eyes will look a long time before the imagination sees the Swan. Cassiopeia, to the east of the pole star, the Lady in the Chair, can be recognized by its obvious W, but the Lyre, at the western edge of the Milky Way, distinguished by the great star Vega, will defy identification.

Observation and imagination alike may be asked in vain to make anything of Bootes, the constellation in which Arcturus, hanging off beyond the end of the handle of the Dipper, shines.

Constellations have imaginary value, and they are apt to be overestimated in the consideration of persons who are just coming to take an interest in the skies at night. Inability to find their outlines discouraging, unnecessarily. The important things in the sky are the stars. They can be found and made familiar.

Makes An Instant Appeal

The new 1916 Allen, announced last Sunday, has captivated all who have seen it.

The beautiful, boat-line effect, the handsome dark green finish, the roomy body, the long 55 inch underslung rear springs, the graceful, rounded radiator, the enclosed parts, the light weight, (2300 lbs.), the complete equipment from Westinghouse Electric Systems down to headlight dimmers, all at $795 have commanded wide recognition and instant appreciation.

To see and ride in an Allen is to buy one, if you are contemplating a car of its size and price, because the market affords no better value.

GEORGE FITCH—TRIBUTES OF FRIENDS TO A FRIEND.

the place of the usual Tabloid
Review, herewith are present-the tributes of some of the ds of the late George Fitch, died on Aug 9.

N the death of its charter member,
George Fitch, the Society of Midland Authors has suffered a grievous loss. He was loved for himself and for his work; for his high de toward life, which was filled with ness and expectancy, and for his r, which was without bitterness.
Charged by the society with the ex-on of its sentiments, the underd herewith convey to Mrs. Fitch, brother, and sister sympathy of all members.

I was associated with George Fitch in his start and finish as a daily news-

He was not at that time a particu-
y good news gatherer, but the boy's with such guidance as I was able to

, but with more or less indifferent ults. A summer vacation came on as he was handy I kept him on the f as a regular reporter—and again only ordinary results.
There came a day, however, when Afro-American bicycle riders of the dle west held a racing meet in Gales-
. Not regarding the event of suffi-t news value to waste a 'good' re-er upon it, I sent Fitch with more ss indifference as to the result. That t he laid a story on my desk that I er will forget. It broke the spell of daily grind and brought to me with a t the sudden realization that here was w American humorist.
He was immediately detached from dull routine of weddings and funerals social events to the work for which unusual gifts adapted him. In the realistic atmosphere which had pro-
Eugene Field, Bob Burdette, and
S. McClure, he started a 'column'

I left Galesburg and George left sburg. A few years later I invited to become editor of the Peoria Her-
Transcript, in which I had an inter-

It was my pleasure to suggest the h I had in his possibilities to several York magazine editors, who were k to realize his worth and began to for his work.
Not only have his friends and literature suffered irreparable loss in George Fitch's death but his country also. The same intense loyalty which characterized his friendships was found in his love for his country and its institutions, which was reflected in an almost passionate devotion to every cause and movement which he believed made for its progress. For those of us who knew him well the memory of his simplicity, honesty, and sweet sanity will always remain. He was destined to do great things in literature and life, to be America's greatest humorist, and one of her most useful citizens.

"FRANCIS H. SISSON, New York."

"We shall be heavier of heart these years for lack of him and for want of the kindly human laughter that made him loved as O. Henry and Mark Twain were loved. In his loss is the hard sharpness of frustration—for him—and for us.

"MARY HASTINGS BRADLEY, Chicago."

"My acquaintance with George Fitch began nine years ago when several of us, under the leadership of John S. Phillips, left McClure's Magazine and took hold of the American Magazine. That fall of 1906 when we were scratching like blazes for copy Francis H. Sisson told me about George Fitch, who was then working on the Peoria Herald-Transcript. Sisson told me particularly about a comical newspaper piece which Fitch had writt.n on the subject of the Missouri river. I got hold of that little piece and wrote to Fitch suggesting that he do a magazine article on the same subject. He did and it was a wonder. He called it 'The Missouri River—Its Habits and Eccentricities, Described by a Personal Friend.' We published it in our April, 1907, issue and it made a big hit. This was the beginning of a long and friendly personal and business relationship.

"As the years have gone by we have seen George here in the office over and over, and always, of course, had a wonderful time when he called. The last corking time I had with him was in a golf game here in New York which Frank Sisson and I got up. We got D. A. McKinlay, the book publisher, to play with us—the three of us as partners again Bob Davis, editor of Munsey's, and George Fitch. Sisson and McKinlay played well and Fitch and Davis were punk. Fitch discovered soon that he had been let in for a drubbing and dryly remarked, 'Who segregated so many crooks at one time and arrayed them all against us?'

"JOHN M. SIDDALL,
"The American Magazine."

"George Fitch has been called 'the second Mark Twain.' He was not. He was the first George Fitch. He set the marker of American humor farther ahead than had any of his predecessors. His 'Initiating Ole' is the funniest thing in the language. Yet it seems almost a sacrilege, for one who loved him, coldly to estimate his literary value. I shall miss not merely his books but his smile, not merely his stories but his frequent and cheery letters—his wit at table, his humor on all occasions, his hearty helpfulness. And I wish to bear testimony to his constant desire to use his God given gift of humor to help in the solution of the serious problems of life. His friends and the world lost much in his passing.

"DOUGLAS MALLOCH of the Society of American Press Humorists."

"A number of well meaning commentators have essayed to pay George Fitch a kindly compliment in statements to the effect that the Fitch wit was "always without a sting." George did have a quality of humor, which he used copiously in his fiction, that was stingless and kindly. Humor is essentially gentle and playful, but George Fitch was more than a writer of humor, he was one of the keenest satirists of his time. And when he shot a shaft at some sham or evil that needed puncturing he shot a stinger—and it stung as it was meant to. There is no contemporary American who excels George Fitch as a master of keen, penetrating sarcasm.

"HENRY M. PINDELL, Peoria Journal."

ART

By Anne Ellis.

AMONG the real benefits to humanity that this vaunted land of the free and home of the brave has accomplished is the saving of Josef Pierre Nuyttens' hand for the pen instead of the sword. Mr. Nuyttens is a Belgian by birth and a Chicagoan by love and adoption.

When he was in New York a short time ago several bumptious Manhattanites, constrained to think that at last some good thing had come out of Galilee, and yet unable to understand why the author of it should return thereto, inquired very frankly of Mr. Nuyttens why he did not make his home in their august midst. It was not so much an invitation as a candid expression of surprise that any one so worth while as he could be content to dwell among the canaille.

Mr. Nuyttens hid his amusement, as he hides many things, under his suave exterior, and scored another hit for western magnanimity and Latin ancestors by replying: "Perhaps, some day—who knows?"

There are but three artists in the world who use the medium of dry point in the portraiture of women. Paul Helleu, Etienne Drien—whose real name, by the way, is Adrien Etienne—and Josef Pierre Nuyttens. Of the three the latter is the one who comes nearest to being a painter of personalities. Not only that he has made portraits of more celebrities, but because he has the knack of making the abstract into the concrete with a powerful scratch or two.

He is not frightened by the intangible, the disguises of self-consciousness of manner and caste fall from his sitters under his watchful eyes and the influence of his amiable personality. He advances the rather interesting theory that a portrait to be a good portrait must please the sitter's mother. That is the final test—if you can do that you have caught that slight case of dual personality known as home and company manners which possesses all of us.

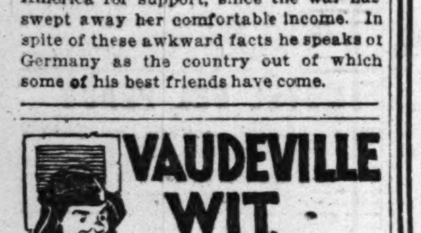
Mr. Nuyttens is primarily a modern artist, special efficient, natural, and since the epitome of modernism is motion, perhaps that is why he is essentially a painter of motion. That and the fact that he himself is always moving, mentally and physically—"always in a stew," as he succinctly expresses it.

His pictures of dancers are temporarily perhaps the essence of his genius. They even more than his portraits express his present personality; they are the joyful emanation of the youth, vitality, earnestness, and appreciation which make up the artist. The quality which differentiates him perhaps more than anything else is the European unself-consciousness which he has retained in his adoption.

He has, too, a large tolerance, which haply the years in America have given him. He has a brother in the Belgian army and his mother is in Antwerp, where she is forced to depend upon her son in America for support, since the war has swept away her comfortable income. In spite of these awkward facts he speaks of Germany as the country out of which some of his best friends have come.



MAJESTIC.

James Kelso and Blanche Leighton:

"How did you get in the house?"

"I walked in and I can't get out because the door is locked."

"How did the door get locked?"

"I locked it. But I don't care. I had a good time last week. We laid off and while you were down in the country with your folks I went to Atlantic City for a whole week alone."

"Yes, and that's the last time you'll ever go alone, because the next time you will have to take me with you."

"Hi! ho! Double the expense and half the pleasure."

"And don't forget that one man's outing may be another man's inning."

"You didn't know I could sing, did you?" (Demonstrates.)

"No. Can you?"

"Now let's dance the aeroplane glide."

"You know, I'm too fat to dance."

"Hush—you can be the balloon."

McVICKER'S.

McFarland and Murray:

"Say, what kind of a farm did you live on?"

"A homestead."

"What is a homestead?"

"A homestead means that the United States government is willing to bet 160 acres of land against $14 that you can't live on it five years without starving to death."

"Where was your homestead situated?"

"In Arizona, and it didn't rain once the whole time I was there."

"Then how could you keep the farm moist?"

"By walking over it."

"How did your walking over the farm keep it moist?"

"I had a pair of pumps."

We also ask you to see a Combination Dress of serge and plaid silk at this price. A Russian Pleated Dress of fine crepe de chine, with three tier skirt, is another choice model at 16.50.

Fall Tailored Suits, 12.75

Made of all wool poplin with silk lining. The coat is plain with bone buttons. The full flare skirt is side pleated.

Attractive models in Military Suits are shown at 16.50.

THE HIGGINS AUTO INSTITUTE.
57-63 16th-st.,
Between Wabash and Michigan-avs.

Health is your best capital. You may be broke, but with health and brains you will get there. There was never a dollar made that did not call for more than mere scheming. Scheme, dream, idealize, but keep in mind that you must put your hand to the plow or the seed will not grow. Get into the dirt, expand your nostrils like a war horse, build your muscles and get the bee of automobiling to make honey for you and win. We teach you—you learn—you DO.

We instruct in all the branches of a gasoline motor, storage batteries, magnetos, carburetors, welding, acetylene and smith, vulcanizing, overhauling of cars, repairing and driving—everything pertaining to the automobile industry. We make all difficult subjects easily understood. Remember, genuine instructors are comparatively few.

FOR SALE—IF YOU WANT AN IDEAL place to build a home, buy a lot in JACKSON PARK HIGHLANDS, south of and adjacent to Jackson Park.
I. C. express service to city—22 minutes.
Nearly 60 acres of this subdivision are restricted to single, detached dwellings, in which block houses and flats are prohibited. We know of no place in Chicago where such a large area in one subdivision is restricted to houses.
The location is ideal.
The street improvements are in.
There are many beautiful homes here.
The surroundings are exceptionally fine.
The prices of lots are reasonable, and the terms of payment can be satisfactorily arranged.
The subdivision affords both city and country life.
The beauties and comforts of Jackson Park are here.
Lake Michigan only a short distance east.
We also have in this subdivision portions which are not restricted to houses which we offer to those who wish to build high class apartments.
There is nothing on the South Side or in any other section of the city that surpasses this tract and, considering all of its advantages, we think nothing equals it. It is worthy of your investigation.
Take I. C. R. R. to Bryn Mawr station—office one block west of station platform—or take surface cars to 67th-st. and Euclid-av.—office four blocks south; by automobile—parks and boulevards.

Live Business Vacant.

East 75th-st., between Jeffery-av., and Yates-av., is the coming business center of the new South Shore district, and is ripe for building now.

75th-st. is the next heavily traveled through street south of 63rd-st. Has street car line and all improvements in.

Surrounding sections are rapidly filling up with new buildings and nowhere in the city can you buy business vacant at present prices that will bring the rent that can be gotten here.

We have the only real snaps left; a few corners and inside pieces that can be bought from depending upon location, which is much less than is asked for future business corners in prairie subdivisions where you have to wait 15 years to find out just what you have bought.

$45 to $65 Per Foot

Some of these pieces can be bought on payments of $500 to $3,000 Cash

balance on time.

There are only a very few pieces left at these prices, and it is certainly worth your while to look them over now, as no developments in recent years offer as certain profit for the builder and investor as the above.

Call or write for particulars, NOW.

ARDMORE

THE IDEAL HOME SUBURB

We all plan that sometime we want a home of our own—a real home. Let us show you why ARDMORE is the ideal suburb.

1st. LOCATION—The land at ARDMORE is high and rolling; 175 feet above Lake Michigan. The homes overlook the surrounding country for miles around, for Ardmore is built on a hill and is rightly called Chicago's most beautiful suburb of homes. There are no unsightly factories, no apartment building to shut off the light and fresh air, no nuisances of any kind to cause deterioration in the value of your home or neighborhood.

2d. TRANSPORTATION—There is no better suburban transportation in the country than the Aurora, Elgin & Chicago Electric R. R. The ride is delightful in every way. Ardmore is only 45 minutes' ride from the Loop, and the fare is only 11 cents on a monthly ticket.

3d. RESTRICTIONS—The reasonable restrictions at ARDMORE are just sufficient to keep out undesirable shacks and to keep the standard of the neighborhood what it should be for a strictly home section. Your children are safe at ARDMORE. In fact, it is the ideal place for children; here they can romp and play to their hearts' content in the fresh air and sunshine, knowing none of the dangers and evil influences of the city streets.

4th. CONVENIENCES—Every city convenience is at ARDMORE today—gas, electric light, splendid water, school, stores, churches, clubs, free delivery Chicago department stores, amusements, etc. It's no more trouble to get good meat, groceries, milk, ice, coal, etc., than in the city. And in addition the big lots at ARDMORE give you plenty of room to raise all the chickens you want and you can always be sure of fresh eggs and poultry; and the fine black soil will grow all the vegetables and small fruits you can take care of.

BIG QUARTER ACRE LOTS.

Are You Looking FOR A HOME? Have You Seen River Forest?

If not, a drive through its shady streets bordered with beautiful homes, surrounded by spacious lawns and rendered charming by flowers, shrubs, and trees, will appeal to you, with its restful charm, as a choice location for a suburban home.

If you are interested and will call up our office, located on the property, corner Harlem-av. and Lake-st., phone River Forest 250, our agent will be pleased to call for you and show you the lovely surroundings and new residences just nearing completion on the grounds of the River Forest Land Association.

These homes have each an individuality, with 6, 7, and 8 rooms, sun parlors, sleeping porches and every city convenience; they are sure to impress you favorably, and are for sale on very easy terms.

Transportation is the best—frequent trains on the Oak Park Elevated—the luxurious passenger service of the Chicago & Northwestern Railway, and the surface lines make River Forest easily accessible.

Further information will be gladly furnished on application.

Every Settler Brings More.

[Private Car Excursion Tuesday, Aug. 31st.]

THE INTEREST OF THE PUBLIC in the Swigart Tract grows greater with each season.

IF TEN MEN GET TOGETHER on a busy street they quickly attract twenty more; on the same principle every new settler in the Swigart Tract brings more. It takes people to build up a country. Every new farm home adds value to the several hundred acres surrounding its four sides. We have sold many thousands of acres this season to people who will make their homes in the Swigart Tract in Manistee, Mason, Lake, and Wexford counties, Michigan, and will improve the land purchased. We are rapidly colonizing this district and every year scores of thousands of dollars' worth of improvements are added in each county. There is real progress here. Does this not sound like the place for you to buy? Then why not get busy and investigate this at once?

COME AND LEARN for yourself the reason why farmers leave Illinois, Indiana, and Iowa and other states of high priced land and come to this tract. See what they are accomplishing on these lands. This is the best time of the year to inspect the various crops.

GET MY BIG BOOK ON MICHIGAN. Crops in the Swigart Tract are fully described in a large 72 page book which shows 115 views of the lands, fields, inland lakes, streams, roads, public institutions, towns, etc. Get this book and learn of our settlers' success in growing clover, corn, oats, rye, vetch, wheat, alfalfa, beans, cow peas, potatoes, and especially fruits and vegetables. They are building silos to increase stock raising. Dairying is getting a strong hold here and pigs and poultry are being raised more and more. Ten acres of a forty acre farm developed into a commercial orchard of apples, cherries, peaches, pears, or plums, if properly attended to, will give a family a permanent income.

WE USUALLY SELL in tracts of 40 acres or more, although we have a few choice 10 acre tracts for fruit and poultry, located on the edge of town. Very low prices and terms of $10 to $50 down on 40 acres and $5 to $10 per month. Who could not buy a piece of land on this basis?

MY NEXT PRIVATE CAR EXCURSION will be Tuesday, Aug. 31st, leaving my Chicago offices at 11:30 a. m. Round trip fare from Chicago to Wellston [my Michigan headquarters], including railroad fare, meals, and lodging, $12.50. Good accommodations for both men and women. Automobiles are furnished free. Join me on this excursion and verify my statements. Offices remain open Monday evening and Saturday afternoon.

A REBUILT CADILLAC

It's a Safe Used Car to Buy

SPECIAL VALUES NOW.

A rebuilt Cadillac is superior to any new car at the same price. They are the truest values on the street. By rebuilt we mean that the cars have been taken entirely apart, each part examined, and if necessary replaced by a new part made at the Cadillac factory, the entire car repainted and refinished like new; all equipment put in first class condition—the whole car, in fact, carefully reconstructed until it is good as new in every detail.

We offer Cadillacs exclusively, as we do not accept other makes in trade. Consequently we are as interested in the performance of these rebuilt cars as we are in new Cadillacs. In actual service values these cars are worth a great deal more than we ask for them, and we usually have a variety of body styles to select from. See them before you buy.

STYLES CHANGE IN MOTOR CARS. THE car of a few years ago is out of date. The new Saxons—the "Six" at $785, the Roadster at $395—are in the latest automobile fashion. They are up to date in design. So why pay $500 to $800 for a car that is heavy, only partly equipped with modern appointments, and two to three years behind the times in design and materials? A PECULIAR condition obtains at present in the real estate market which explains, in part at least, the particuluarly bad showing the market made last week in the way of transactions of any magnitude or importance covering improved properties. As regards the number of transfers filed for record the showing was not a bad one, although somewhat below the corresponding week a year ago, but in the entire week's business there was not a single transaction among those reported closed or filed for record deserving of special notice, save those involving proposed improvement, with the exception, of course, of the developments late in the week in connection with the Union Station company's practical acquirement of the plants of the Commonwealth Edison company and Anheuser-Busch company. An account of this appears in another part of this page. In other words, the week's business in improved properties was, with the exception noted, made up of the most ordinary commonplaces and represented the poorest and most uninteresting showing the market has made in a long time.

To the superficial observer the showing was suggestive of a pronounced and rather discouraging dullness. As a matter of fact there was a good deal doing, but it was in the way of negotiations—a most important function, it may be said, in the real estate business, but one which never makes much of a showing in the published accounts of the market's activities.

Week's Dullness Seldom Equalled.

It is by no means of uncommon occurrence to have the market's activities represented by negotiations instead of completed transactions, but it is not often that this condition obtains to the extent it did last week.

It should be remembered, too that the market is always at its lowest ebb at this season of the year, and this condition undoubtedly has been emphasized this year by several unfavorable factors, such as the continued wet weather, the general business depression, and probably some reaction from a long continued active market in many parts of the city. As a matter of fact Chicago has been enjoying considerable of a real estate boom for several years past, of which fact people as a rule do not seem to be aware.

Reaction Necessary at Times.

The boom has not been of the violent character of some of its predecessors, notably that of the World's fair times, and for that reason the reaction, an inevitable sequence to all unusually active market conditions, is not likely to be of a prolonged or serious character. It is generally conceded that a little slowing up period occasionally to the man or the business which has been going along at a rather swift pace is an altogether necessary and desirable operation if a healthy equilibrium is to be maintained, the only basis upon which man individually or any class of business can hope to prosper.

The downtown district probably has experienced this reaction to a greater extent than most other parts of the city, despite the fact the assessors would have it that values have actually advanced during the year. In the outlying districts subdivision property undoubtedly has been the greatest sufferer, but who is there, when Chicago's marvelous growth and even more promising future is taken into consideration, can doubt that this halting can only be of a temporary character and that the city's business and living needs will soon bring healthy and prosperous conditions again to both of these classes of property?

Good Undertone to Market.

In this connection it is interesting and significant to note that despite the present dullness there is a good undertone to the market, based on the widespread and growing belief among experienced real estate brokers and operators that with the rapidly improving conditions of general business real estate is certain to be stimulated greatly. It is pointed out that the elimination of speculative buying of property during the last year particularly has made decidedly for healthier conditions, and that any period of general liquidation such as followed the World's fair boom is not possible.

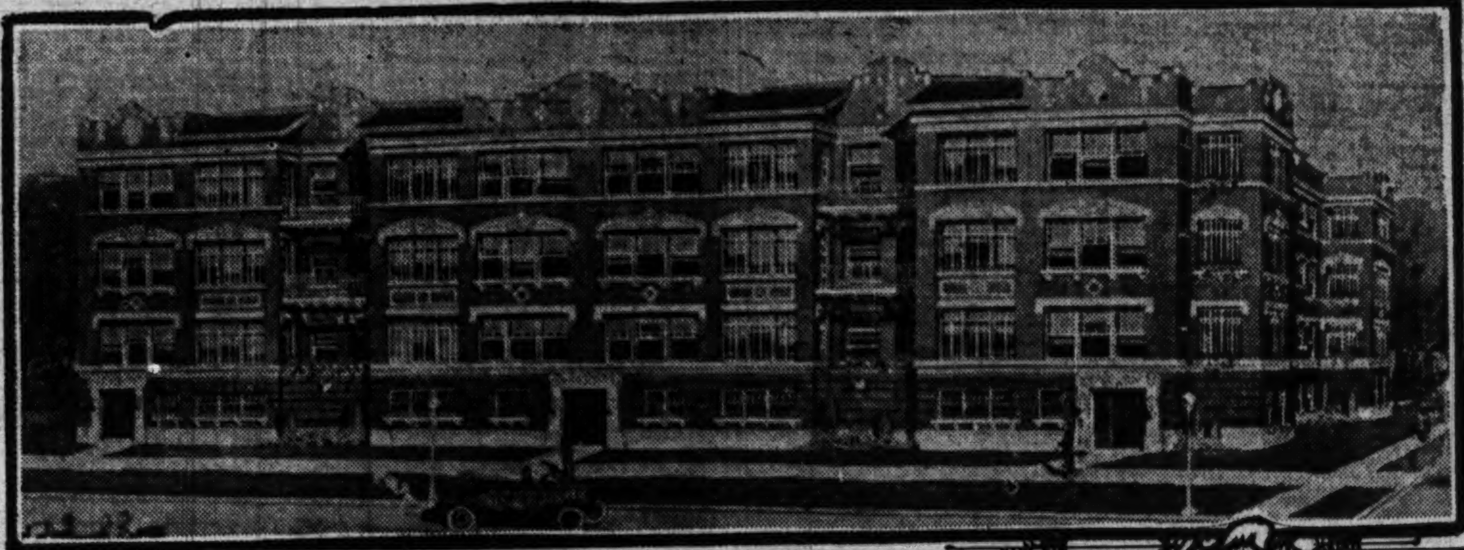
When it is further considered that the great bulk of Chicago realty is not only on an absolutely healthy basis in a value way but that it also is relatively held at much lower figures than obtain in most of the other large cities of the country, the Chicago realty situation has a decidedly rosy prospect.

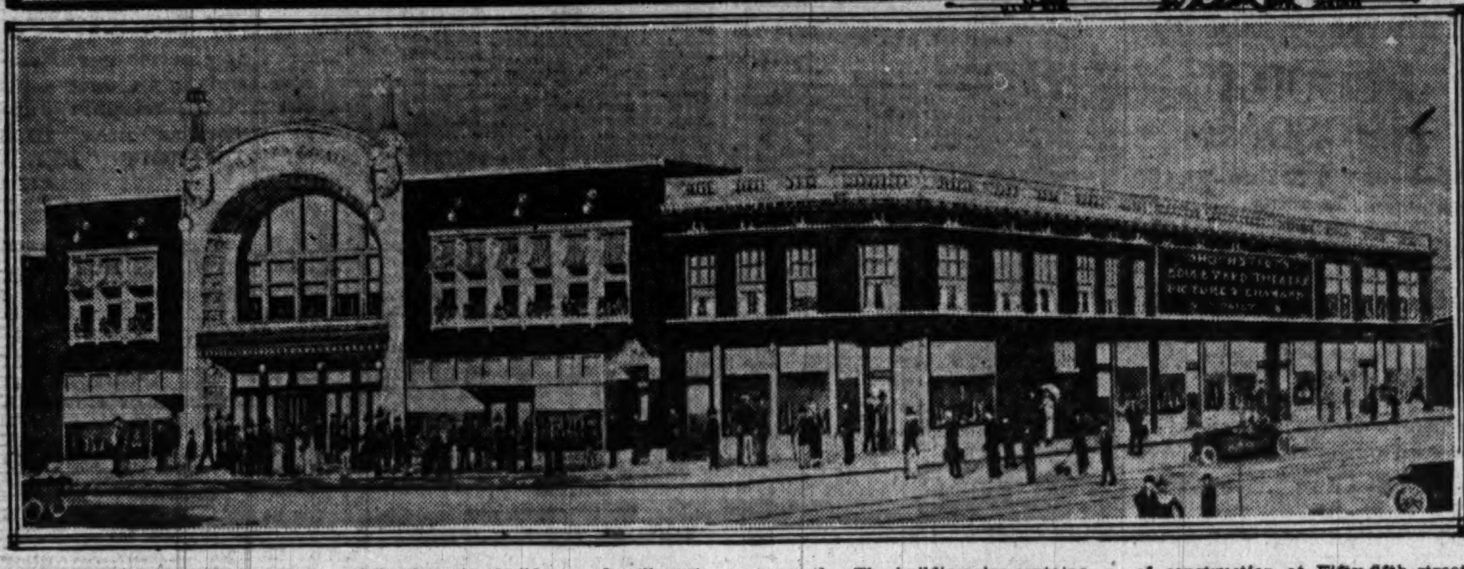
Building Goes on Apace.

Another particularly significant feature of the situation is the vast extent of the building operations throughout the city, last week's showing being of a really impressive character. The most of this is being done on property acquired for that particular purpose. It indicates that the bulk of the property changing hands is being acquired for improvement, and no healthier basis for a sustained market than this can be had.

When all these facts are taken into consideration it becomes apparent that the property owner and broker have no reason for being discouraged because of an apparent temporary slump in the market. As a matter of fact, many brokers report a steadily improving inquiry, despite the season of the year. On many previous occasions it has happened that apparently dull weeks are the precursors of unusually active ones, the fruitage of the dull weeks of negotiations, and it probably is safe to say it will prove true as regards the present situation.

New Model South Side Flats; Southwest Side Theater.





AN exceedingly attractive apartment building is nearing completion at the southeast corner of Hyde Park boulevard and Greenwood avenue, in the most exclusive residential section of Kenwood. It will be known as the Hyde Park Boulevard apartments. It is being erected by Edward M. Bertha, the builder, and will cost about $150,000. It will occupy a lot fronting 164 feet on the boulevard and 100 feet on Greenwood avenue, and will contain twelve apartments of seven and eight rooms, with three baths, sun parlors, some with sleeping porches and open porches. They are expected to rent at from $120 to $160 a month. The building also contains a ballroom and billiard room. Greenebaum Sons Bank and Trust company negotiated a serial bond issue loan of $80,000 on the property, which will be in charge of E. B. Woolf & Co.

The southwest side is to have a theater with a seating capacity of 1,200. It will be in the building now in course of construction at Fifty-fifth street and Ashland avenue. The building, which was designed by Architect Henry L. Newhouse, will cost about $125,000, it is stated, and is expected to be completed by Nov. 1 next. It is being erected for H. Schoenstadt, and in addition to the theater will contain stores on the ground floor and offices

PLENTY OF FUN FOR REALTY MEN

Chicago Board to Forget Business at Outing at Ridgemoor Sept. 9.

The Chicago real estate board is making extensive plans for its usual fall outing, which through the courtesy of William G. Wise, president of the Ridgemoor Country club, will be held Thursday, Sept. 9, on the club grounds, Jefferson Park, where it was held last year.

President Taylor and the committee having the matter in charge, comprising Henry E. Strassheim, chairman, and Henry E. Hedberg, Edward J. Lindahl, Frank G. Saida, and William J. Accola, assisted by Executive Secretary Herbert A. Cole, are planning to make it a more enjoyable occasion, if possible, than the outing of a year ago, which was a great success.

An elaborate program of sports has been arranged, which will include, in addition to golf, tennis, baseball, tug of war, and putting the shot, a series of races for single men, married men, fat men, men over 50 years of age, a fifty yard race open to all, and a three legged race.

There also will be a prize for throwing the baseball and one for quoits. Many of the prizes, all of which, through the courtesy of President Harrison B. Riley, will be contributed by the Chicago Title and Trust company, will be of an attractive character. In addition A. Lincoln Green, president of the Chicago Real Estate Index company, has contributed a sum which will take care of the railroad and bus fares for the entire party.

A special train will leave the Madison street station of the Chicago and Northwestern road at 10 a. m., arriving at Jefferson Park at 10:26, where busses will take the party to the club grounds. A light lunch will be served at 11:30, after which the program of sports will be run off.

Dinner will be served in the evening, the same as last year, and at this time the prizes will be distributed to the winners. The cost of the day's outing will be $2.50 for each member and guest, except to golf players, who will pay the customary fee of $1 for the privilege of the course in addition to a 50 cent caddy fee.

CRITICIZE METHOD OF FIXING VALUES OF REAL ESTATE

The interesting statement is made by the head of a large concern which has charge of many properties in different parts of the city that the most serious error made by the board of assessors in connection with the recent assessment of real estate was in connection with the improvements. The land values fixed by the assessors, he says, are not generally open to much criticism, but the serious mistake is made of estimating the value of the improvements on the basis of what it would cost to replace them, which obviously is wrong. What should be done, he declares, in the case of brick or concrete structures is to allow a depreciation of 2 per cent a year in estimating their present value.

SEEKS WILSON AS SPEAKER AT REALTY BOARD BANQUET

The Cook county real estate board is making an earnest effort to secure President Wilson as the principal speaker at the annual banquet of the board to be held at the Hotel La Salle in December. A committee consisting of President Richard W. Wolfe, Robert M. Sweitzer, Mark Levy, and Frank L. Dean waited on the president last week and urged him to become the board's guest at the time indicated. The president is said to have been exceedingly cordial to the members of the committee and indicated that unless serious matters of state prevented he will try to be present as requested.

COST OF NEW KIMBALL BUILDING TO BE $1,250,000.

The new Kimball building to be erected by the W. W. Kimball company at the southwest corner of Wabash avenue and Jackson boulevard is to cost $1,250,0000, according to the permit taken out during the week. It will be erected in two sections, the first, on which the work of construction has begun, to cover the sixty feet at the corner, the old building of the company formerly occupying that frontage having been wrecked.

It is expected to have the first section completed early in the coming year, after which work will be begun on the remaining section, which also will have a frontage of sixty feet, making the entire building 120 feet front, with a depth of 109 feet. It will be sixteen stories and attic, with three basements, and will be of a particularly attractive style of architecture. The Kimball company will occupy a part of the ground floor as well as parts of the upper floors with their offices, warerooms, and salesrooms. The new Kimball hall will be on the second floor and the upper floors will be rented for music studios and offices. The building was designed by Graham, Burnham & Co.

BUILDING BRISK DESPITE DULL REALTY MARKET

Apartment House Construction Holds Leading Place in New Ventures.

As intimated elsewhere, the one bright spot in the week's market was the really remarkable showing made in a building way. It was represented both by land purchases involving proposed improvements and loans to the same end. The showing served to compensate for the unusually small and uninteresting movement of improved properties. It made a really impressive showing, and while it is the opinion of some that the present activity is likely to result in overbuilding in certain localities and in certain classes of buildings, this view is not shared by those behind these undertakings, and it may be added that the larger proportion of them have had an extensive experience in this field.

While apartment house construction held first place as to volume, there were several new projects of a different character announced, one being a $100,000 storage warehouse in the Stony Island avenue district. Another was a four story mill construction building for the occupancy of the Cole Motor company of Illinois on Indiana avenue, south of Twenty-third street, to cost about $70,000.

Apartment Building Lively.

Apartment house construction continues on a surprisingly large scale, in view of the complaints heard from time to time as to the large number of vacant apartments in various parts of the city. Much also is doing in outside business buildings, particularly those containing theaters.

Two new big apartment building projects are announced in the Wilson avenue district. One is the Clarendon Beach apartments at 827-837 Wilson avenue, between Sheridan road and the Clarendon avenue beach. The building, which is being erected by David H. Jackson, is on a lot fronting 126¼ feet with a depth of 194 feet, and with an additional plot in the rear of 53x111 feet.

The building will be four stories and basement and will have twenty-six suites of two room apartments, each with a bath, and ninety bachelor apartments. There also will be an assembly hall, two general parlors, one billiard room, one restaurant, and two shops. Including the land the enterprise will represent an investment of approximately $300,000. In connection with its construction Mr. Jackson has secured a bond issue loan of $135,000 through Wollenberger & Co.

Store and Flat Building.

William Brinkman is erecting another large building in the same neighborhood. It occupies 63.10x150 feet of ground at the southeast corner of Kenmore and Montrose avenues and is known as the Buena Plaza apartments. It is six stories and basement, and will contain four stores and a café on the ground floor and sixty-five two room apartments on the upper floor. The cost of the building is placed at $180,000. In connection with its construction Wollenberger & Co. have underwritten a serial 6 per cent bond issue loan of $100,000.

The erection of three apartment buildings on Argyle street, sixty-five feet east of Clark street, is involved in the purchase by Patrick J. Craven from Mrs. Kate Bidderman of the 274x145 feet of vacant, south front, for a stated $26,000 subject to $18,500 incumbrance. Two of the buildings will each contain twenty-four apartments of four rooms each and will cost about $72,500 each. Each will occupy 100x145 feet of ground.

Another of Twelve Flats.

The other will be a twelve flat building on 74x145 feet. The apartments will contain five rooms and the building will cost between $30,000 and $40,000. In this connection the Chicago Title and Trust company is trustee in two loans of $55,000, five years, at 6 per cent, covering each of the twenty-four flat buildings, while a loan of $29,750 was secured in connection with the construction of the twelve flat building.

The Empire Fireproof Storage and Van company is to erect a seven story fireproof storage warehouse on Stony Island avenue at Seventy-second place on 145 feet of ground which the company has just purchased from Joseph W. Helmer, consideration not disclosed. The property has Baltimore and Ohio switch track connections, and the building will be of the same type as the company's other warehouses in Kenwood and Hyde Park. John A. Carroll & Bros. represented the purchaser and Peter Foote the seller.

$90,000 Building Loan Made.

Daniel W. Fischell and Charles H. Kusel have given a trust deed to S. W. Straus & Co. to secure a building loan of $90,000, six years, at 6 per cent, in connection with the construction of the Essex building at the southeast corner of Lincoln avenue and Montrose boulevard. It will be three stories high, will occupy a lot 204x153 feet, and will contain seven stores, fifteen flats of four and five rooms, and a 1,000 seat theater. The latter has been leased for ten years at a reported annual rent of $7,200.

Edgar C. Frady, president of the Cole Motor company of Illinois, will erect a four story mill construction building at 2326-28 Indiana avenue, to cost about $70,000, which he has leased to the Cole company for eighteen years at a reported annual rent of $7,500. It will be used for display purposes. In connection with its construction he secured a loan of $50,000, five years, at 6 per cent, from S. W. Straus & Co.

Trust Deed for $55,000.

In connection with the construction of a high grade twenty-four apartment building at the southwest corner of Michigan avenue and Sixty-ninth street, to cost about $120,000, Frederick Becklenberg has given a trust deed to the Chicago Title and Trust company to secure a loan of $55,000, five years, at 6 per cent. The apartments will contain four rooms each and the building will be completed Oct. 1.

A thirty-six apartment building is being erected by Charles F. Henry at 737-47 Cornelia avenue, about 300 feet west of Broadway, which is expected to cost about $125,000. It will be in the court style, will occupy 100x216 feet of ground, and the apartments will contain four and five rooms.

Twenty Bungalows to Go Up.

Another interesting north side building project is that of twenty bungalows being erected by Niels Buck, the builder, on Loyola avenue, just west of Clark street and a block north of Devon avenue. Each of the bungalows will occupy a lot 30x150 feet, will contain five and six rooms, and are expected to sell at from $4,400 to $5,500.

A nonresident, Mrs. Jessie Taylor Brown of Springfield, Ill., is to erect a store and apartment building at the northeast corner of North Clark and Argyle streets on 65x90 feet she has just purchased from James A. Bidderman for $21,000. Mrs. Brown was represented in the transaction by W. S. Hennessey, and Mr. Bidderman was represented by James A. Stepina, president of the American State Bank of Chicago.

The vacant, 120x96 feet at the southeast corner of Sixty-first and Laflin streets has been sold by H. G. Howard & Co. for Benjamin L. Coolidge to William Ill for a reported consideration of $6,000. The purchaser plans to improve with an eighteen apartment building to cost in the neighborhood of $55,000.

Leases and Loans.

There was nothing of an especially noteworthy character in business building leases reported during the week. There apparently is little change in the situation, although it is thought the tendency is toward slightly improved conditions.

In an interesting lease of building space in the North Clark street district Mrs. Charlotte Shaw has leased to Mrs. Tillie La Parle the second and third floors of the Lake View State Bank building, now in course of construction at the northwest corner of North Clark and Fletcher streets, for a period of ten years from Nov. 1 next at a reported term rent of $55,200. It is stated the premises will be used by Mrs. La Parle as bachelor apartments, to be known as the Lake View bachelor apartments. George J. Kappes represented both parties to the transaction.

A noteworthy lease of building space in North Dearborn street, just north of Division street, has been closed by Madden & Co., who have leased for Samuel A. Marx to the C. & S. Cafeteria company the store at 1207-1209 for a term of fifteen years at a reported term rent of $52,200.

Ballard, Rowe & Whitman report the following among other leases closed recently by Lindsay Eldridge of their office.

For the Hamilton club to Nathan Bernhardt, store at 22 South Dearborn street for a term rental of $12,840.

For William G. Kurtz Jr. to Charles Scott, second, third, and fourth floors of building at 330-332 North Clark street, for a term of years at an aggregate rental of $8,000.

For George P. Chiagouris to Morris L. Adler, store at 4 South Dearborn street, in the Hartford building, for a number of years at a term rental of $11,500.

For T. H. Flood company store at 214½ West Madison street at a term rental of $6,200.

Also negotiated for Dollie E. Pope a $15,000 first mortgage secured by the improved property at northeast corner Thirtieth street and Michigan avenue.

Wyllys W. Baird is trustee in several bond issue loans in connection with apartment house construction, made matters of record. One is a loan of $40,000 five years at 6 per cent to Thomas Tagney on the three story apartment building now nearing completion at 2832-34 Cambridge avenue on a lot 100x150 feet of ground, east front, between Surf street and Diversey parkway; also in another loan of $55,000 to Mr. Tagney on the property adjoining, also being improved with a flat building, at 2836-2844 Cambridge avenue, lot 93¼x150 feet, or $95,000 in all.

Mr. Baird is also trustee in a loan of $50,000 five years at 6 per cent to Albert Fuchs, secured by the property at 827-823 Sheridan road, 267 feet west of Halsted street, lot 72x285 feet, with three story store, office, and flat building in course of construction at that point.

Foreman Bros. Banking company are trustees in a loan of $40,000, five years, at 5 per cent, to Ernest H. Knapp, secured by the property at the northeast corner of North avenue and Larrabee street, lot 72x100 feet, with store and flat improvements.

OUTSIDE BUSINESS SITES MAKE A POOR SHOWING.

Outside business property did not make much of a showing, there being no transactions wherein the consideration exceeded $40,000.

Among the most important was the sale of the property at the southeast corner of Adams street and California avenue, lot 60x150 feet, improved with a building containing five stores on the ground floor and fifteen offices and flats on the upper floors, which was bought by S. B. Harris from Herman L. Paesler for a reported consideration of $35,000, subject to an incumbrance of $15,000. The building is stated to have a gross annual rent of $4,200. Seymour Marks represented both the parties to the transaction.

In this connection the eproperty at 912-14 West Taylor street, being 150 feet west of Halsted street, together with the southeast corner of Polk street and Hermitage avenue, have been sold by B. Benson and Sarah Harris to Mr. Paesler for a reported consideration of $28,000, subject to an incumbrance of $14,000. The buildings contain stores and small flats. Henry P. Maun represented both parties to the transaction and will have charge of the properties.

The Old Reliable Motor Truck company has purchased from Mary J. Hollandsworth the property on East Chicago avenue 400 feet east of Lincoln Park boulevard, lot 100x149 feet, with brick improvements, for an indicated consideration of $27,500, subject to an incumbrance of $7,500.

Record has been made of the sale by Robert R. Green to Alfred A. Hallgren of the property at the northwest corner of Sedgwick and Elm streets, lot 50x130 feet, with brick business improvements, for an indicated consideration of $40,000, subject to an incumbrance of $26,000.

BUILDING IN U. S. FALLS OFF.

Building construction in the United States showed a decrease of 13 per cent for the month of July as compared with the same month a year ago. This is not a bad showing considering that the European war did not figure in the situation a year ago. According to Construction News there were permits issued for 22,014 buildings to cost $65,296,516, for July, 1915, in 100 of the leading cities of the country as compared with 22,923 to cost $75,344,215 for July, 1914.

UNION STATION COMPANY BUYS MORE PROPERTY

Acquires Ground in Connection with Big West Side Terminal Plans.

It is stated that the Union Station company has about concluded the purchase of the Harrison street station of the Commonwealth Edison company and the warehouse of the Anheuser-Busch Brewing company in connection with an enlargement of its west side terminal plans. The station company is also said to be negotiating for the acquirement of the two warehouses of Marshall Field & Co. on the west side of the river south of Polk street, the west part of which, it is said, is essential to the new plans of the company.

The Commonwealth Edison company property has a frontage of 200 feet on the Chicago river and the same on Cable street to the west, about 200 feet on West Harrison street, the north line being about 180 feet. The principal building of the plant is four stories high.

The plant was at one time the largest of its kind in the country, but its capacity has been absorbed by the new Northwest plant of the company, as well as the Fisk street station. It is stated the station company practically acquired the property last March. It is said the plant, which has been closed since February, will be dismantled at once.

Brewing Plant Across Street.

The Anheuser-Busch company's plant is just south of this across the street. The building is a two story office and warehouse structure with a north frontage of 150 feet in Harrison street and a west frontage in Cable street of about 280 feet.

The Marshall Field & Co. property, on the west side of the river fronting south in Polk street, comprises practically two plots, one having a frontage of 288 feet on the river, 200 feet south front in Polk street, and 283 feet to the west in Ellsworth street. It is improved with a fourteen story fireproof warehouse, erected a few years ago.

The plans include the block west, the northwest corner of Polk and Ellsworth streets, 98x250 feet, improved with an eight story warehouse erected a number of years ago. The consideration for the properties in question is not known, but it is said it will run into the millions of dollars.

No Other Important Deals.

Outside of this, which it should be said has not yet been officially announced, although it is admitted the negotiations are in progress, there was nothing of special interest in the week's business, the largest transaction reported being the purchase by Ernest J. Magerstadt from William G. Lang and others of a tract of about sixty-five acres at the southeast corner of Lincoln and Devon avenues, extended, for a reported consideration of $45,348. Mr. Magerstadt has no plans as yet in connection with its subdivision and marketing.

There was nothing doing of an important character in apartment house properties, the largest sale reported during the week being that by Marvin A. Farr to Harry W. Dietrich of the property at 4015-17 Grand boulevard, lot 50x150 feet, for an indicated consideration of $34,000.

The high grade six flat building at 5029-31 Drexel avenue was sold by Gustav G. Anders to Violet E. Ackerburg for $30,000, subject to $18,000, the property at Yates avenue and Seventy-second street, valued at $10,000, being given in part payment. Harry Goldstine, Isadore Whiteson, and Draper & Kramer were the brokers.

Six Flat Building Sold.

Gustaf E. Anderson sold to Isabel F. Powers the six flat building on 50x125 feet of ground at 7047-49 Clyde avenue for $26,000, subject to $15,000, the purchaser giving residence property at [illegible] Prairie avenue in part payment. George C. Bour & Co. were the brokers.

The four story apartment building, containing eight flats of eight rooms each, on a lot 50x125 feet, at 552-54 East Thirty-sixth street, has been sold by Susan Nycum to J. Willard Newman for a reported consideration of $28,000, subject to an incumbrance of $20,000. George M. Lyle and George W. Stewart were the brokers in the transaction.
